FORTY-SECOND YEAR

SUDAN, LAMB COUNTY, TEXAS THURSDAY, APRIL 21, 1966

NUMBER 9

WOODWORK BY DALTON

A SPACE Scientist last week reported that new experiments with hibernating hamsters raise hope for eventually inducing temporary hibernating powers in man--"for long space voyages and for food during times of famine."

In other words, it would be a fine way to keep from aging while on a trip to Mars, or if you get hungry and there's no food, you could hibernate.

Offhand, the only person I know who would rather sleep than eat is my wife.

I personally might consider the idea if I would slim up a bit by sleeping a few years instead of eating. But bears hibernate, so we're told, and I've never seen a skinny bear.

The best use of this hibernation plan, if it can be developed, has been overlooked by the Associated Press--and the scientist who is working on the project, it seems to me.

Because the biggest advantage I can see is that a guy might go to sleep and set his alarm clock far enough in the future that all his creditors would be dead. This is assuming they don't have access to the same hibernation vaccine, or whatever it takes for this state of suspended animation. That would be a dirty trick.

Sears and Roebuck never dies, though. And at one and a half percent compounded monthly on the unpaid balance of my $127, I'd probably owe them a million bucks by the time I woke up.

ON THE SUBJECT of waking up, I wonder what happened to the Rev. William M. Branham? On Easter Eve, more than 700 persons from America and abroad, said a story I read, flocked to Jeffersonville, Ind., because the man, who died Dec. 24 in Amarillo after a car wreck was supposed to rise from the dead. So far as I could ascertain from the story, the Rev. Mr. Branham never actually told them he would rise from the dead. But his followers had great faith in him as a prophet-messenger, and kept his casket sealed in a funeral home from Christmas to Easter, without burial.

Since I never did read another story about him afterward, I must assume he didn't rise. It takes all kinds.

CHILDREN'S PICTURES TO BE TAKEN

It is an undisputed fact that the responsibilities of tomorrow's world our nation and community will rest upon the shoulders of today. Since this is true the publishers of this newspaper would like to give you a good look at these future "World Builders."

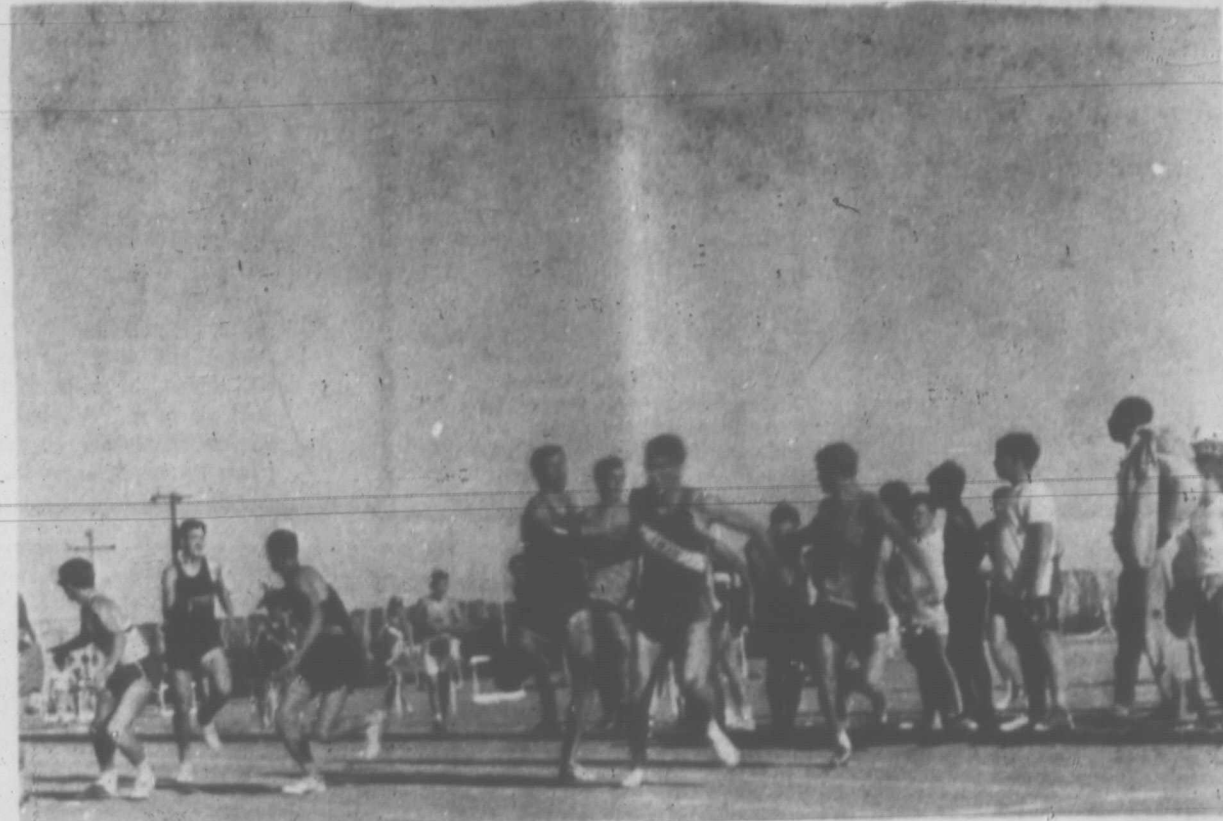

The only way we can do this is by publishing pictures of them in a feature series. To assure the latest and best reproduction pictures they must all be of uniform size and quality.

An expert children's photographer with all the necessary equipment for this specialized work will be here Friday, April 29.

Pictures will be taken at the Beacon News Office from 1 p. m. to 6 p. m.

There is no charge to the parents. There are absolutely no strings to this invitation. It is bonafide in every sense of the word. Parents do not have to be subscribers, nor even readers of this newspaper to take advantage of this feature. Neither are they obligated to purchase pictures

Both Jack and Colleen are lifelong residents of the 30th District, making their home in Vernon. Jack is the son of Mrs. Walter Hightower of Memphis, Texas, and the late Mr. Hightower. COLOR OPTICS

1. With special instruments, physicists are able to detect thousands of variations in the colors of the spectrum. But the average human eye can only distinguish about 40 of them!

2. Color is present in all light. And sunlight, which appears to have no color, is really the sum total of all color. This is best seen in the presence of rainbows after a rainfall.

3. Color TV is harder to receive than black and white. Signals are weaker and interference more prominent, which is why an outdoor antenna is a must for fine color reception, yet not always needed for black and white sets.

4. Perfect color TV reception is possible by using shielded coaxial cable rather than twin-lead to connect the antenna to the TV set. New-Jerold coaxial antenna systems keep color pure and true, keep interference out.

Give It A Lift

A raised border has much to offer any garden. Here a wide variety of annual flowers is grown to perfection each year.

Growing your flowers in a raised border has many advantages. The flowers are nearer the eye of the beholder, therefore details are more readily enjoyed.

The soil of the border can be mixed to a formula since it usually is brought into the garden from elsewhere. Even if the higher level is made possible by lowering the paths and using that soil, there still is an opportunity to make a mixture in the raised border that will grow the finest, sturdiest plants.

The problem of drainage is solved. There's never any reason to worry about standing water or rotting crowns of plants when they're above the surrounding level.

Giving part of your garden a lift makes the whole more interesting to walk through and observe. And, of course, if you raise the border high enough and make it narrow enough you won't even have to stoop when you weed.

Wind Erosion Is Problem

Does Conservation Pay? A question often asked of the Lamb County Soil and Water Conservation District Board of Supervisors. To help answer this question compare the two pictures taken only a few hundred feet apart on different farms. One carried out a good program of residue management and tillage to prevent wind erosion while the other did not. As pictures tell a good story, you can answer this question. Conservation Farming may take some extra effort to carry out but aren't the results worth the effort.

In our District a cover, either growing or dead, should be one of our goals. Sorghum crops provide good cover while they are growing and when managed properly the stalks and stubble provide protection during the wind erosion season. Thus the land is protected the year around with a cover. To attain a good cover a program must be used that will use the rain water where it falls in the dryland fields. Where residues crops are not sufficient to control erosion then Emergency Tillage operations can and should be carried out.

Will your grandchildren farm the land tomorrow that you farm today?

HOW TO KEEP MEAT FRESH

Next time you reach for a package of frankfurters in the refrigerated case of your favorite store, look for the words "vacuum packed" on the package.

Those two words assure the buyer of a product that is not only good to look at but offers reliable flavor and stays fresh longer.

Processed meats of all types are subject to spoilage under normal display case refrigeration. While this can be prevented by freezing, vacuum packaging has proved to be a more preventive method.

How often does one open a meat package only to be confronted by the bad aroma of spoiled food? Surface slime, flavor change and discoloration aggravated by light are especially repugnant signs of meat spoilage to the shopper.

Unwanted oxygen promotes the growth of bacteria and mold on meats and reacts with meat fats to cause rancidity. The average shelf life of bacon, for example, with conventional packaging, would be from four to five days. With vacuum packaging, the life expectancy is increased to as much as 60 days -- 12 times as long.

Vacuum packaging virtually assures a person of getting meat as fresh as the day it was packed, says Robert Miller. The company produces Capran, a transparent film that makes vacuum packaging possible. It combines the critical oxygen barrier with toughness, good appearance and thermoforming characteristics. When used in combination with polyethylene, moisture barrier and sealing properties are also provided.

Another important advantage to shoppers, according to Mr. Miller, is the fact they can see more clearly what they're buying, since the air removal improves transparency and provides a more compact package. Anyone who has ever searched the cases for lean cuts of bacon will appreciate this.

In addition to hot dogs, bacon and luncheon meats, vacuum packaging is also being used to some extent for vegetables with the "boil-in-a-bag" concept.

Give, and it shall be given unto you.—(Luke 6:38)

When we seem to have a lack in our life it may be that our real need is to give. We may think that we would gladly give if we had more supply. But regardless of how limited we seem to be, there is always something we can give. As we act in faith and use what we have, we set into action the increasing multiplying power of God.

JESUS IS ALIVE!

Scripture: Genesis 6:6; Romans 6: 17-23.

As Jesus looked at the world when He was here, (and now as He looks at us today) He was grieved at the sinfulness of man. But He was filled with compassion for us, knowing what was in man.

Once, the Bible tells us, God repented that He had made man because we had become so evil. But Jesus showed His grief at man's sinfulness when He stood outside of Jerusalem; looking at the city, and said, "O, Jerusalem, Jerusalem... how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!"

As you and I look at our world, at our fellow creatures, the species to which we belong, we, too, feel that sickness and grief that man can become so evil. Some who take this look at life go out and commit suicide, or lose their mental balance, or take to dope or drink—in hopelessness and despair.

But—then there is Jesus! Man is not left in hopelessness, if he will look away from the world, and look to Jesus. As the ones who know and love Him, we look at mankind and the evil in this world with the same grief and sorrow, but knowing Jesus makes a difference, and therefore we feel compassion for humanity.

We, too, are human, and know that the only good in us is Jesus! So, we look away from the sins of the world and look in faith to Jesus.

He is the One who makes the difference. Jesus loves us, just like we are, right where we are, no matter how good or bad we are. He loves us. He wants us to know how much He cares about us and wants us to love Him and accept the gift of life eternal that only He can give us, and that He paid such a high and terrible price for because He cares what happens to you and me.

Jesus alone can give full meaning to this life. We are stewards over the physical life, the time He has given us here, yet He alone can give us a new kind of life, so, through the eyes of Christ, we love man for what we know he can become as God's child.

God is our Creator, yes. But in sinning that day Adam died out of God's family, and we are the children only of man, of Adam, until we are re-born into God's family in accepting Jesus as our Savior.

So, we are God's child only through Jesus. You could not do so much, or so little, as to earn or buy your way into eternal life. The way has already been made. Jesus paid it all and offers life to you as a gift. Accept it, for there is no other way. In explanation of how Jesus "paid it all": Jesus paid all the price of death for sin which is necessary, so we obtain our salvation only as we accept it as a free gift from God. But keeping it, continuing to follow Jesus is our responsibility with the help of God. For example: Our Freedom was paid for by the blood of our ancestors, but it is our responsibility to keep our freedom in America, now that we have it.

I love Jesus because He first loved us, I love my fellow man. So I tell you about Jesus, because I am His and He is mine, and what He has done for me, He can and will do for you—just let Him! Accept Him. For all our hope, our joy, our peace, our eternal life, we find only in Jesus.

"For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

SHORT AND SWEET

Praises of the flowering dogwood, national symbol of spring, have been sung by American poets, writers and statesmen since the early days of the republic... George Washington planted the snowy-white blossomed tree at Mount Vernon and it still stands today... His love of the dogwood is memorialized at Valley Forge, which has 50,000 trees—said to be the most magnificent display in the world... Thomas Jefferson also had great affection for the tree and used it in his landscaping of Monticello and the University of Virginia...

Such well-known literary figures as Henry David Thoreau, Christopher Morley, Jesse Stuart and A. E. Houseman have paid tribute to the flowering tree... To some it is the "bride of spring." To others the "sun" of day and the "moon" of night... From Jamestown Island to the Blue Ridge in Virginia, from Memphis to the Great Smokies in Tennessee and from Nashville to Roanoke Island in North Carolina, the drifts of the dogwood are heralded in the literature of the states...

The dogwood has been revered since ancient times, when legends grew up explaining its unique beauties... According to one tale, the dogwood's snowy blossoms date from the spring day when Pierrot, climbing a ladder to brighten the moon's face with whitewash, accidentally tripped his bucket, splattering the trees below with its contents... Another legend holds that the red stains on the tip of each petal date from the memory of blood shed by a beautiful Cherokee princess who was slain by a jealous brave whose suit she had rejected...

Let all things be done... in order.—(I Cor. 14:10)

When we fill our responsibilities in the way in which they should be fulfilled; for then we are in divine order. We are careful, wise, prompt, alert and conscious in divine order, we are guided to have a right place for everything, and everything in its place.

My Neighbors

"Fred, you're not listening to me—if you were your knuckles would be white!"

By Vern Sanford
Wise outdoorsmen read the weather reports regularly.

They know that sudden weather changes have a great influence on our outdoor creatures. And they put these to their advantage.

A sudden drop in the barometer, for instance, often prods fish into hitting. Some of my most memorable fishing has occurred just before a front hits. Usually, fishing also is good just afterwards, when conditions are settling back to normal and the barometer starts its rise again.

Getting in on the fast action often calls for timing things just right. There is a flurry of activity before the front hits. But once it arrives you may as well stop fishing.

However the situation will change within a day or two after the front has passed through.

A striking example of this came during Texas eliminations for the World Series of Fishing, held on Granite Shoals Lake (now Lake LBJ) in 1963.

On Friday and Saturday the contestants had fairly good fishing, but on Saturday night a cold front moved in and fishing was all but dead on Sunday.

Many outdoorsmen realize this about fishing. What they fail to understand is that it often works equally well with wildlife.

I remember the opening of deer season a few years back. It was a warm, still day. But, despite the high temperatures, deer were up and about all day. Even toward mid-afternoon, when the temperature was pushing the high 80's, many deer were feeding out in the open.

Next day a severe norther hit. Deer kill was nowhere as good as it was opening day.

But a few days later, when things started warming up again, the deer came out en masse as they had just before the front hit.

Our wild creatures, both fish and fowl, have some sort of built-in weather predicting device. They know when nasty weather is coming and they get ready for it. If it looks like a severe front that will drop the temperature or perhaps bring heavy rain, they'll start feeding to store up for the lean days ahead.

Once on a fishing trip on the Llano River, I noticed hundreds of wasp nests scattered along a rocky overhang on a bluff. Black and red insects were swarming every-where. Next morning, when I walked down to the river, I noticed the wasps were inactive. They were bunched on the nests. Not a single one was flying about.

At the time I wondered if maybe this meant the weather was to change. Sure enough, late that evening a front moved in, bringing severe thundershowers. These wasps knew the change was coming. And they were ready for it.

A few years back, on a warm October morning, I went squirrel hunting. On the way out I heard on my car radio that a front was moving in. It was not a bad front, but it was enough to drop the temperature somewhat and bring light rain.

By the time I reached the woods, there was a lead-gray overcast from horizon to horizon and a light mist was falling. But instead of driving the squirrels into hiding, it has just the opposite effect. They were everywhere in the treetops. I've never had better squirrel hunting, any time, anywhere.

My deer hunting friends who make regular annual trips into Colorado tell me that one of the best times to hunt mule deer is just before a cold front moves in, triggering snowfall. Cold weather prompts the annual migration into the lower country. Hence, the deer are on the move and consequently more vulnerable to hunters.

Then there was the time on the famous YO Ranch near Kerrville when a sudden front had dropped temperatures and brought rain. It wasn't a severe storm. Just enough to plummet the temperature into the lower 40's and really start the deer moving.

As we drove through the pasture that day we counted numerous bucks. Yet on the previous day we'd driven the same route and spotted very few.

Weather changes influence animals in different ways, depending mostly on whether it is a severe, moderate or mild front.

A severe front might prompt active feeding before it hits. But poor hunting results after it arrives. Then animal activity picks up again as the temperature starts to warm.

A moderate front might keep wildlife more active for a longer time in the day. Normally, deer are up early in the day, bed down during midday, then come out again in late evening. A moderate front may keep the deer moving all day, even after it has arrived.

A mild front may only serve to keep the animals up for perhaps an hour longer in the morning, then bring them out again an hour early in the afternoon.

But despite what it may do, weather can be the outdoorsman's best friend or worst enemy, depending on what he does with it. By observing weather changes and watching what changes they bring in the outdoors scheme, you can use such future changes to your advantage.

Rain is bemoaned by most fishermen. But not by those dedicated to the sport. They know that it may bring some discomfort, but often the very best fishing is to be had during a rain storm.

Skilled outdoorsmen learned long ago that they must cater to the whims of fish and wildlife—not vice-versa.
