IF, LIKE ME, you always figured people took baths to get clean, you're way behind time.

Getting clean is only a part of the desired aim of bathing, according to New York writer Donna Evans, reporting on a recent survey of the relative merits of showers and bathtubs (as used by men; she wasn't interested in women's bathing habits).

Those men—a small percentage, by the way—who prefer to take baths in a tub say the tub has therapeutic value. In English, that means you soak in the sud and muscles made sore by playing golf or pushing a heavy pencil across a sheet of paper all day will loosen up and not be so sore.

They sure got that right. When I soak in the tub, my muscles loosen up so that I can't climb out of the bathtub. And when I get out, I can't walk.

The survey showed that 62.5 percent of the men questioned take only showers, 12.5 percent take both showers and baths, and 12.5 percent take only tub baths.

Personally, I'm with the majority in preferring showers. In a discussion of this very topic not long ago, I commented that "I haven't taken a bath in years." Sure enough, some smart aleck wrinkled up his nose and nodded as if his worst suspicions were confirmed.

One father of four boys pointed out that when each son reaches the age he can shower "Just Like Dad" it is as much a sign of manhood as the first long pants or first shave. Cheaper, too.

The survey didn't mention what percentage of the tub-floppers and shower addicts were Methodist and Baptist.

Tubs have an advantage in mental relaxation as well as physical, it must be admitted. Our current society allows us little time for contemplation and relaxation.

Actually, that is the very reason why I don't ordinarily take baths in a tub. Usually when I start my bath, I have about 9 minutes to bathe, shave, dress and get some place or other. Taking a tub bath would be a fatal delay. I never get anywhere on time as it is.

"RICHARD POWELL's softball team won a game the other night, thanks to the stellar play of Richard Powell. The score was not reported, but further details can be obtained from Richard Powell, who pitches on his team because he owns the bats." How's that for a softball story, Richard?

Actually the above was written to get back at Richard, who has been after me constantly to report news about the softball teams which play on Mondays and Thursday at the Little League Park. Richard didn't want his name in the paper; he just wanted some publicity about the softball schedule. Four teams of local men, and two women's teams have been playing, and having a lot of fun.

I sort of belong to Scraggy Wingo's team, and while we haven't won many games, it must be remembered that we are in the middle of a big rebuilding program and presently are stressing sportsmanship like mad.

We could do better if Richard's bench didn't cheat so.

LABANON VISITOR—Mr. and Mrs. Joe Salem are shown with Antoine Bakhos, center, Lebanese government official who visited them last week. Salem is a first cousin to Bakhos, who was interested in the newspaper here. Bakhos' father was a newspaper publisher in Beirut. (Beacon-News Photo)

Lebanese Official Visits Cousin Here

By DALTON WOOD
One of the highest-ranking officials of the Lebanese Government had a pleasant visit in Sudan last week, according to Joe T. Salem.

The visitor in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Salem was Antoine Khalil Bakhos, minister of the interior for Lebanon, and a first cousin to Salem. He found the people here "friendly, accommodating and gracious," according to Joe Salem. Bakhos explained that his job involves decisions on appropriations for all the towns in Lebanon, and that he is responsible directly to the Director-General, Cheik Chafic Kahzen, most powerful government official in Lebanon, according to Joe Salem.

In fact, everything Bakhos said in an interview for the Sudan Beacon-News was according to Joe Salem, because Bakhos speaks practically no English.

Salem, who was born in Lebanon, but who left the country to come to Texas as a small boy in 1912, smilingly said he wouldn't vouch for the authenticity of his interpretations. "My Arabic is pretty rusty," he admitted.

Bakhos was making his first visit to America, although he has traveled widely in Europe. It was not a government-business trip, but a sightseeing trip of his own, and the Salems said they were honored that Bakhos "came to Texas just to see us."

Prior to his U. S. visit, Bakhos stopped in Spain and France. In the U. S., he was astonished by New York, and found the whole country "above expectations," remarking that "America is greater and more beautiful than the others."

Arriving in New York July 16, Bakhos was met by Salem's sister, Mrs. J. M. Haddad of Tyler. Mrs. Haddad, an artist who is often in New York, accompanied the Lebanese official to the World's Fair, United Nations headquarters, and other attractions.

After his New York trip, Bakhos was met in Dallas by the Salems. Fanning himself with a handkerchief as he spoke, Bakhos said the temperature in Beirut, where he works, is about the same as here, but pointed out that in 30 minutes from Beirut, a city of 800,000, a person may be high in the mountains, where it is cool.

He displayed interest in a copy of the Sudan Beacon-News, remarking that Beirut itself has "a minimum of 35 different newspapers," at least some of which public utility.

Giving a capsule picture of life in Lebanon, Bakhos said the people there do have appliances and other modern conveniences, although an average salary would be from $50 to $100 a month.

"They earn this money by working very hard, usually far into the night," he said.

Bakhos' home is in Ghazir, near Beirut, and he came to the U. S. alone, while his wife and their 22-year-old daughter visit in Budapest, Hungary. Bakhos went from here to Chicago, and also was to visit San Francisco before returning to his duties about July 31.

School Won't Resurvey Tax Values

Sudan school officials apparently have decided to delay until sometime in the future any re-evaluation of all property within the school district, following an agreement reached last week with Southwestern Public Service Co., which had been pressing for a re-evaluation.

After the meeting, SWPS rendered to the school district a total valuation of $40,488,304 for all its property within the district, including Plant X. This means that the tax paid by SWPS this year will be a total of $141,709.07, it was reported.

Last year SWPS paid the school a total of $121,848.13, so the district will be gaining almost $20,000 from the new additions made at Plant X.

LIGHTNING DAMAGES HOME NEAR SUDAN

Approximately $200 damage to the home of Dwain West two miles southeast of Sudan about 4 p.m. Sunday, when lightning struck the residence.

PERSONALS

Elroy Rasco, who is a sergeant in the National Guard, has been to camp and returned home Sunday.

Karen Miller and Barbara Young were in Canyon during the weekend to visit Nancy Williams who is attending summer school at West Texas State University.

LAMB TENNIS HAS SURPRISES

Most Sudan players fared well in early matches in the Lamb County tennis tournament action through Monday night. A couple of local players lost tough first-round matches, however.

Play is being held each evening starting at 6 p.m. at Crescent Park courts in Littlefield. Good crowds have been on hand each evening to watch the action which usually continues to 11 p.m. or so.

Two matches Monday night which drew applause on several occasions from the benchwarmers involved Sudan players. In one of these, LaDelta Vernon won over Alleen Huber of Littlefield 7-5, 6-2. In the other, Robert Williamson bowed reluctantly in a hard battle with Jimmy Farmer in high school boys singles, 6-2, 3-6, 9-7.

Defending champion Dalton Wood had little trouble with Marie Gerik of Pep in a first round match in women's singles, winning 6-1, 6-0. Kathy Minyard, Sudan freshman-to-be playing in women's singles because there weren't enough entries in her division, also won easily, downing Lynn Gowdy 6-1, 6-1.

Tommy Thrash of Littlefield, top-seeded in men's singles, had not played his first round match by Monday night. Jimmy Alup of Sudan outlasted Tommy Spain, Littlefield, in a 3-set match. A surprise in men's singles was the defeat of Scraggy Wingo, 6-8, 6-3, 6-3, by Troy Gardner of Littlefield. Also in singles, Billy Chester stopped Jimmy Butler 2-6, 7-5, 6-0; Orville Bassett defeated Elroy Rasco 6-0, 6-3; Dalton Wood won over Floyce Pierce 6-3, 6-4.

J. C. Williams of Sudan won two matches in men's novice singles, beating Dan Stagg 6-3, 6-8, 6-0, and Jerry Neuenschwander 6-0, 6-3. Pat Brownd defaulted to John Clayton III, and Mike Masten won by default over Barry Arnes, and was to play Bennie Pickrell Tuesday night.

In men's doubles, Chester and Wayne Whiteaker stopped Bassett and Billy Tom Grant 7-5, 6-4 and were to meet the top-seeded team of Thrash and Farley at 9 p.m. Wednesday.

In veteran's singles, Wood defeated H. F. Cunningham 6-2, 6-4.

In several divisions, no matches had been played by Monday night.

Visiting Friday in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Walker were Mr. and Mrs. Jim Craig of Plover, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Powers of Owsen.

4-H MEMBERS ATTEND CAMP—Lamb County 4-Hers and adult supervisors are learning about electricity in the pleasant cool near Clonicoft, N. M., in the Scottsbluff mountain camp. There are 150 4-H members and adult leaders attending. Pictured above, kneeling, left to right, are Ker Owen, Southwestern Public Service instructor; Rodney Bowling and Richard Black from Sudan. Standing are Lynn Pitts, Earth; Mrs. Lady Clare Phillips, home demonstration agent from Littlefield; and Mickey Logan, Sudan.

Scripture: St. Matthew 23: 23; 28: 18-20; St. Luke 19: 10; St. John 15: 10-11; St. Mark 8:24-37.

"These ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other—undone."

When Jesus spoke the above statement, he was talking to the highest-rated people of the Jewish temple ("The scribes and Pharisees sit in Moses seat.") He was telling them that they paid their tithes (which they ought not to leave undone) but they should do the weightier matters of the law: judgment mercy, and faith.

In speaking to the church, today, I believe Christ is saying these same words, except He is telling His Church only in His law of love, mercy and grace. He would remind us (or at least,

He has used these words to remind me) that some things we are doing in His church are good, but some things we ought not to leave undone.

This week I read a newspaper reporter's account of his attendance (and that of another reporter) at a negro church service. Apparently, there was little "form of worship" in that service, but there was praise, singing and prayer. In the midst of the spontaneous prayer, with group responses and unrestrained singing and more prayer, this reporter said to the other, "My God, did you ever hear anything like this?" And he attempted to describe his own feelings...

The beauty of holiness, the quiet moments, the song books, the music, the beautiful stained glass windows, the Order of the Service in a bulletin, all our plans of worship are simply the implements which we have dedicated back to God in seeking to better worship Him. In seeking to find Him, to give ourselves anew each time into His loving care; to worship and commune with our Father, who truly dwells in a "house not made with hands."

I think All this is good, for I am one who believes all good and beautiful things made by God should be used in His service to help make Him known. But—what are we leaving undone? "Quench not the Spirit"... Have we become so "formal" in our worship services, that sometimes we are so engrossed in our forms that it becomes our worship of God? Have we remembered that our God is Love? And love is an emotion we must know and feel, at least in some degree, if we find the One True and Living God?

But, you may say, our religion is not just an emotion. And you say correctly. Our religion is based on Jesus Christ, our faith to believe in Him to love and watch over us, to guide us, to feed us, to save and keep us from death and hell into eternal abundant life with Him, now and forevermore.

But, how far can you go in godly sorrow, (II Corinthians 7: 10) recognizing that Christ died to pay your penalty for sins? Then you will come to accept Jesus as God's only begotten Son, as your sin-offering and personal Savior. Can you do all this without appreciation for Jesus, and joy that you have found Him and eternal life?!

"The just shall live by faith" in Christ, and the God of love is more than a tempestuous outbreak or demonstration of emotion, but His plan is for us to show Christ to the lost world. If you and I are so reserved and solemn-faced, with never a revelation of the true ecstasy and joy and delight that is ours as we walk daily with our loving Lord, learning more of Him and of His way—how can the world see Jesus in us?

Also, Jesus must be revealed, and Accepted, before any one of us can be "just". For we are justified only through Jesus. Ask yourself as I have "Can the world see Jesus in me"? Can the world see Jesus in our worship services? Can the world see Jesus in our deeds of love. Let Jesus be seen in us!
