LISTEN TO LUKE

This column has been accused of being pessimistic and never seeing anything bright to smile about. This week we read a column in the West Texas Livestock Weekly under the heading, "Unregistered Bull in a Hotel Lobby", in which the writer identified himself as the editor. Heretofore he was known as "A Contented Cowman." The editor explains that looking at a blank sheet of paper in his typewriter for years while trying to think of something to write about will make a pessimist out of anyone.

Maybe that accounts for my attitude. Since the Democratic convention I have tried to create a more optimistic view on things. Take for instance the Democratic nominee for president. He was a contented president who neither sought nor would consider asking for the nomination even after being urged by his fellow Democrats. He was happy to continue where he was and would not at any time give his permission to have his name up for nomination. It was settled that he was not a candidate and would not consider for a moment the idea that he could have a good chance of being elected if nominated — yet when the time came, when the good word was spread around that he would be named, he had his acceptance speech written and was ready and ready to deliver the speech. In fact there was on hand his hometown, newsmen with connections made for the transmission of his message even before the balloting on his candidacy began.

Now if that isn't optimism then a columnist sure is dumb. It is my belief that certain people are blessed with certain premonitions which enable them to have a much brighter outlook than others but this column seems to see the cloud over the sun and yet fails to see the moisture come from the clouds. Our attitude has probably been that good can only come to the other fellow. Now you see for instance the recent primary election here. I took the attitude that Governor Stevenson — that I sought no political office and expected none — in fact I had not prepared an acceptance speech to be made in case I was elected for any office. Imagine my surprise when, after the votes were counted, I found my name had been written in on two names on the ballot. In one of the counties I ran second, receiving two votes. I would have a tendency to be more optimistic if I had been elected as was Governor Stevenson. But, since I was not prepared to deliver my acceptance speech, I guess it is as well that I was defeated.

This season has given me great opportunities to study the sublimity of my heart because of the increased number of tourists coming through. Much of my time has been spent studying cause and effect and has left little time for concentration on the real issues involved. Playlists continue to be interesting food for thought with the limited time I have on the subject, I seem no nearer the end than last summer. The change of styles and the quantity of material used in various types of suits make the task more difficult.

Some of my customers have reminded me that I have given over seriously to the state of the world and not enough to the more important study to which I assigned myself in years past. I have resolved that since Governor Stevenson did not seek nomination and since he was not to try and get it, we think it isn't wished off on him. We should work to that end and keep him in an optimistic

AMENDMENTS TO BE VOTED ON NOV. 4

Two proposed constitutional amendments are slated for approval or disapproval of the voters of the state of Texas on November 4. The full text of the amendments proposed are to be found elsewhere in this paper.

The first proposal would authorize cities, towns, and villages of this state to provide workmen's compensation insurance, including the right to provide their own insurance risk for all employees; and the legislature shall provide suitable laws for the administration of such insurance in the said municipalities and for payment of the costs, charges and premiums on policies of insurance and the benefits to be paid thereunder.

The second proposal would provide that the legislature should create a state medical education board and also establish a state medical education fund and make adequate appropriations therefor to be used by the state medical education board to provide grants, loans or scholarships to students desiring to study medicine and agreeing to practice in the rural areas of this state. The term "rural areas" as used in this amendment shall be defined by law.

This is a real opportunity for girls between the ages of 18 and 25, unmarried, and wearing a size 12 garment. To obtain models for this wool style show, the San Angelo Board of City Development, is conducting through the other Texas chambers of commerce and colleges, a state-wide contest, similar to the one staged for the Maid of Cotton. The girls will be selected from letters of recommendation, photographs and the completed application form. Eleven finalists will be selected by a New York studio from all applications received. One of these eleven will be "Miss Wool" and the other ten, her pretty maids.

Employers of Mexican Nationals Told To Observe Strict Letter Of New Agreement

Ranchmen who attended the meeting in Sonora last week relative to hiring Mexican laborers were told by U. S. Labor Department officials that they should keep adequate records and comply with the strict letter of the law or they may technically violate the new Mexican labor agreement and be faced with a claim, according to information given by officials at the meeting sponsored by the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers' Association, the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers' Association and officials of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce in Sonora Saturday for the purpose of having the new labor agreement with Mexico explained.

It was pointed out that if you make a contract calling for pay by the hour and then later change to a monthly basis by agreement with the laborer, it is a technical violation of contract and a charge can be filed if the laborer changes his mind after returning to the employment center at the border.

Michael J. Galvin, undersecretary of Labor of Washington, D. C. was the principal speaker. He told the ranchers that the new contract is not perfect — not all the Labor Department would like, but it was the best obtainable due to so many factors involved.

He expressed belief that it is much more workable and equitable to all parties concerned than the old labor agreement.

The new labor contract agreement went into effect in June after numerous meetings in Texas.

All entry forms must be post-marked not later than October 10, 1952.

Florida and Mexico City. It will expire in 1953.

The ranchers were also told that the Department of Labor has a sympathetic understanding of the needs for a specialized type of help which he described as peculiar to their industry and different from those of other individuals or groups who brought out large numbers of workers. They were urged to bring their problems to officials who would help to adjust them.

Some counties in West Texas are on the so-called black-list with Mexico officials in regard to getting laborers. Some insist they have never been advised what occurrence brought this about. Galvin said his department has been active in getting the designation lifted and the new contract will make it more difficult to get a county blacklisted. A specific charge must be made and verified and the accused will have a chance to make a defense. Galvin expressed hope that Texas citizens will all work to avoid these happenings.

During a question and answer session presided over by E. L. Buelow of San Angelo, vice president of WTCC District 9, many ranchers presented problems confronting them in connection with hiring Mexican labor and processing it at employment centers along the border.

Ranchers were told that if they have Mexicans whose year of service has not expired, they can get 10 per cent of this help extended for an additional six months if the laborer is willing.

John Holland, stationed with the Immigration Service in the Rio Grande Valley, said in the recent roundup of about 2,900 "wetbacks", about 2,000 of them were at work on one farm picking cotton. During last year approximately 266,000 "wetbacks" were sent home across the Rio Grande after illegal entry.

When a Mexican has worked here and his contract time has expired he must return to Mexico and take his place in the regular line — which makes it difficult for his old employer to get him back. Galvin stated that the department recognized this procedure as economically unsound but that it was part of the law under the new labor contract.

If a laborer refuses to work or "skips" the employer is not held responsible for his contract if he immediately notifies officials.

When a man goes to the processing center to get help, he has the right to talk with the laborers and turn down anyone he does not think will be suitable for his work. The laborer also has the right to decline to work for any particular per if for any reason he does not like the work or place.

When a rancher makes application for help, he must post $15 for each man wanted. This is not returned if he gets the number of laborers he desires. It was estimated it will require about 10 days to get help after his application for help has been certified.

Penrose Metcalfe of San Angelo, first vice president of the TS&GRA, said he had found Department of Labor officials and the officials in Mexico with whom the committee worked courteous and cooperative in trying to work out problems for the best interest of all concerned.

John T. Williams, president of the TS&GRA and S. L. Stumberg, who served on the labor committee hearings in Florida and Texas, attended the meeting in Sonora last Saturday.

John T. Williams stated that he, too, was appreciative of the cooperation of the officials from the Labor Department and Mexican government in their efforts to work out a satisfactory agreement and added that he thought the present agreement was much more satisfactory than any they had had previously.

REAL ESTATE TITLES EXPLAINED

How may a purchaser determine whether the title he is receiving in a real estate transaction is good? Although at first glance there may appear to be more than one alternative method, we shall see in this and later columns that all roads of complete title security lead to a lawyer chosen by the prospective buyer to represent his interests.

In a previous column it was said that the Contract of Sale should state the Quality of Title to be conveyed to the purchaser. If the contract does not so state, then the seller may be obligated to sell — and the purchaser bound to buy, only whatever title the seller happens to possess, which may actually be quite defective. This may be true in spite of the fact that the seller is in possession, has a deed to the property, has been paying taxes, etc.

A real estate title is a claim of ownership or right to land and to the improvements, such as houses and other structures, located thereon. It may be partial or complete, as determined by the numerous facts in such case. If it is complete and superior to any other person's claim — if you can prove your right thereto against all the world, it is a good title. If, in addition, the evidence of your claim of ownership is contained in the proper public records, it is a good record title. Ordinarily, only a good record title is considered salable, being sometimes referred to as a good marketable title.

When you buy a house, you want a title which is good, so that you and your heirs will not be troubled while enjoying the use of the premises. You also want that title to be marketable, in order that it can be sold when you are ready to sell — without the expense of perfecting title before your buyer will complete his purchase.

Having made certain that your contract of sale indicates the exact nature of the title to be conveyed to you by the seller, how do you go about assuring yourself that you will receive the specified quality of title? People have varied ideas about this matter.

Some consider themselves safe when they gain possession of an Abstract of Title or a General Warranty Deed. We have previously seen that an Abstract is merely an outline of public records on the tract of land — a history of the title — which anyone may purchase, regardless of ownership. Possession of an Abstract does not indicate that you own the land described therein, any more than possession of a History of Texas means that you own the entire state.

A General Warranty Deed from a responsible seller is comforting to have, but it is a poor substitute for a careful title examination. True, it entitles you to sue the seller for damages caused by defects in the title. But serious title defects may not come to light until long after the seller is dead, has moved to an unknown address or is bankrupt.

Safer procedures includes your attorney's examination of the Abstract tendered by the seller, and the purchase of a Title Insurance Policy which names you as the insured. This latter method also involves an attorney's examination which must be paid by the buyer or seller, as specified in the contract of sale, along with premium charges and other items. Both of these routes will be further explained in columns to follow.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Well, What Do You Know?

Do you believe in a bunch of old tales about lightning — about how it's attracted by cats or the warmth of cattle... how it never strikes in the same place twice... or how it's liable to turn milk sour? Lots of people often do—but they're wrong.

Dad Hawkins inspired this column today. He's really studied up on lightning since his own cow barn was struck that time.

"Trouble is, most of us don't know half enough about the subject," Dad says. "And about half of what we do know is false!"

From where I sit, Dad's statement applies to a lot of things besides lightning. Too many people think they know their neighbor's wrong when he votes for his candidate instead of theirs. Some people even resent our right to enjoy a friendly glass of beer if and when we choose. Opinions based on misinformation and prejudice, instead of being "grounded" on true facts can cause more damage than lightning ever did.

'Hong Kong', Colorful Celluloid Adventure, Packs Real Wallop

In "Hong Kong" which shows Sunday and Monday at the Princess Theatre, plenty of fast-moving action and colorful background will be viewed by movie-goers. The story deals tersely and imaginatively with a violent episode in the world's number one trouble spot.

Starring Ronald Regan and Rhonda Fleming, this production uses present-day China as the framework for a forceful tale of a callous soldier of fortune and a beautiful girl who come together as the Communist armies sweep toward the sea. Desperately racing toward the sanctuary of Hong Kong, they chaperone a young Chinese boy whose father has just been killed in an air attack.

With Regan cast as the fortune hunter, and Miss Fleming portraying the girl, the swiftly-moving drama follows the consequences when the adventurer steals a valuable idol that the boy is carrying. A conniving fence in Hong Kong soon sets a band of murderous hoodlums on the trail of the statuette, then has the boy kidnapped when his henchmen miff the deal.

At this point, Regan's better instincts come to the fore and he tours the byways and backstreets of the Orient's most colorful city in search of the boy. This eventuality leads to a showdown fight aboard a junk in Hong Kong's harbor, and the finale packs a wallop surprise. A better-than-huke warm romance is parlayed with the action and suspense, and the film also deals out a telling study of an unprincipled fortune-hunter mellowing under the dual influence of a beautiful girl and a winning youngster.

'TRIP TO CANADA' DETAILS RELATED

by Jack Savage

About two months before school was out, Rev. Olaf Hoggard called a meeting in the high school auditorium to disclose his plans for a group of boys and men to make a trip to Alaska. Later this was changed to Canada. To make this trip possible, we would have to raise money for food and gasoline. He had already planned approximately how many chickens would have to be sold to raise the money and the raising of chickens was decided upon as the fund-raising means. From the start, many were enthusiastic over the proposed adventure.

To raise chickens successfully, proper means and methods had to be used. Therefore, we built several substantial chicken batteries and coops. Some of the boys, like myself, already had the necessary facilities. Many civic-minded citizens put up money in order that we might progress with our project.

We all had a little trouble with our chickens — some of them even died on us — but it was soon time to begin dressing them. By this time the number of boys planning to go had reduced for various reasons. Those remaining, worked for several weeks dressing and sacking chickens for immediate sale or for freezing. We also gave two barbecued chicken dinners to raise additional money. Various members of the community worked to make this possible.

It was about this time that Rev. Hoggard got his new station wagon in which we would make the trip.

Then came the time for our departure. Bill Goldwire, one of the members of the party, had been kind enough to volunteer the use of his pick-up. He did much work to prepare his vehicle for the trip; for example, water-proof top with side curtains in which could be stored luggage and clothing; water kegs, and many other conveniences for daily use as well as to meet any emergency. A two-wheeled trailer with a chuck box and bed roll space furnished by Rufus Ross of Dryden was also attached to the pick-up. In this handy chuck box were our eating utensils and cooking equipment. A large ice-box was also in the trailer. Many interested persons contributed their equipment to make our trip safe and comfortable.

We left Sanderson at 6 a. m. on July 17. Members of our party consisted of Rev. Hoggard, Simon Shaw, Bill Goldwire, Buck Dorsey of Big Lake, James Clark, Kenneth Stutes, Jerry McKelvey, Stanley Sullivan and I. Mr. Shaw acted as head-cook during the entire trip, and because of his ability to cook, we had many fine meals. Proof of his excellent cooking was that many put on weight during the trip and none was lost.

Our first day's drive was uneventful. We covered 542 miles and camped on the Rio Grande north of Sante Fe, N. M. Our first meal consisted of potatoes, beans, welners and milk. After supper some of the boys went in swimming.

The second day we got up early for breakfast and covered 407 miles, passing through Colorado Springs, and Denver. We camped near a stream that night and took baths. We had to put up canvas to turn away rain that night and "fell in" for a good night's sleep. (to be continued)

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Corder returned home Wednesday from Roswell where they had visited with their daughter, Mrs. Hal Rowlett, Jr., and family.
