EVERYBODY ALWAYS tries to outdo the opposition. We spend billions racing to the moon with Russia, although we're not sure that we'll find anything worth even 10 cents when we get there.

A few years ago, Lubbock church construction involved a spirited race to see who could build the highest tower, even though the height of the spirals isn't likely to get anyone any closer to Heaven.

Benson & Hedges make their cigarettes longer, providing a few chuckles to television watchers, so several of the other brands are out this week with longer cigarettes (10 per cent more cancer in every pack). About the only thing I can see that these do for you is save matches during a day's smoking.

I bought a cigar the other day which was so long I had to set fire to the end, then run around to the other end to drag on it. It made a good conversation piece until it got down as short as the average stogie.

A MICHIGAN legislator, with tongue in cheek, I hope, offered an amendment to a state income tax bill which provides the Michigan Department of Revenue would give taxpayers one trading stamp for each 10 cents paid in taxes.

The department would be permitted to declare double-stamp days whenever it felt generous. The amendment provides the department "shall honor when possible the taxpayer's preference as to variety of stamp," but it also requires that all stamps would be green.

It was given little chance of passage.

SPEAKING of taxes, the central Texas town of Smithville, population 3,500 is planning to do away with all city taxes. The city council already has abolished the personal property tax on automobiles.

The mayor explained that the city is out of debt and felt it could reduce the overall tax picture.

With such a plan, Smithville very well could increase its population in a hurry.

Wide Variety of Units Makes Air Conditioning Possible For All Homes

No matter how old your present home is, no matter what kind of heating system it has, and no matter what your personal preferences are, you can find an effective central air-conditioning system.

The Air-Conditioning and Refrigeration Institute says that the most common type of central cooling system is a "split" system, where the condenser-compressor is located outside the home, and which is combined with a warm air heating system, thus making a single duct system do double duty.

But if you have a hydronic or "wet" heating system, it's easy to add a separate air-conditioning system with its own set of ducts, or convert your heating system to cooling by the installation of a water chiller.

If you have an older home with air ducts that are inadequate for cooling, you can install a second set of ducts.

By EVALYN PARROTT SCOT

Molly, the Cook, was L. P. Hamilton ex-cook and cowboy, who made his home with nesters when the days of ranching being over, left him without an occupation.

Seems nobody knows just exactly when Molly Hamilton hit these parts but he was with the vanguard of wide-brimmed, bespurred riders of the range, then stayed for the nest era of the history of the Empire that was in the making.

It is said the year the Plains were laid out and the Caprock built "Molly" went to work as cook for the old Yellow House, being located at Nine Mile Camp, south of where Littlefield now stands. He sent out some laundry, and the laundryman knowing where the laundry belonged but not knowing the owner's name, marked it "Molly the Cook".

In his earlier days here if a letter came addressed to E. P. Hamilton it might go to the dead litter office, whereas if it was addressed to "Molly the Cook" it was sure to be delivered.

However, after Molly finally settled on Sudan for his mailing address this was solved as he bought the first call box, No. 1, when the new postal fixture arrived. The old type fixture was lettered with the owners or renters names, and Hamilton's name is still printed below Box No. 1.

Tradition is that "Molly" was left as a baby in a cow camp and the four cowboys who found him named him; using each of their surnames; thus his name, James Lee Preston Hamilton. However, it is said in his latter years Molly may have tended to exaggerate.

A fellow with a gift of gab he gave the early settlers many hours of entertainment with his many spirited stories of his cowboy days, and composed songs to sing to the "fairer sex".

He never mentioned having a family they say, but like the surroundings of his early life as a babe in a cow camp, some mysterious tales have been told concerning his death in Portales, New Mexico, in the 1960's. It seems Molly died in an old folks home there and was buried.

Later two ladies in a fine luxurious car, came asking questions concerning Molly and his burial. They supposedly told someone associated with the cemetery they were his daughters. And it appears they were married to ranchers of considerable means and resided in the Northern part of New Mexico. But, if Molly had a family this was a secret he kept as he never divulged this to his early day intimates of the South Plains.

Some tall of the time he was named Justice of Peace of Sudan for a spell. Seems his Honor gave a worthless check and preceded to purchase a typewriter. When asked what for, he replied "Well, I got this letter about this bad check I gave and I can't write, so I bought this typewriter to answer the letter."

Then there was the time he paid down on a new Model T Ford ... when asked how he was going to pay for it this was his answer ... "They told me you can pay down on one, drive it for thirty days, then you receive a notice and you have thirty more days to pay before they come and get it. I don't mean to pay for it, I'll just drive it sixty days, then let it go back."

Molly thoroughly enjoyed his sixty days of roaming the country side in his four wheeled steed before letting it go back.

An old bronc-buster, Molly helped many a nester break a horse and this provided free entertainment for local residents when Molly busted a bronc in the rodeo area west of the school.

Molly's trademarks were his ten gallon hat and the longest cigar he could find that did not always permeate the air in a pleasing manner. Also leather gloves were always draped through the belt loops of his pants. After leaving the Sudan area he worked for a time as a veterinarian at Dora, N. M. before he became incapacitated and was confined to the nest home in Portales.

Molly knew all about the early day cow waddies, segundos and camps. And would always enlighten you he was none other than "Molly, Cow Waddie" since cows were invented, who became just "Molly" after the advent of the farmer.

He passed through this way once when enroute to parts in New Mexico and Arizona. After staying there for a while he returned to the South Plains and hung his hat for many years before returning to the possible state of his origination where he died and was buried.

At the time Molly came to these parts Henry Crosby was foreman of the Yellow House Ranch. Henry at one time lived five miles west of Sudan. Perry Barnes was then in charge of the old "77" and Buddy Thompson was at the Door Key-Major Domo, the latter being the old Rufe O'Keefe ranch; and a fellow by the name of Wilson was running the V spread where Circleback is now located. It became known later as the John Garner home.

D. P. Ernest was the Circleback boss and lived where Dud Kent later lived. The old Muleshoe was one of the big ones with headquarters west of the present town of Muleshoe. The town was named after the ranch and in those days the Muleshoe brand was a familiar sight from one end of the Plains Country to the other.

Old Molly told of one of the first, if not the earliest, farming efforts on the plains. According to Hamilton this venture was in the 1890's just two miles north of Sudan where an adventuresome pioneer started a small feed crop.

The old wells and tanks were still there in 1926 but by then the half-dugout dwelling had long since disappeared.

It is thought by some the old well and tank Molly was referring to was the ones located on the now John Harvey place in 1920.

There was another camp too in those days, about half a mile north of the Santa Fe wells east of Sudan.

But, according to the chronicled tales of Molly, that was before the time of Press Abbott who worked for the Syndicate and helped put an XIT brand on many a yearling. There was also O. K. Yantis, later of Littlefield, who also worked for the XIT.

Along about this time the Martin land was lying just east of Sudan, later known as the Martin Estate, but it was then under lease to the "Hay Hook" people and it is said what they didn't have the Jaynes did. O. L. Smith was foreman of the Hay Hook for a long time.

Charley Barber was foreman of the old Bar N, the spread where S. D. Hay's sister, Berthe, later attended dances and dinners while visiting her brother in 1921. The Bar N was where Bula is now located.

Charley Barber was for a long time with "S" Cattle Company before going to the Bar N. Ernest Huffman was here in those days and was later foreman of the Mashed O and stayed to see his outfit one of the largest left in the state.

John Jaynes had a camp at Bull Lake and out in the sandhills and out in the sandhills southwest of Muleshoe at one time was another camp. This camp, the owner's name forgotten would make good material for folklore as it seems this was where the outlaws gathered, men on the dodge from the older states as well as the new empire. And where one doing a bit of "Scouting" (a term applied to one evading the officers of the law) was always welcome.

Then there is the story of a happening in the early '90s, seems a negro and a white man got lost in the sandhills north of Sudan. It was wintertime and cold. The night the negro froze to death and the next morning the white man tied his dead companion to his horse and rode all day hunting human habitation. The second morning the man, too numbed by the cold to put the corpse on the horse, was compelled to leave it.

Found by the cowboys the white man was unable to retrace his steps to the body of the negro and it could be the bones of his skeleton are still lying in the sandhills today. That is, if it was not one of the skeletons that have been found through the years.

There were many cold spells here during the time of Molly including the winter of 1915 when it dipped to 12 below zero. Cattle by the hundreds froze to death and many a calf lost its ears and tail, presenting a rather bobbed-off look when shipped to market the next spring.

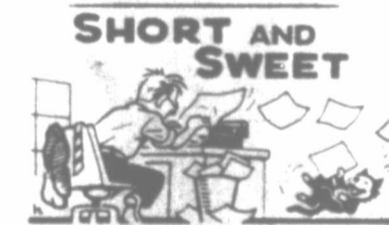

The main road across the Plains at that time ran about where Mr. Rector lived in 1926 and the Joe Wests lived in 1920, this being a mile and a half north of the present site of Sudan.

All these things Molly could tell about as he hung his hat on a peg in the homes of many a nester and called that place home before joining another family in a few weeks to regale them with stories of the past.

If there was ever a dance or a party, old Molly usually managed to come early, in time for supper; but, he did not always come empty handed as he sometimes was tub bearer of fresh fruit and other delicacies not easy to come by in those days.

And if he did make his home here and there, he possibly did enough odd jobs to recompense for the favor of being allowed to share their room and board. If he had a family of his own, or didn't, he had many adopted families, having been here with the changing of one era to another, he felt part-owner of both the old and the new, and adopted new families upon their arrival to the new frontier.

SHORT AND SWEET
Jet-age eyes are subject to more stress and strain than ever before in history. As the modern world becomes more visual, there are more things to see with our eyes. And we travel more, read more and live longer, than our ancestors did.

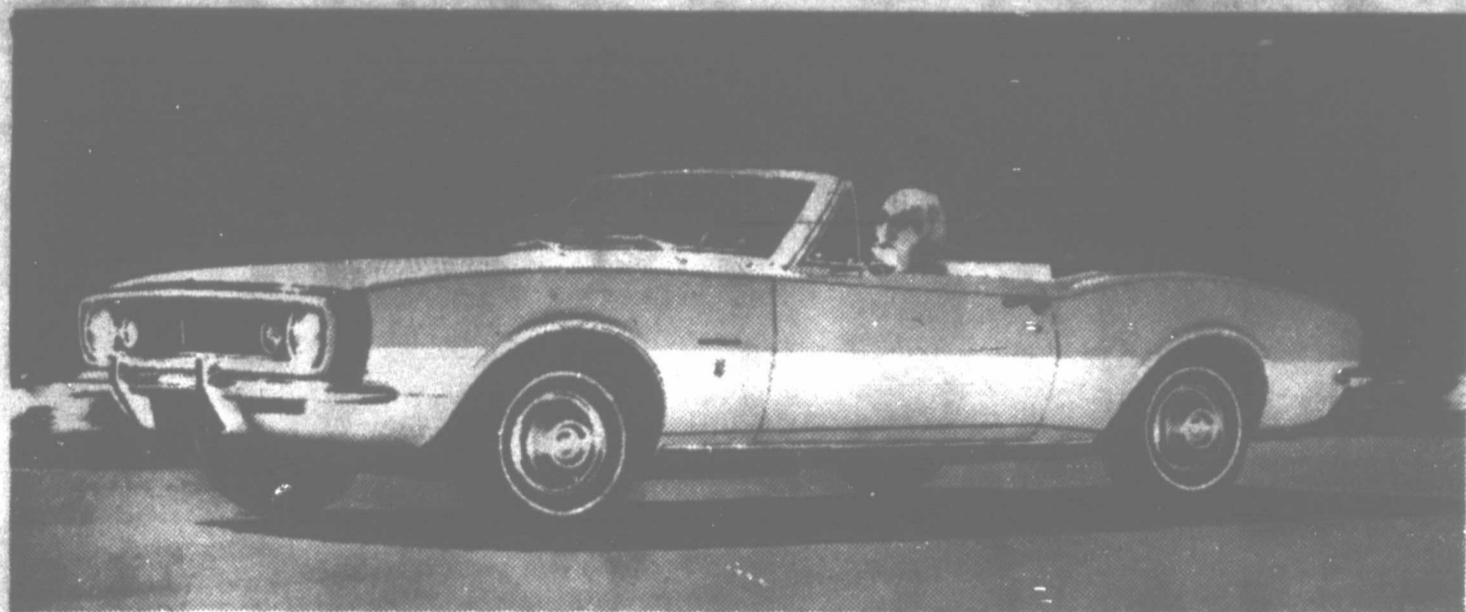

As if you didn't suspect it all along, women are thinner-skinned than men. Anatomically, the feminine skin is just a trifle thinner than the male's, but the difference is actually measurable.

Our loneliness, my friends, you'll find is only just a frame of mind. If loneliness has claimed your time, then kindly analyze this rhyme. To render service day by day. Will drive all loneliness away. It has no place for its abode. Where we will share our neighbor's load.

THE LIVING LORD!!

THE LORD IS COME
St. Luke 4; Acts 10: 34-43

Jesus the Lord is come to save Man from his sin, from death and the grave;
Sent by the Father from heaven above
To show man He cares; His nature is Love.

Tempted and suffering, yet without sin, Jesus of Nazareth went out among men, In the power of God's Spirit He read from "the book"
And all eyes in the synagogue on Him did look.

They wondered about this man's gracious words, Far reading like this had never been heard;
The truth of Elijah and Naaman
He stated
And they would have killed Him, if He had but waited.

He preached, He prayed, He came to seek

And to save the lost, the least, the weak;

He healed all sickness and pain to begin

To show His power on earth to forgive sin.

He called His disciples—He calls us today,
And sends us out, also, to follow His way;
We take up our cross, and selves deny,
Or we're none of His; so on Him rely.

For Jesus died to redeem us from sin,
And gave Himself that others might win Eternal Life—to man freely given, Made pure and holy and fit for God's heaven.

He arose from death, and to heaven ascended,
And sent back the Spirit to guide us who wended Our way on earth, trusting in Him Who loved all sinners and forgave sin in them.

Jesus our Lord is come to save Man from all sin, and death and the grave;
To give us Eternal new Life and Love,
Sent from the Father in heaven above.

He came, He sought, He died, He Lives!
All sin that's repented He always

TEXAS TRAFFIC COST MOUNTS

Texas 1966 traffic cost soon to an all-time high. There were 524,972 traffic accidents, an increase of 53,984 over 1965.
There was a record of 3,406 human lives lost in traffic accidents, an increase of 378 over 1965. Another 208,310 were sent to doctors and hospitals.
Some 890,000 automobiles were damaged or demolished. The economic loss came to an astounding figure of $557,414,000 and increase of $59,327,000 over 1965.

Lamb County's contribution to the 1966 Texas traffic cost was 5 killed, 59 injured, and an estimated property damage of $82,525.00

If the dead traffic victims were stacked in a pile, the dimensions would be about 3.7 miles in length, 1.1 miles in width, or 5 of a mile in height.

For a descriptive look at the economic cost of the accidents.
If a football field was completely covered with one dollar bills, then a layer of two dollar bills, then a layer of five dollar bills, then a layer of ten dollar bills, then a layer of twenty dollar bills, then a layer of fifty dollar bills, then a layer of one hundred dollar bills, then a layer of five hundred bills and on top of these eight layers of paper money, dump 8,806 tons of silver dollars, this would represent the economic loss in Texas for the year 1966.

If the problem is serious today, what about tomorrow? The state will continue to grow.
The population will increase, which means more drivers and automobiles and more miles driven. If the present problem continues, in Texas by 1975, 1,000,000 accidents will result in 7,000 persons killed and 500,000 persons injured.

INSTALLATION OF THE 1967-68 SUDAN PTA OFFICERS

New cotton legislation must be drafted and passed before 1970 if we are to have a cotton program after 1969. Long, hard fighting is anticipated to get the legislation acceptable to the entire cotton belt.

American Cotton Producer Associates, made up of representatives from major cotton associations across the belt including the Plains Cotton Growers, will meet May 23 in Washington to begin groundwork.
All differences must be ironed out before the producers can present a united front in order not to wind up on the short end of the stick in 1970.

Changes in the current program administration is almost a certainty for 1968.

Skip-row rules are likely to change, permitting some increase, but this may not be enough. The only sure way to get more cotton planted would be to change the mandatory diversion rate or do away with it altogether. Payment rate on acreage voluntarily diverted could be lowered to make planting more attractive than diverting. This would be unpopular with the producers and therefore would not guarantee an increase, but would reduce program costs.

LAND GIFT TO UNIVERSITY

The University of Houston has been authorized by the Texas Legislature to accept a gift of 50 acres of land to be used as the site of the university's Clear Lake City Center. Friendswood Development Company, a subsidiary of Humble Oil & Refining Company, will donate the land, which is near NASA's Manned Spacecraft Center southeast of Houston. John B. Turner, left, president of Friendswood, and Dr. Philip G. Hoffman, president of the university, examine the site on a photographic map. The University of Houston plans to construct a $3 million building on the property in 1969 to serve personnel of NASA and aerospace firms, as well as other residents of the area.

By Vern Sanford
Most fishermen pay little attention to their hooks. Some never even bother to straighten them.

This is a pity, because the hook is the vital part of the tackle. Fishermen pay for this neglect by getting strikes instead of hooked fish.

That oft referred to "big one" that got away wouldn't do so half as often if fishermen knew as much about hooks as they do about the rest of their tackle.

So, let's look at ten of the well known patterns and see which we should select for various types of fishing.

SPROAT: This is a parabolic-bend hook with a straight point. One of the best and strongest early designs for fresh-water fishing. It's used a lot for dressing wet flies.

MODEL PERFECT: Ideal for dressing both wet and dry flies. A perfectly round bend, all-purpose hook with a wide gap. (Usually made of light wire.)

LIMERICK: Has a half-round, parabolic bend with a straight point, designed for superior strength. Excellent for dressing nymphs and wet flies when heavier hook is needed.

KIRBY: A round-bend hook similar to the "Sproat" except that the point is offset, or "Kirbed" for penetration at an angle with the shank. This helps prevent the fish from slaking loose. (Used mainly for bait fishing before the superior "Eagle Claw" was designed for the same purpose.)

O'SHAUGNESSY: Resembles the "Sproat" and "Limerick" except that its point is bent slightly outward. Usually made of heavy wire for extra strength. Preferred for dressing heavy wet flies and in bait fishing for heavy-mouthed slow-biting fish. Also excellent for trotline fishing.

ABERDEEN: Slightly squared round-bend with extra width between point and shank.

When minnow baited, its point will extend out of the fish rather than being imbedded in the bait. Its light wire avoids excessive puncturing, thus keeping the bait-fish alive longer. It also is a good light-wire nymph hook. Made to bend before breaking. Easily retrieved from snags.

CARLISLE: Round-bend, extra long shank and a straight offset point. Especially designed for minnow and night crawler fishing because its length helps prevent the fish from swallowing the hook.

SWASH: Short, extra-strong round-bend hook with a very long point. Designed for commercial salt water bait fishing to penetrate the hard mouths of big fish as opposed to them from throwing the hook.

Quite often it is made of corrosion-resistant metal.

PENNEL: Nearly unused today, this historic design was an early attempt to provide the ideal hook by bending the return part of the shank and barb toward the eye for a direct line of pull. Provides poor hooking power since the shank was bent inward rather than merely the point of the barb.

However, the hook is worthy of note because it influenced the design of the greatly superior "Eagle Claw".

EAGLE CLAW: Often termed the greatest modern improvement for hooking and holding fish. This American design correctly provides a direct line of pull by the point being curved inward in line with the eye. It's the most popular design for bait fishing.
(Over a million of these hooks are made every day.) Eagle Claws also are used for dressing flies and for attachment to other types of lures.

American hooks are used less frequently for small wet and dry flies and for salmon flies than are hooks made by the famous old manufacturers in England and in the Scan-danavian countries. This is not a matter of quality. It is because our manufacturers do not produce as complete a range of designs and sizes in turned up and turned down eyed hooks considered ideal for the purpose by discriminating fly dressers.

What we lack in this field is overwhelmingly made up for by our amazingly efficient methods for producing fine hooks for bait fishing and for lures used both in fresh and in salt water.

Since hooks for bait fishing comprise 95% of hook usage, America's position in the small fly hook field is far from secure.

It is very important to remember that cheap hooks are not a bargain. They may be brittle and will snap, or they may be soft and will straighten. Poorly made hooks are the main reason why fishermen don't hook and hold fish. Best insurance is to buy hooks manufactured under well known names.

Remember too... when buying lures... the names of reputable makers usually are a guarantee of high hook quality.
