Lost Art of Shooting Expressed by Author Of Book on Guns

By Walter Rodgers, Author of "Gun Feel"

A few years ago, during the first of our automobile days, I saw an old ox yoke that had been resurrected from a junk pile, and erected over the front gate of a wealthy man's residence. Meantime, way out back of his barn, an old rubber-tired buggy was slowly disintegrating, and falling apart. I thought then—and my idea has been strengthened through the passing years since that it is so typical of the human race to want to dig back at least two generations for their antiques. And, to pay enormous prices for the few relics of a by-gone age that some astute person was able to preserve. Whereas the very items that are today being relegated to the junkpile as obsolete, will within another generation or two be salvaged at a great cost for their sentimental value I haven't been back that way since, but the chances are that great man's heirs have now succeeded in rescuing one delapidated wheel from the old buggy to take its place along with the worm-eaten ox yoke. The above is only an illustration in general interest of my theme. As a gun-lover, I sincerely regret the passing of certain types of arms that were so vital a part in our taming of the West—as we all do—that what few rusty parts of these old arms as can be salvaged, will be dug up within a few more years and proudly displayed as an historical portion of our dearly beloved Southwest. In the minds of many citizens, especially so among the modern sportsmen, these old ranch and trail standbys are already a thing of the past. And only such of us as are familiar with the more or less back country conditions in our great ranching land, know that the types of guns used a half a century ago and the manner in which they were used, are still an integral portion of our western atmosphere. Few modern sportsmen of today have been privileged to witness the handling of these old guns by the men who were raised with them, and who know them best. Many letters from trappers and hunters throughout the nation, and some from our most eminent writers, have poured into the offices of the Colt's Repeating Fire Arms Co., since the announcement recently that the old "Peacemaker", ie, the single action frontier army model—six-shooter would no longer be manufactured. In answer to these protests from the admirers and users of this old favorite of the West, the Colt's company only replies that "for reasons of business conditions, wherein the demand for this particular type of weapon is too small to justify its continuance," brings up the question of how long will the American people continue to wait until an article—whether usable or not—is relegated to the obsolete past, and it's type found only in the hands of a few astute dealers, before they awaken to a realization of its value. Here for an example—we see the passing of an old favorite side arm, simply because a new and modern generation of shooters have sprung up who being without a knowledge of the manner in which this particular gun was intended to be handled have demanded an arm more suitable to their particular needs. Thus—the passing of a certain type of implement through sheer lack of knowledge in how to use it. Out there along the sleepy-looking old Rio Grande, whether in and old faded adobe shack or in a more modern ranch home, you will find the last of the boys who grew up with this old gun of the West. There you'll find men still riding the range with an old single action "hawlgaig" nestled on a lean thigh. And you find old rope-scattered hands, wrinkled with time, and burned brown by many years of sun and wind, that despite their age, and despite the cumbersome idiosyncracies that are claimed for this old smoke-pole, can and do, when the occasion demands, literally make that old gun speak for itself in a manner that would astonish the most highly touted gun experts of our day. These old boys are passing fellows! They are passing along with the old gun that made the West famous. But don't get the idea that because you are armed with a modern automatic, and have scores to your record that testifies to your ability to use it that you could match it up against the now-obsolete old Colt and the man that's standing behind it. He's likely filed the front sight off the old canon long ago. He knows it's "feel" and balance and all he wants is the split second of time that it takes a "brush" it clear of its leather and start it to smoking. "Gun Feel", my friends, is the secret of the law of averages that won our great West from the savage and the lawless. Your ballistical laws, and your precision shooting with guns that are designed for the times, are all to be proud of. We don't shout down anything. But to the lover of guns, who can appreciate the arts that are passing with the men that developed them, I, as a sportsman, and lover of our dear old West, beseech you, get out there, and look those old boys up, and see for yourselves. Then enter your protest against the discontinuance of this fine old emblem of our country, and help us save it for posterity before it has to be "dugged up" out of the ashes of today after tomorrow has become yesterday. PROTECT Young Eyes with BETTER LIGHT for easier seeing

Reading comic books is hard work for young eyes. The strain of trying to see small print on grey paper may result in permanent damage to vision unless there is plenty of good light for easy seeing.

Give your children the abundant glareless light of a modern floor lamp equipped with a white glass diffusing bowl and 100-200-300 watt bulb. And see that they do their reading in a chair close to the light source and not while lying on the floor. Remember—eyes are priceless... good light is cheap!

When you talk about VALVE-IN-HEAD you're talking about

The Power that made Buick Famous

If you want to know what's "the newest thing" in automobile engines, look at the Buick engine pictured here, and you'll see the words "valve-in-head." But it happens that this isn't new with Buick. As a matter of fact, the valve-in-head engine was invented back in 1902—U.S. Patent No. 771095—and immediately, Buick adopted the principle, which became the first in a long string of "Buick firsts." Not everyone went for the idea—then. In spite of the fact that this engine "breathes" more freely—gets fuel in and exhaust gases out more easily—others hung onto their pet ideas. Then came the airplane, with its need for maximum power from every drop of fuel—and every maker of internal combustion airplane engines adopted the valve-in-head principle. And more recently—with the hope that higher-octane fuels will become available—a lot of automotive engine designers are taking a new look at the valve-in-head idea. But just for the record, we'd like to point out that Buick got there first. And ever since, Buick has gone steadily ahead, building up a name as "valve-in-headquarters." Buick engineers reshaped pistons to put Fireball wallop in these engines. They stepped up compression ratios as fast as better fuels came along. So perhaps you'll want to remember, when you hear the term "valve-in-head," that this is the type of power that made Buick famous. If others want to climb on the bandwagon, we say "more power to them"—and no pun is intended. But Buick has been doing more with valve-in-head right from the start. And—we might add—it stands as reason that Buick is not through making this type of engine better and better.

Publisher Advocates Building Tourist Trade in Texas

AUSTIN, Nov. 3 — Texas can have a tourist business amounting to half a billion dollars in 1950.

The figure is estimated by General Ike Ashburn, publisher of Texas Parade magazine, in the November issue. The total was revised upward from a previous one.

Here is how the publisher arrived at his estimate:

According to inquiries made by Texas Highway Department information stations, tourists coming here by automobile from other states left $114,528,000 in Texas last year.

If intrastate automobile equalled that amount, the total may be more than $229,000,000.

Money spent by those who used means of travel other than the automobile certainly would bring the 1948 total over $300,000.

"Concentrated effort on the part of Texas and the investment of some money in exploiting the recreational resources of Texas can bring half a billion tourist dollars here next year, General Ashburn said, adding, "It's a return worth shooting for."

He pointed out that Texas has a coast line of more than 500 miles, a score of great inland lakes, the hills of Central West Texas, the Davis Mountains, Palo Duro Canyon and many other attractions.

"No commonwealth has more to lure the traveler than Texas," he declared.

In addition to the various attractions, tourists can reach them easily, General Ashburn said, because "no state has a finer network of highways or better rail, air and water travel accommodations."

In was shown in a report of the Brookings Institution that travel and recreation are destined to become the nation's biggest industry. It was also shown that the greatest increases are being made by travelers.

el and recreation which, if present trends continue, will sooner or later amount for the expenditure of more money than shelter and home maintenance, attire and personal care, food and nutrition, health and education.

"Indirectly, of course, every citizen of a town benefits from each tourist dollar spent there, and Texans cannot afford to ignore the significance of travel and recreation as factors in the economic development of this state."

Had RHEUMATISM So BAD That He Had To Quit Working

Mr. Jerry Watkins, chief of detectives of the city of Hot Springs, Arkansas, suffered with rheumatism so much and the aches and pains were so terrible that he had to quit working in an effort to regain his health after he had tried everything which his friends recommended.

Detective Watkins is well known and his countless number of friends throughout the country will rejoice to know that he is now healthy, free of rheumatic aches and pains and now working hard.

Mr. Jerry Watkins

"For several years," Mr. Watkins says, "I suffered from a rheumatic condition in the hip and leg. I was very nervous and finally developed migraine headaches. I tried all kinds of medicines but nothing seemed to do me any good. I seemed to be growing worse and worse and was finally advised to take a leave of absence from my work on the police force in an effort to recover my health."

"The pains in my head sometimes were unbearable. I suffered tortures and I was miserable. At night particularly I lay awake and could not sleep."

Mr. Watkins said that someone finally persuaded him to try HADACOL, and after taking the first bottle he said he could see an improvement in his general condition.

"On January 14th of this year," he said, "I felt so much better I decided to go back on the job. The examining doctor told me I was in perfect health. Now I am working from 8 to 12 hours daily and I am able to sleep as any normal person. I have taken six large size bottles of HADACOL, and all my friends know I owe my good health to HADACOL."

Mr. Watkins is one of the many thousands of people who suffered from a deficiency of the B vitamins and the minerals that HADACOL contains and who, therefore, found relief in HADACOL.

It is a well-known scientific fact that the lack of only a small amount of the B vitamins and certain minerals in your system will cause certain bodily disorders such as nutritional neuritis, which causes the aches and pains commonly known as rheumatism, and there is no known cure for the ailment except the administration of the needed vitamins and minerals. This is why people who suffered for years and years never were able to obtain any relief until they took the vitamins and minerals the lack of which was causing the disorders.

HADACOL does not contain only one but has five of the B vitamins and four necessary minerals. It comes to you in liquid form so that it will be easily absorbed by the blood and, therefore, carried to the parts of the body which need them most.

So, it matters not where you live—no matter who you are—if you have tried all the medicines under the sun, you should be fair to yourself and give this wonderful preparation, HADACOL, a trial.

And if your disease is caused by a lack of the B vitamins and minerals which HADACOL contains, then don't go on suffering—don't continue to make your life so miserable. Temporary relief for you is not enough. Take HADACOL.

Sold at all leading drugstores. Trial size only $1.25, but save money; buy the large family economy size, only $3.50. If your druggist does not handle HADACOL, order direct from The Le Blanc Corporation, Lafayette, La., and when the postman brings your package, just pay the amount plus the c.o.d. and postage. If you remit with the order we will pay the postage.

Then, if you don't feel perfectly satisfied after using HADACOL as directed, just return the empty carton and your money will be cheerfully refunded. Nothing could be fairer.—Adv.
