SHOULD a woman have to worry about tires? That's the slogan of some tire company which advertises on television, trying to put across the idea that if you have new tires on your car, she won't have to worry when she's driving without a hubby.

It just isn't so, however. You can have tire trouble even with new tires, as my wife discovered the other day. Also she found you can have radiator trouble and dog trouble on the same trip.

Like all other families who really can't afford it, we have two vehicles. One of these is in excellent condition, a late model which never has given me any trouble, and which goes gliding along on four new tires. The other is a 1957 model which just turned 150,000 miles and has three so-so tires and one so thin the air is showing through. Also, it belonged to a hot-rodder who put twin exhausts on it, and at high speeds (say 55) sounds like a B52 coming in.

I took the older car up to a church camp a week or so ago, and left my wife with the better vehicle. Since we were planning to go away for a few days, she decided to take the children's pets, including a white rabbit and a pregnant dog, to Sudan for care and feeding while we were gone.

She loaded rabbit, dog and children in the car and drove away. A few miles north of Sudan, the red light came on, indicating the car was too hot. She coasted into a farmyard, where the couple living there were quite obliging. They raised the hood of the car, and it steamed and hissed like a locomotive. While this fellow was trying to cool off the car, the dog jumped out on the

Paula Chisholm Attends Youth Conference

Paula Chisholm, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Chisholm of Sudan attended The Attorney General's Youth Conference on Crime that was held in the Municipal Amphitheater in Austin, Aug. 20-22. Approximately 2,000 young people attended the conference.

Paula reported that the conference was conducted mainly with the major crimes committed by youth in Texas. The conference stressed such crimes as auto thefts and vandalism.

One of the highlights of the conference, according to Paula, was "Operation Teenager." Paula said, "Operation Teenager" had its beginning in the consciences of four inmates of the Texas Department of Corrections, who came to the conclusion that serving a sentence doesn't repay a thing. The four men go from city to city telling others of their mistakes, hoping it will prevent someone from making the same mistake.

Paula says that everyone should have a chance to attend a conference such as the one she attended. She said that the conference showed why the youth should be more concerned about crime. It was reported that last year, crime increased 120%, and the rate that our nation is growing, it is predicted that in ten years, it will not be safe to walk down the street.

The larger cities, such as Houston are more concerned about crime now, but Paula said that the conference pointed out that widespread crime is also occurring in the smaller towns.

Paula's trip to Austin was sponsored by the Sudan Rotary Club.

Even bridges are trimming down in these diet-conscious days. Here is a drawing of the slim Poplar Street Bridge that will cross the Mississippi at St. Louis. Representing a new development in bridge design, it substitutes a steel plate and a non-skid surface for the conventional thick deck of concrete. This gives the bridge a sleek figure, reducing both weight and cost.

BY HAZEL HOUSE

"LIFE OR DEATH"

St. Luke 16:19-31, 9:23-25
When the rich man died and was in hell, he prayed that Lazarus (who also had died and was in Abraham's bosom) be sent with cool water for his relief, for he was "tormented in this flame".

Then, when the rich man learned that Lazarus could not come to help him, he prayed that he be allowed to go back and warn his five brothers not to come to "this place of torment". But he was told that if his brothers heard not Moses and the prophets, neither would they be persuaded though one arose from the dead.

Now, one has arisen from the dead--Jesus Christ! Have you heard Him? Is there someone praying that you be warned not to come to this place of torment?

Yes--Jesus came to die to keep you out of hell, and make it possible for you to live forever in heaven with God, our Father, through acceptance of Jesus as your Savior and Lord.

Have you been warned? I pray for you that you will choose Jesus now. How can we escape eternal torment, eternal hell, if we do not take Jesus whom God sent to make a way for us back into His Kingdom of eternal joy, peace, love and life? Only by accepting God's plan, Jesus Christ, can we enter eternal life. For God will not know us as His child in "that day" unless we have been "born again" through Jesus into His family.

Be warned that the wages of sin is eternal death-torment; but be joyful that the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus. Don't miss Him, or you will be forever lost.

Leave everything, miss everything else if you must, but don't fail to take Jesus as your own Savior and Lord. He loves you; He died for your sins and mine; He is a gift of love and life to you from Almighty God--don't turn to your own way, but turn to God's way--Don't Miss Jesus!

INJECTING LONGER LIFE IN MOTORS

A General Electric engineer uses a hypodermic needle to inject oil in demonstrating a new type of motor lubrication system. The new system will permit the redesigned motor to run more than 10,000 hours without re-oiling, thus reducing maintenance and increasing life expectancy.

Capillary action is used in the motor's lubrication system to keep the bearings from running out of oil prematurely by retrieving any oil that may be pumped beyond the bearings.

The 2.4-inch diameter shaded-pole motor is manufactured by G-E's Specialty Motor Department, Fort Wayne, Ind. The optional high quality system, available at a modest price increase, was designed especially for deluxe range hood ventilators, room air conditioners, small furnaces, humidifiers, furnace humidifiers, tape recorders, and other applications with adverse environmental conditions and where re-oiling is more difficult and therefore less frequent.

-AND ALL FOR ONE!

LABOR DAY, 1965

Labor Day is everybody's day--for almost everybody does some physical or mental toil, bodily or intellectual exertion. It may be the newspaper delivery boy making his daily round in the neighborhood. It may be a typical mother's day, where the 40-hour work week is unknown. It may be a compeer working on a symphony. It may be the work of the military sweating-out the insect-infested swamps of Viet Nam.

When Labor Day was first celebrated in New York in 1882 under the sponsorship of the Central Labor Union, it became the day set aside for commemoration by organized labor.

However, today, Labor Day, in a broad sense, is dedicated to all those in the work force, skilled and unskilled, white collar and blue, educators, artists, and members of all the professions.

Labor, of course, is not limited to those who labor of the mind. It is encompassed by the unskilled labor of the earth, is encompassed by the religious, and labor of the heart is encompassed in the work of medicine and social service, among others.

Therefore, in no sense during Labor Day is tribute to the opportunity to American for physical, mental and spiritual work, the responsibility and entails and above all else, the pleasure to be derived from work done to well-performed.

"Knowledge comes from taking things apart, whether from putting them together."

"The value of education is not in what you know, but in what you do with it."

"An outdoor, closed-roofed group of labor with outstanding provisions for cotton growers and all agriculture are now pending in Congress."

This statement is from Donald A. Johnson, Executive Vice President of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., who adds that farm leaders across the nation agree that passage of the bill would severely cut net farm income and reduce the number of available farm jobs.

Primarily, Johnson was discussing H.R. 10415 by Representative James Rostenkowski (D-Ill.) which has been cleared by the House Labor Committee and is due consideration on the floor of the House in September. This bill would:

1. They would bring farm workers to the same level as other workers.
2. They would reduce the independent contract from $1.25 to $1.75.
3. They would limit the number of hours a worker could be expected to remain before the independent minimum for long.
4. They would give the Secretary of Labor authority to set up a massive recruiting system for U.S. farm workers.
5. They would eliminate all minimum wage exceptions and increase the minimum hour exceptions for companies, workweeks and overtime work.

Hey, Fellow! What About Me?

You're in the wrong place, Rover! Your dish is in the other room where it should be. While cats and dogs eat and do get along after a little period of adjustment, it's best to keep them apart at mealtime. Rover's a little jealous of how the cats are dining in. No table scraps for those licks. The cat experts at the Purina Pet Care Center suggest that cat owners give their pets commercially prepared dry cat food because it's scientifically blended and balanced with all the nutrients so essential to a cat's well-being—vitamins, proteins and minerals. And, of course, plenty of fresh water each day. Many people think milk is the best food, but milk alone will not provide a balanced diet. Some cats like it; others don't. It is good for newly-weaned kittens and nursing mothers. O.K. Rover, now move away and leave us in peace!

PRODUCERS WINNING

90% Battle of the Boll Weevil!

BOLL WEEVIL CAN BE BEAT

The efficiency and effectiveness of the 1964 weevil control program, together with the continued support of producers, strongly points toward a complete High Plains victory over this most dreaded and costly of all cotton insects.

20% LESS REQUESTED FOR WAR CHEST

Producers elected in the first year's spraying, plus the fact that over 97% of producers helped finance it, made possible a substantial carryover of funds from 1964 to be used in 1965. This in turn has made it possible to reduce the requested producer contribution in 1965 from 50 cents to 40 cents a bale. And there is hope this can be further reduced in 1966.

The following is a financial report from the Boll Weevil Steering Committee of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. to those who are actively investing in this vital program:

minimum wage exceptions and increase the minimum hour exceptions for companies, workweeks and overtime work.

The increased costs to the farmer inherent in these bills, Johnson said, "would add materially to the already critical cost-price squeeze on the farmer, and in the case of the cotton grower could go far toward nullifying research efforts to make cotton more competitive with man-made fibers and foreign production."

Johnson emphasized that these bills are only pending and have not yet been passed.

The Indian Elephant has a small prehensile tip on the end of its trunk that the African doesn't have. The skin of an elephant, even though thick, is very sensitive, and they can feel a fly crawling around on them. This is why they always throw dirt and hay on their backs.

Climbing A Tokyo Mountain

An imaginative Japanese manufacturer of mountain climbing equipment has created on one facade of his new building in the heart of Tokyo a 65-foot replica of an 84-degree rocky slope. The "Tokyo Rock" was designed by rock-climbing experts and affords supervised training for neophytes as well as exercise for the more seasoned climbers at a cost of 65¢ per hour. As a precautionary measure, there is a safety net along the lower ledge. The simulated slope extends from the second floor to the roof of the six-story building.

Instapt Paper "Talk" . . . 10 Locations In LDX Communications Network

ROCHESTER, N. Y. — It won't be long before people will be able to "talk" back and forth as easily and rapidly on paper as they now can by telephone — no matter what the distance.

Xerox Corporation has announced another advancement in the development of long distance facsimile communications by xerography, or LDX as its creators have named it. A network linking 10 of the company's locations is scheduled to be fully operative before the end of the year, said C. Peter McColeough, executive vice president of operations.

The network will span a third of the continent, tying together cities as far apart as New York and Chicago, and will include several facilities at company headquarters in the Rochester area. Xerox offices in all locations will be able to send copies almost instantly to each other.

The system will be "fully switched," in that a central, manned switching facility located in Rochester and controlled by Xerox, will make it possible for each station in the network to communicate with any other.

Anything written, typed or drawn, of any length, and up to 8 1/2" wide, will be transmitted almost instantly in its original form and be received on ordinary paper.

Other Companies Help

McColeough explained that new developments and "considerable extension of several areas on the part of Xerox, Rochester Telephone Corporation and American Telephone and Telegraph Company make this first 'fully switched' LDX network possible. Of critical importance was the development by the companies of advanced broadband switching apparatus, including a remote control operator console. Inauguration a few years ago of special broadband transmission tariffs made it attractive for Xerox to develop LDX as a new communications link with exciting potential."

Reasons For Network

A two-fold purpose for installing the first network of this advanced form of communication on its own premises was outlined.

First, by actually installing and operating its own LDX network Xerox can accumulate a wide range of applications and day-to-day information. "Computer-assisted simulation studies of LDX applications have been conducted by our systems engineers," said McColeough. "But there is no substitute for actual working experience with such a system."

Second, the company expects that the communication advantages inherent in this system will result in increased efficiency and savings for Xerox.

Three Transmittal Categories

Initially, three categories of documents will be transmitted:

- 1) priority executive correspondence and internal directives;
- 2) action documents pertaining to the marketing, manufacturing and engineering functions of the business, including orders, requisitions and inventory statements; and
- 3) transmission of computer related data between operating departments and the company's computer installations.

LDX is a high speed, bar-copy, transmission system that can move documents in the exact form in which they are prepared at the rate of up to 2 1/2" x 11" pages per minute, or 4,500 in an eight hour day. Operation is said to be as easy as dialing a telephone or using the company's 914 or 813 Copiers.

The LDX system consists of a Scanner, a Printer and a transmission link. When a document is fed into a Scanner, its image is converted into electrical signals for transmission over whatever communication link is used — telephone lines, microwave radio relay, coaxial cable or a combination. When the signals have been received, they are reconverted and the document is reproduced by conventional xerography.

Each station in the network will be equipped with both a Scanner and Printer.

Advantages Outlined

Important advantages over other facsimile systems are found in a combination of speed, copy quality and simplicity of operation and the fact that print-out is on ordinary paper.

The first commercial LDX equipment was placed in 1964 and installations thus far have been for transmission of documents between two points. The installation scheduled for this year on Xerox premises will be the first LDX network with switching between all stations.
