WOODWORK BY DALTON

I SOLD a woman a piece of cardboard last week. I think it was rather amusing, and she almost got it for nothing. It was supposed to cost 15 cents, and I almost got a quarter for it. I also nearly got paid six cents for it. Here's the way the transaction went:

This woman came in and said her daughter asked her to buy a piece of poster board 24 by 24. I explained that we didn't have it in that size; our poster board was 28 by 22. "Well, maybe that's what she meant—that ought to be close enough, anyway," the woman said. So I got her a piece of cardboard. She asked me how much, and I said 15 cents, and she handed me a half dollar.

I searched around the place and could find only a quarter in change, which I handed her while I searched for more change.

"Here, I think I've got the right change," she said, fumbling in her purse. She laid down two coins on the cardboard and I handed her the half dollar back. "That doesn't look like 15 cents to me," I laughed, pointing to the coins she had laid down, a nickel and a penny. "Oh, for heaven's sake," she exclaimed. She fumbled a moment more, then admitted that what she thought was a dime must have been that penny. So she just picked up the six cents and returned them to the purse.

"Well, here," she said, handing me back the quarter I had given her earlier. "You can just pay me the dime later." I was pretty mixed up by then myself, but I felt like I was coming out on the short end, even though by that time I hated to mention it.

"I tell you what," I said, "I'm willing to just call it even now, if you are."

She didn't act like she thought much of the idea, since she figured I was trying to charge a quarter for one 15-cent sheet of cardboard, but she left.

I thought about it awhile, but I ran out of fingers and toes, and I don't know enough about this new math system to work it out that way, so I just shrugged and started on something else.

About that time she came back and said hesitantly:

"Say, did I ever pay you for that cardboard?" This was a simple enough question, but it sent all the office help into hysterics, as they had witnessed the whole deal.

Finally we agreed that we both were pretty confused, and she went next door and got change for her half dollar and then came back and paid me 15 cents.

It is management like this to which I attribute all that I am today.

IF YOU are one of more than a thousand persons who will receive a copy of this newspaper this week although you don't subscribe, you can thank Sudan Variety Store, who paid for the extra distribution because of a big sale they are starting and which they are advertising in the paper.

I pointed out to the owners that they are doing a big favor for the other advertisers, too, especially all those politicians. The least they could do in return is go in

Tennis Pairings Made

Seven divisions received a sufficient number of entries to qualify for setting up brackets in the fifth annual Sudan Jaycees Tennis Tournament this weekend.

Divisions which definitely will be held include men's singles (13 entries), men's doubles (8 entries), men's novice singles (9) and doubles (4 teams), high school girls singles (4), junior boys singles (grades 7-8-9, with 5 entries), mixed doubles (8 teams), women's singles (4).

Divisions in which entries were received, but not enough to warrant having a playoff (four entries required) included boys doubles in high school and juniors, high school and grade school boys—singles, high school girls doubles and women's doubles. The tennis committee has extended the deadline in some of these divisions to see if they can be filled.

Players may arrange their own time for matches, but are asked to play them off as quickly as possible starting Thursday (today). Plans are to finish the matches by Sunday afternoon if possible, but with the number of matches to be played, some divisions may have to be completed next week, especially if bad weather interferes. Consolation rounds will be played in all divisions with as many as eight entries.

First round matches will pair the following: Men's Doubles—Alsup - Stewart v. Whiteaker-Mudgett; Wood-Rasco vs. Carpenter-Vernon; Hebebrand-Mullers v. Van Ness-Newman; Pickett-Chester vs. Nichols-Minyard. Driver of the picturesque rig was Jack Ratliff, who said he was 73 years old, and who has been traveling in 48 states in the same covered wagon for the last 24 years. The top shows how Ratliff's goat and chicken side standing up on the back of the mules pulling the wagon. Broadcast Marks 25th Year

STUDIO 8

LINCOLN, NEBRASKA — A milestone celebrating a quarter of a century of continuous broadcasting by BACK TO THE BIBLE will be observed here May 1-2. International significance will be given to this Silver Anniversary event on the Broadcast of Friday, May 1 when a special commemorative program will be heard over the global BTTB radio network.

Dr. Theodore H. Epp, under whose direction the organization functions, founded the parent Good News Broadcasting Association in 1939, a not-for-profit religious organization headquartered in Lincoln, Nebraska. The Association is interdenominational, non-sectarian in character. Its central mission is devoted to a four-pronged effort of Evangelism, Missions, Literature, and Bible Correspondence Courses.

Additionally, powerful shortwave stations transmitting from South America, Liberia, Monaco, Bonaire, Manila, Luxembourg and Germany also carry the program giving international English language coverage in almost every point on the globe.

Moreover, a French language program is re-broadcast over a network of some 10 stations in France, Africa, Quebec, Canada and Luxembourg. Regular commercial rates are paid for station time charges.

This Broadcast expense during the 25-year span have exceeded $25,000,000.

Visitors from throughout the land are expected in Lincoln for the Anniversary week end commencing with a banquet on May 1 in the city's Pershing Auditorium. In addition to an open house on Saturday, the evening will feature a public service with veteran radio missionary statesman Dr. Clarence W. Jones and singing evangelist J. Stratton Shufelt. As a fitting finale to the anniversary week end observance, the BTTB choir will render a premier performance on Sunday afternoon of Eugene Clark's latest missionary cantata, "Let the Earth Hear His Voice."

Over the past 25 years the BTTB Broadcast has grown from one 15 minute program over KFOR, Lincoln, to a six-half-hour-a-week production on over 300 selected stations. This special network delivers virtually 100% coverage in the U.S., Canada, Australia, the Philippines, and the Caribbean area.

Serving the vast program of the Association requires a staff of some 300 employees in Lincoln, plus 70 offices located in foreign offices maintained in England, Jamaica, Manila, Guyana, Australia, France and Canada.

"Manufacturing In Texas"

Heavy military demands—90,000 troops, a 2,000 mile frontier and coastline to guard—plus reduced imports, caused fast expansion of Texas industry. Measured alongside present-day factories, the numerous plants and shops in Confederate Texas would be insignificant. But considered in the light of 100 years ago when transportation was geared to animal-drawn vehicles and heavy machinery almost nonexistent, the accomplishments rank with the manner in which Texans have met the production demands of subsequent wars.

The expansion and conversion by private individuals of small plants, blacksmith shops, flour mills, foundries and textile concerns led the way. Early in the war, the legislature created the Texas Military Board, with the governor as chairman, empowered to encourage manufacturing and to acquire necessary military equipment and supplies. Funds could be used to build, buy, contract for the output of or to subsidize by cash or land grants factories and shops. The Confederate government also exercised these powers plus the right to take over operation of essential concerns. Military exemptions and the assignment of troops to work in plants worked to increase production.

Women, children and slaves turned the shops of large plantations to the output of cloth, wagons, harnesses and cured meat. In homes, contract work was done to spin and sew to outfit soldiers.

The cotton and woolen cloth mill in the state penitentiary at Huntsville became the main source of finished fabrics in the Confederate Southwest. In a two-year period, 1,712,328 yards of cloth was produced as were uniforms, yarn, osaburgs, flour sacks and tent covers. Sales supported not only the 300 inmates but outside labor was hired and for a short time prisoners of war helped. Priorities had to be set up, with state troops, Texas soldiers in Southern service, families of servicemen and general consumers participating. Speculators were shunned.

The old land-office building on capital square in Austin was converted into a cartridge factory where women turned out some 14,000 cartridges each day. Machinery in the same place made 250 firing caps per hour. A state foundry was also established in Austin, and cannon tubes were bored and cast out of Mexican copper. At Fredericksburg, two German mechanics used homemade machines to produce firing caps. The salt-peter used came from nearby bat caves, while necessary quicksilver was brought through the blockade at Galveston.

Foundries produced iron goods for cannon balls, skillets, pots, plows and plates for guns at Hempstead, Tyler, Gilmer, Jefferson, Palestine, Rusk, Houston and San Antonio. Guns, rifles and gunpowder were made in Bastrop, Columbia, Lancaster, Tyler, Anderson, Rusk, Houston, San Antonio, Burnet and Waxahachie.

The most famous rifles made were the "Mississippi Rifles" made in Rusk and the "Tyler Rifles" produced in the Confederate Ordnance Works in Tyler.

Earthenware jugs, dishes and cooking utensils were furnished the military from Athens, Henderson, Jefferson and Gilmer. Hats, caps, boots and shoes were made in Gilmer and a number of other places.

Three miles east of Tyler, on "Headache Springs," medicines were compounded. "Medicinal Whiskey" was distilled near Temple after most of the other distilleries in the state were closed to conserve grain. Glauber salt and copperas were processed in Grayson County for medical use.

Transportation equipment production shops were set up to make and repair ambulances, wagons, harnesses and saddles in Bonham, Waco, Dallas, Mount Pleasant, Tyler, Hempstead and Paris. Because so many of the state's mechanics worked in these shops, they were also used as centers for the repair of worn or damaged agricultural machinery.

In a dozen houses, workers fabricated wagon and harness repair parts.

Near Jefferson, a military meat packing works slaughtered contract beefs, rendered the by-products and preserved the meat for shipment in 300 pound kegs of brine. A packing plant was also operated in Matagora.

A tannery in Seguin made leather goods with a never-before-used tanner made from the bark of mesquite trees.

Printer's ink and paper were made in Houston in limited quantities. A plant was chartered in New Braunfels to make paper from corn shucks, but the war ended before the machinery arrived from Europe.

Cloth was turned out by textile mills in New Braunfels and Hempstead. Cotton cards, used to prepare cotton for spinning, were made near Georgetown.

Salt works produced salt from wells, lakes and creeks near Albany, Jacksonville, Palestine, Lampasas, Llano, Corpus Christi, Tyler, Matagorda, Grand Saline, Edinburg and Raymondville. Several additional works were located from time to time along coastal inlets.

Salt was the only known way to preserve meat at the time and was also in great demand for the large number of horses and mules used by the cavalry, artillery and quartermaster. It was used to preserve hides for making shoes, harnesses and saddles. When the government levied a meat tax on farmers, the demand for salt increased. These works supplied the military and most of the civilian uses in Texas.

Scripture: St. Luke 24: 49; St. Matthew 10: 29-39; Acts 1: 1-11.

"I wonder what it was like unto, those days in the upper room?"

As I listened to our Pastor when he read the preface to The Acts recently, the above stated question came into my mind. So, what were the days before Pentecost like? Jesus had arisen from the dead, and they had watched Him ascend "in a cloud", hearing the promise of His coming back again. Then, in obedience to Christ's command, they returned to Jerusalem to wait in the upper room for the promised "power from on high".

As they waited, about 120 persons, they prayed: All of them prayed "In one accord". Then Peter stood up to remind them that they must fulfill the scripture and choose one, according to old Testament prophecy, to take the place of Judas Iscariot. So they chose two men, then prayed for the Lord to guide them in choosing the right one. They chose Matthias and he was numbered with the eleven disciples.

So far as we know, the 120 did nothing else during those days except wait and pray, looking and listening for the coming of the Holy Ghost which Jesus had promised. Nobody got discouraged and left; nobody argued that they had waited, nothing happening, "so lets go home". Jesus had promised, so they simply waited for the Holy Ghost to come, knowing by their faith in Jesus that He would come.

How strong is your faith in Jesus? Can you, without an inkling of how or when God will keep His word to answer your prayer, yet know that He will because He said that He would? Can you wait on the Lord and pray, expectantly?

Now these who waited and prayed did not know that, when the Holy Ghost came and "filled them", they would speak with other tongues, in different languages. They did not know that the "crowd" would be amazed, in doubt or mocking. But every man present in the crowd heard the wonderful works of God spoken in his own tongue. Then how did the disciples feel? They felt free, and almost wildly happy, for the amazing evidence of Christ present again with them in the Holy Ghost. The almighty power was theirs, for their believing and their obedience is witnessing.

So, Christian, have you quenched the Spirit for fear of looking foolish to the crowd? Don't do it, for the crowd needs to be amazed. Do you know the joy and delight of the power and Presence and work of the Holy Ghost? Are you afraid you will "look silly", if you do or say what you think the Lord wants? Say it, do it, feel free, believing, in God's promise to be with you.

How to witness? Wait and pray — then act as the Spirit of God gives you utterance. Praise God, and could be someone will catch a glimpse of Jesus in you or in me, and be saved! But this is my witness to you and my testimony for Jesus Christ.

"Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Jesus! He is the One, and He said "I am the doors: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved. I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."

George Fin, an Ohio bait processor, says post mortems prove bluegill will eat anything that moves or fits into its mouth.

"Furthermore," says Finn, "the bluegill is hungry all the time and you don't have to wait for a special lunch period to feed him."

The bluegill, in this instance, takes in all the perch family.

Most of us call 'em perch, but others like the name of bluegill. And still others call 'em bream. But by whatever name, once for once, there is nothing quite as rewarding for an afternoon of fast and furious pleasure than taking bluegill.

Mainly, the bluegill is a worm fish. Perhaps more of them have been caught on worms than all other baits combined. We used to dig worms in the back yard. Now we buy them put up in ice cream containers.

Some fishermen string a whole worm on their hook. Others break the worm into bits and put only a small part on a small hook to be sure and catch the bait stealers.

Now, thanks to scientific breakthroughs, there are methods of preserving natural baits, such as garden worms, crickets, grasshoppers, grubs and grass shrimp. All these are ideal bluegill baits and will help you catch a basket full with very little trouble.

Biologists encourage bluegill fishing. They urge you to take as many as possible and not throw any back. Reason is impoundment soon can become overrun with them.

Although most of us picture bluegill fishing with a cane pole and a small float, there are other methods that will prove as much or more fun.

For instance, there is nothing better than a flyrod for catching them, especially if you are working from a boat. A light flyrod or ultra-light spincasting outfit is ideal for tossing the various baits close to the rock banks, which seem to be the best spot to catch bluegill.

I know two fellows in Austin who sometimes forget about their big bass fishing and take out after these fighting bluegills with casting equipment. They fish a great deal on Lake Marble Falls, where there are high rock banks. By casting directly against the rock banks and jiggling the lure a time or two after it hits the water, perch will attack it.

I've seen them bring in perch smaller than the lure they cast. During the course of an afternoon they'll fill a wire basket with bluegill the size of your hand. And who can deny these are not good eaters!

Others using spin or casting equipment carry along several of those little plastic bubbles. They are fastened to the line about two feet from the end.

On the terminal there will be one or two small hooks. These can be baited with worms or some of those preserved baits. By casting the bubble near the rocky shore, the bait is sure to attract fish.

Sometimes when fishing in this manner for bluegills you will come up with a crappie or even a big bass.

This type of fishing is especially good on short float trips down some of the streams of Texas. You get a mixed creel on trips of this kind. Many of them however, are various subspecies of perch. Sometimes you get those big goggle-eyed ones.

And don't sell perch short as to their eating qualities. Just scale 'em, clean 'em and toss them into a skillet with plenty of hot grease and let them cook until they are thoroughly brown. This way, on the smaller fish at least, you are not bothered with the bones. You chew them along with the meat.

On the larger ones you can peel off the very delicious flesh and throw the bones away.

Perch fishing isn't just for the kiddies. Grownups find it equally as enjoyable.

Mr. and Mrs. Donnie Cowart visited Sunday in the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Cowart in Lubbock.

Coming In LIFE
Happy Birthday, Will!

William Shakespeare would have been 400 years old this April 23rd, a fact any schoolboy knows. But, did you know that Shakespeare originally became a playwright because he was considered just a "mediocre" actor? By the time he was 28, he had become England's leading dramatist, leaving us a legacy that includes "Romeo and Juliet," "Hamlet" and "Macbeth" among the 152 sonnets and 45 plays he wrote. Today, four centuries later, scholars are still debating whether or not Shakespeare actually wrote those masterpieces.

In celebration of the Bard's birthday, the April 24th issue of LIFE will devote a special section to Shakespeare. Featured will be 10 pages of color paintings of the world of his time, plus an essay on "Hamlet" and what the play holds for modern man, and an absorbing roundup of the arguments about who really wrote Shakespeare's plays.

Official Memorandum
By JOHN CONNALLY
Governor of Texas

AUSTIN, TEXAS

GREETINGS:

The right to vote is a treasured instrument of a democracy, and a solemn responsibility on the part of every American citizen of voting age. Unfortunately, it is a responsibility that is often treated lightly, for many eligible voters consistently fail to exercise their right and duty to cast their ballot.

Texans will vote in the primary elections on May 2 to select their nominees for public office at the local, state and national level.

On the same day the party precinct conventions will be held to select delegates to the county conventions and to consider resolutions affecting state and national policy. These conventions are the genesis of our entire political and governmental structure.

It is vital to our state and nation that as many persons as possible participate in these essential functions of representative government.

THEREFORE, I, as Governor of Texas, do hereby designate Saturday, May 2, 1964, as

and urge all eligible voters to participate in the primary election and precinct conventions of the party of their choosing.

In official recognition whereof, I hereby affix my signature this 23rd day of April, 1964.
