WOODWORK

BY DALTON

AN ARTICLE in a current magazine discusses the healing properties of raw honey, with the author noting that although honey has been used for about 2,000 years as a universal healer of germs and as a dressing for wounds, it has been neglected as a healing agent in the United States.

I can't vouch for the reliability of honey as a healer, however; and also would like to point out that the honey they're talking about isn't the kind you can buy at the grocery store.

And if you do have the right kind of honey, and do try it on a wound, don't blame me if you don't get well. It should make you smell nice, however.

AT THE HEIGHT of last weekend's rioting in Los Angeles, a fellow came by my desk and wanted to know how the "Democratic Convention" was going in California.

MOST OF US, I feel sure, are convinced that we could write better television plots than the ones we usually see. But those who write scripts for TV do have their problems. There are taboos on what they can include in stories, but not much restriction on violence.

One writer reported that cigarette sponsors of a program insist (with some justification, I suppose) on all the characters in the play handling cigarettes reverently. They had to throw out a scene in which a gun came out of a cigarette case instead of a cigarette.

That's what the Associated Press said. I don't see how a gun that size could hurt anything.

Also, automobile sponsors deplore stories involving traffic accidents. Aspirin bottlers want headaches avoided. Beer sponsors want nobody drinking milk, etc.

There is one story about a show which lost its cigarette sponsor when it discovered the star smoked another brand concealed in the sponsor's package.

That reminds me of the days in grade school when we used to conceal our comic books in the pages of a geography book.

Crop Residues Helpful To Soil

Good management of crop residues is one of the easiest ways to reduce erosion, conserve moisture, improve soil tilth, and increase the fertility of the soil. While at the same time it keeps the soil at a more even temperature, which speeds up the germination time in the spring and prevents the young seedlings from being killed and washed away by winds.

Good crop residue use is a labor-saving conservation practice. One reason it doesn't require any special equipment to do a good job. It can be done by using a double or a triple roller to cut the stubble in the fall and the litter rolled into the top soil with a tandem disc, chisel or a chisel with wings. Another method used is to leave the stubble standing and let it rot in place.

The Sudan County Soil Conservation District Board of Supervisors along with other agricultural agencies urge all farmers to apply this conservation practice.

Devotional

BY HAZEL HOUSE

"JOY - DO YOU HAVE IT?"

Scripture: Hebrews 4:14-20, I John 3:1-3.

Joy seems to be one thing that many persons today seldom, if ever, experience. And the real meaning of joy is lost in much of our world today. Do you have joy?

One Sunday morning I stood in the church service and began with my friends to sing "Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty." Suddenly like a flash, I saw myself standing in the presence of the Almighty God, who spoke this intricate and wonderful universe into being with His word and upholding it by the power of His word. I knew with a deep humbleness that God did not need my singing of His songs to add to His greatness, but that even in His majesty and greatness, His love for me was even greater.

I became aware that He was accepting our singing as an offering of love, like a gift one may receive from a little child; and I was almost overcome by the joy of being loved by one so wonderful and mighty as God, our Father!

How can I be so bold as to call myself His child? Because I know He loves me more than I can measure with the human or finite mind. I know His love is real for me because He sent His Son, Jesus, to pay off my (and your) death penalty for sin. He gave me the gift of eternal life by Jesus Christ, through my faith to believe in Him. And this eternal life of love with the Father is mine now, in the joy of knowledge enough to understand the promise of God's Word, to experience their truth. I can rest my present and my future in God's loving, all-governing, guiding, omnipotent hand. Jesus made possible all this joy and hope of living forever in love and abundant riches and peace. So how can I tell you enough about Him—my wonderful, forgiving, and always present Savior and Lord! I can be bold enough to come before the Almighty, into His presence, only by claiming Jesus as my Savior and Redeemer from the law of sin and death. Only His shed blood, accepted by my personal choice, can cover and blot out my sin that I may come before God when so sinners come. So I know I am a child of God only through Jesus. Now I am a child of the King, heir of God and joint-heir with Jesus. Bold? Why shouldn't we be bold to claim our relationship when Jesus made it so plain for us to know. We can only be bold in Jesus' name, but He said, "whoever will may come." That means you or me—anyone can have this joy by accepting Jesus as their own Savior, Redeemer and Lord. How about you? Do you know the joy of being God's child? Read St. John 3:14-17, and Believe God!

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and light unto my path. —(Psalms 119:105)

When we start the day, place ourselves through prayer under divine direction. God is at the heart of our being as wisdom and intelligence. He is our light and our guide. His spirit goes before us and prepares the way. We are not alone. God is with us. He gives us a sense of peace and security.

A college football coach may have the biggest, fastest, smartest boys in the country. He may have the cleverest formation anywhere. "I", "A", "T", or what have you.

But if his team can't block and tackle he might as well play Fodunk High.

That's why he's constantly teaching fundamentals.

Fishing is the same way!

You may have the best bait-casting rig on the market. You may be able to put a practice plug in the bucket at 30, 40, and 50 feet... nine times out of nine.

But if you don't know more than that about the fundamentals of fishing, you'll never catch a black bass except by accident.

You've got to know THE FISH!

As often stated the black bass is an ornery critter.

He doesn't move around much except to forage for food. And he doesn't do that often because he homespends in a place where he can hide and lie in wait for something edible to be washed to him by the current.

So look for him under an overhanging willow tree, close to the bank and where the water is deep. All kinds of goodies come falling out of the tree: caterpillars, baby birds, and mice.

If there are lily pads there, so much the better. It will be a home for frogs.

If the bank is muddy, that's fine. Crawfish will live there.

If there is a weed bed, that's wonderful. In that hideaway will be small bream and minnows that the largemouth can catch.

Point is if you want to catch fish, you have to put the lure where they are. You have to think like a fish. You have to figure out where he is at what time of day or season, and fish accordingly.

Let's take a lesson from the experts. They contend that most of the bass, and the biggest bass, are deep.

Yep, you can look at the color photographs in the outdoor magazines, and you can see the big blacks jumping after the topwater lures. It's spectacular! In fact, there's nothing else quite like it.

But if you want to catch bass — big bass and lots of them — don't concentrate on topwater lures. Fish deep!

This year the most bass and the biggest bass have been caught in deep water on black jigs. Sometimes a fisherman puts on a pork rind or a pork chunk, or a plastic worm. There's no doubt about it, they add to the efficiency of the lure.

Remember the rule about not hurrying? Take it slow and easy!

That's the way to fish the jig if you expect results.

It must go to the bottom and sit there while the big bass looks it over. After a while move it about two inches. The bass will inspect the jig with more interest. He thinks it might be something alive. But he's not likely to commit himself yet.

Remember you've got all day.

Relax. Move the jig another couple of inches... than look out!

If you are in a likely spot, you may get action any minute. The largemouth bass is both cantankerous and ornery. But he is not entirely unpredictable. He takes a lure for three reasons. He is either hungry, angry, or protecting his nest.

That's right, I said his nest. It's the male of the species who makes the nest, fanning out a clean place in the sand or gravel.

He drives the female into this place, where she lays her eggs. He deposits his milt on them and then acts as watchman until the little bass hatch out.

He resents any intrusion and he will pick up any foreign matter and move it out of the nest by picking it up in his mouth.

If that's your lure, you've got a bass.

Other than during nesting time, the bass, male and female, will hit a lure from anger anytime it intrudes upon their peace and quietude.

Bass have no regular eating habits, like you and I. They eat when the opportunity presents itself.

A bass will lie in wait in the deep until something to eat comes along. Then he smashes it! He doesn't know what time it is. He doesn't eat by the clock. But he does know when he's hungry... which is most of the time.

Keep a mesh bag near the washing machine. As you sort the entire wash, drop all socks into the bag. Close the drawstrings, drop the bag into the washer. This not only saves socks—it's a recommended way to save your washing equipment. One sock in the works of the washer can cost $10 in repair bills. When doing the laundry be sure to add a pine oil disinfectant along with your regular detergent or soap. The disinfectant cuts down harmful germs in the wash.

If you have a large family, try storing the socks in a centrally located spot, saving yourself the time and trouble of pairing and putting away. A "sock bin" can be easily made by using a cardboard box. Cut a hole in the top and use it as a "sock bin" for everyone to use. It's a great idea for the family.

Using Your Head

Every year the fashion world awaits the Paris showings with bated breath. For months preceding, designers and everyone connected with their salons habitually assume an air of furtive secrecy reminiscent of a spy picture. As a result, when the showings do take place, the reaction (whether favorable or no) is invariably one of surprise.

But back in 1958, the fashion world was really knocked for a loop! That was the year Givenchy, the noted Parisian couturier, had his mannikin model in exotically styled wigs! According to Givenchy, his motive was merely to save time and to complement his collection. But the fashion world was all abuzz! Little did Givenchy realize that he had sparked a trend that was to lead to the revival of the wig as a fashion accessory.

Actually, wigs have been around for a long time. A look at history shows that they date back as far as 4,000 B.C. to the land of the Pharaohs. In more modern times, wigs were in common use in this country during colonial times. From that period until just recently, however, they had been used in this country mainly by actresses (Zsa Zsa Gabor, Jill St. John, Carol Channing, Lena Horne, Betty Furness, to name a few) and by those women who needed wigs because of loss or damage to their hair.

Today an estimated 4 1/2 million women in the United States own wigs — and the number is growing every day. Now, it is customary for most of the name couturiers to have a wig or hairpiece specially designed for every model showing his clothes. More significant, however, is the fact that with the price of wigs now within reach of every woman's pocket book hundreds of thousands of housewives, career girls, society figures — fashion conscious women of all ages and walks of life are enjoying the convenience and practicality of owning a wig.

Wigs are of two basic types—synthetic and human hair, which is the more desirable. Fashion Tress, the leading company in the wig field, uses only the highest quality human hair which is purchased from peasant girls in European countries. The girls under contract to sell their hair protect the quality by wearing kerchiefs to avoid the sun's rays. They never use lacquer or other chemicals. Consequently, the hair in a Fashion Tress hairpiece is the strongest, softest and most lustrous in the world. The average wig represents a three year growth of hair.

After the hair is cut, it is shipped to a factory where a master wig craftsman takes over. The wig making profession is the second oldest in the world and its craftsmen jealously guard the secret of wig making. The method is carefully passed on from one generation to the next, so there are whole families that engage in the art. It usually takes from one to three months to make a Fashion Tress wig.

The fashion world has now fully assimilated the wig. What is interesting to see is how other areas are adapting to it. For example, in financial circles, there are some places where a woman can finance a wardrobe of wigs or get a loan from a bank to buy them. Wigs can also be bought through Diner's Club, American Express or Uni-Card in some cities. If a woman can prove she needs a wig for cosmetic purposes, she can even deduct the cost from her income tax!

Three more cotton spinning test projects will soon be started by Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., aimed at showing three more textile mills how they can use Texas High Plains cotton to their advantage.

James S. Parker, Textile Consultant for Plains Cotton Growers, has just returned from the textile region of the Southeast where the test projects were set up as a part of PCG's free technical consulting service to mills. Parker visited with top mill officials and cotton buyers in Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina and South Carolina.

He points out that not every project results in a mill switching to cotton from this area, but said: "We have high hopes that in these three cases testing will prove that High Plains cotton will spin into the yarns they manufacture with comparable quality and reduced raw fiber costs." He added that the recent trip left him much more optimistic about the near-term picture for consumption of cotton from this area.

This optimism stems largely from follow-up work on previous consultation and testing for these mills. In Alabama, a mill indicated to Parker that plans call for changing to use of our cotton from 25,000 to 75,000 bales per year. And one textile mill in Georgia is increasing use of this area's cotton, one almost doubling the amount used previously.

"These," said Parker, "are steady customers for High Plains cotton, and we trust that our technical consulting service is at least partially responsible for this fact."

Asked what products on retail shelves normally contain our kind of cotton, Parker replied that the most common, everyday items made from High Plains cotton are blue denim and light twills. In addition there are duets, muslins, towings, canvases and other constructions well suited to the use of shorter stapled cotton, he stated.

He reports that the free textile service being provided by cotton producers in this area through Plains Cotton Growers is extremely well received and has made a multitude of friends as well as customers for the High Plains since its beginning in 1962. In addition to specific test projects, the service gives mills access to technical reports on textile research done by PCG through the facilities of the Textile Research Laboratory at Texas Technological College. And information in these reports was directly responsible for one of the mills mentioned above wanting a test project on production of their yarns from High Plains cotton. The Texas Tech fiber laboratory and pilot spinning plant, with over 1,000 spindles, are among the most complete and modern found anywhere and PCG research reports compiled there have gained the respect of textile people around the world.

According to Parker the High Plains will produce this year about 100,000 bales or more of cotton with a staple length over one inch — cotton which sells "real fast." And while prospects for expanded use of High Plains cotton already look good, Parker says many, many more mills could be induced to buy in this area if we had a larger supply of this longer stapled cotton to offer. "The amount of this type cotton being grown this year is a decided increase over past years," he went on, "and indications more and more point to greater interest in growing this cotton which can be marketed on a much broader base." For this reason, at least five or six cotton buyers for large mills plan to visit the area this Fall to look over the 1965 crop.

Generally speaking Parker feels that through PCG's consulting, production and marketing services, the textile people here as well as buyers the High Plains to be a very profitable area for the production of their raw fiber needs. Mill people, he said, are always complimentary and appreciative of the technical service being provided, and many have made the statement that we are on the right track to increase market. "No other producer organization provides a comparable service," he continues, "and the textile industry is very favorably impressed with our sincerity in wanting to grow cotton that fit their need, and with our willingness to conduct pilot plant tests and fiber studies toward that end."

Parker also sees a future for the High Plains as the site for additional textile installations, calling attention to the mill already in operation at Falls and the fact that plans have been completed for two others to start construction in the near future. And, during his recent visit, two mills in the Southeast were asking questions about the possibility of establishing plants in this area.

Summing up, Parker said the textile industry itself is in excellent condition, using more cotton than at any time in recent years, and with continued hard work and product improvement, the High Plains can look forward to an ever-increasing percentage of this expanding raw fiber market.

Directors to Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. are in the process of being elected for the 1965-66 year in county meetings throughout the area. Eight of the cotton producer organization's 23 counties have completed elections and four others are set during this month or early in September.

Two directors are elected from each county to serve for one-year terms with a three-year limit on the number of consecutive years a director may serve. To date, 16 directors have been elected, eight new and eight re-elected.

They are: Guy Nickeas and W. E. Meyers, Bailey County; Gene C. McLaughlin and Don Anderson, Crosby; Tim O. Cook and J. D. Banta, Dawson; Joe Smith and Forest Savage, Gaines; John G. Smith and Homer Garrison, Hale; Joe Montgomery and J. D. Smith, Lamb; Jess Minchew and Ray Carroway, Swisher; and Jake Fulford and Keith Vandivere, Terry.

Meetings at which directors will be elected are scheduled in Lynn and Cochran counties on August 17, in Dickens County August 27 and on September 7 in Hockley County. Counties in PCG territory which have not yet scheduled election meetings include Darr Smith, Farmer, Castro, Briscoe, Floyd, Motley, Lubbock, Yoakum, Garza, Borden and Howard. All meetings are publicized in local newspapers and on local radio and cotton interests are also advised by mail.

SUMMERTIME COMBO
In the heat of summer when fish are fat, content, and lulled to near insensibility by soaring temperatures, there may not be a lure in the tackle box that will arouse their interest.

When no single approach seems to work, then try two, urge the fishing specialists at Mercury outdoors. In fact, they say, midsummer offers a chance for both the dedicated fisherman and artificial addict to quiet their feud and pool their skills to mutual advantage.

The old trick of combining plugs and minnows is about as old as the dugout canoe. And hitching flies to lures is not new. Yet, for some reason, during the heat of a fishing season, many well chosen words of advice are forgotten.

Regardless of the waters, fresh or salt, tandem arrangements will often produce results when single offerings fail.

The most unsophisticated approach is to simply hook a worm, shrimp or other bait right on to a spoon or jig. The lure flashes and gives off sound, while odor emitting from the bait further tantalizes the quarry. By appealing to the fish's sense of sight, sound and smell simultaneously you've "touched all the bases."

The bait-plug combination can be used in many ways. The two may be joined by varying lengths of leader, with the bait usually following the lure. They can be worked deep or shallow, fast or slow.

Multiple set-ups with a series of dropper flies followed by a popping bug are particularly effective on panfish. Likewise, a spinner trailing a wobbling lure can be good for trout.

When one thing doesn't work, try another. If that doesn't produce either, follow Mercury's advice to try both.

Remember: "double" up" can be summertime's magic combo.

Turbine Truck Styled For Space Age

One of the many new features of the experimental highway transport Turbo Titan III recently unveiled by Chevrolet Motor Division is the clean exhaust of the gas turbine engine. Marie Haughton, above, holds a hanky over the wide exhaust stream without trace of smudge or odor.

Other functional innovations of the fiberglass and steel "truck of tomorrow" include powered swing-up windows which open automatically with the door key; retractable turn signals; pedestal-mounted steering console with horizontal twin-dial steering; retractable square-lens triple headlights mounted vertically with special turnpike beam; astronaut seats; full carpeting; air conditioning; radio telephone and FM stereo radio.

An important safety feature is a powerful automatic braking device which uses the turbine's compressor to retard the vehicle on downgrades.

The gas turbine engine operates on any type fuel, but functions best on kerosene or diesel oil. It delivers full power with virtually no adjustments, starts instantly in any weather and requires no radiator, water jacket, coolant or anti-freeze.

When testing is completed the unit will probably be placed in a commercial fleet for evaluation under actual trucking industry operating conditions.

PUBLIC NOTICE Proposed CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT NUMBER SIX ON THE BALLOT

PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT TO BE VOTED ON AT AN ELECTION TO BE HELD ON NOVEMBER 2, 1965. HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION NO. 11 proposing an Amendment to Article III of the Constitution of the State of Texas authorizing loans to students at institutions of higher education; creating the Texas Opportunity Plan Fund and making provisions relating thereto. BE IT RESOLVED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF TEXAS: Section 1. That Article III of the Constitution of the State of Texas be amended by adding a new Section to read as follows: "Section 50b. STUDENT LOANS. (a) The Legislature may provide that the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System, or its successor or successors, shall have the authority to provide for, issue and sell general obligation bonds of the State of Texas in an amount not to exceed Eighty-five Million Dollars ($85,000,000). The bonds authorized herein shall be called 'Texas College Student Loan Bonds,' shall be executed in such form, denominations and upon such terms as may be prescribed by law, provided, however, that the bonds shall not bear more than four per cent (4%) interest per annum; they may be issued in such installments as the Board finds feasible and practical in accomplishing the purposes of this Section. "(b) All moneys received from the sale of such bonds shall be deposited in a fund hereby created in the State Treasury to be known as the Texas Opportunity Plan Fund to be administered by the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System, or its successor or successors to make loans to students who have been admitted to attend any institution of higher education within the State of Texas, public or private, including Junior Colleges, which are recognized or accredited under laws and conditions prescribed by the Legislature, and to pay interest and principal on such bonds and provide a sinking fund therefor under such conditions as the Legislature may prescribe. "(c) While any of the bonds, or interest on said bonds authorized by this Section is outstanding and unpaid, there is hereby appropriated out of the first moneys coming into the Treasury in each fiscal year, not otherwise appropriated by this Constitution, an amount sufficient to pay the principal and interest on such bonds that mature or become due during such fiscal year, less the amount in the sinking fund at the close of the prior fiscal year. "(d) The Legislature may provide for the investment of moneys available in the Texas Opportunity Plan Fund, and the interest and sinking funds established for the payment of bonds issued by the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System, or its successor or successors. Income from such investment shall be used for the purposes prescribed by the Legislature. "(e) All bonds issued hereunder shall, after approval by the Attorney General, registration by the Comptroller of Public Accounts of the State of Texas, and delivery to the purchasers, be incontestable and shall constitute general obligations of the State of Texas under this Constitution. "(f) Should the Legislature enact enabling laws in anticipation of the adoption of this Amendment, such acts shall not be void because of their anticipatory nature." Sec. 2. The foregoing Constitutional Amendment shall be submitted to a vote of the qualified electors of this State at an election to be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1965, at which election all ballots shall have printed on them the following: "FOR the Constitutional Amendment authorizing the Legislature to provide for loans to students at institutions of higher education to be known as the Texas Opportunity Plan. "AGAINST the Constitutional Amendment authorizing the Legislature to provide for loans to students at institutions of higher education to be known as the Texas Opportunity Plan." Sec. 3. The Governor of the State of Texas shall issue the necessary proclamation for the election and this Amendment shall be published in the manner and for the length of time so required by the Constitution and laws of this State.

Quick Change Air Apparel

Airline Hostesses Go High Fashion

FLORENCE LEVY — The "Q" for an travel was introduced here by designer Emilio Pucci as part of his high fashion collection for Fall.

The "Q" is the way the traveler will dress five to ten years from now — predict that!

The world will see the "Q" quick change approach to air travel this fall on Braniff International airline hostesses, who will go high fashion in an abrupt departure from the present look alike uniforms of the industry.

The quick change is evident above in the four costume changes hostess Sandra Herin hosts will make in a single flight: (1) a reversible zippered wool coat in aubergine and apricot pill box hat scarf in a brilliant Pucci print, plastic helmet for bad weather, high leather boots matched to the raglan sleeve coat; (2) a vibrant pink gabardine suit with set-in braided sleeves, zippered jacket and wraparound skirt; (3) a "Pucci" in a variety of two-color combinations for meal service in easy fitting wash and wear cotton and dacron with sleeves and yoke cut into one and a half belt at the back; (4) a two-piece culotte fashion in bold blue with turtle neck sleeved blouse for in-flight wear after serving.

We commissioned Pucci to design not a new uniform but a costume collection — clothes that would be fun to wear and work in, and memorable to our passengers." Harline I. Lawrence, Braniff president said.

For pilots, Pucci showed black gabardine uniforms with double-breasted jackets and gold braid rank insignia, a radical switch from casual looking standard pilot wear. The formality of the design, "reflects the responsibility of a man in charge of an $8,000,000 jet aircraft," Pucci said.

Braniff launched its program to give passengers "better treatment on the ground and in the air" when Lawrence became president in April, 1967. In addition to the new air apparel, the program includes restyling of the planes inside and out, new jet equipment, a new standard of on-time performance, new methods of "instant ticketing," new approach to food service, speeded up baggage delivery and applications for new international routes. Braniff International serves the United States, Mexico and South America over an 15,000-mile system.
