WOODWORK BY DALTON

SOME OF those disgruntled about the preliminary Census reports probably put this item under their Suspicious Confirmed department:

The Associated Press reported from Washington that "High-altitude airplane photographic flights over 26 U. S. cities are providing data for census studies, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said today."

The story went on to say that the flights 10 miles above the earth were to gather "standardized information on urban areas and help relate land usage to statistical data gathered during the Census."

Still, a lot of people immediately grumbled, "I knew they must be counting our people from 10 miles up in the air."

I NEVER HAD much of an opinion about Defense Secretary Melvin Laird one way or the other until the other day when I read something that elevates him, so far as I am concerned.

It was reported that on his orders, workmen are building a wood-paneled meditation room in the Pentagon. A Defense Dept. spokesman said this: "Secretary Laird, a regular visitor to the prayer room on Capitol Hill, strongly believed there was a similar need for a non-denominational place for meditation in the Pentagon."

At a convention of military chaplains in April, Laird voiced his philosophy: "We adhere to the principle of separation of church and state. But this principle does not imply a separation of man from God."

Devotional

By HAZEL HOUSE
Scripture: Philippians 4:5-8, 19; II Timothy 2:3-4; Hebrews 13:5-9; Romans 12:2.
"Think on these things."
A life given over to the "trivial" as the sole concern of the mind will beat the spirit into a hardened path into which the seed (God's Word) falls and finds no lodgment.

No emotion or truth can live in the mind unless it renews itself in experience.
William C. Finch wrote the above statements and in study and soul-searching, I find them coming back to me, so I ask you to read them and prayerfully ask yourself as I do: What emotion or thought in my mind do I want to keep, to sink down deep into my soul and become a part of me, and to renew itself in experience? Also, which emotion or thought do I want cast out of my mind, and in trying to follow Jesus' example by saying, "Get thee hence, Satan"? Do not entertain an emotion or thought and thus allow it to renew and multiply itself in experience if it dishonors the name of our Father.
Salvation from sin (and from the death penalty of sin) into righteousness and eternal life is an experience. This experience between an individual and God. When a person admits his or her sinfulness and asks God's forgiveness and help to turn from that sinfulness, immediately God hears and answers. I know He does, for He said so and He heard and answered me. Knowing, his or her sins are forgiven, when that sinner believes and accepts Jesus as Savior and Lord, he or she is born again spiritually and has become an eternal child of the Eternal God! God, the Almighty Father, whose Word assures His children that "God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able, but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it."

Then, after we have salvation as a free gift, together with God's Holy Spirit, His Word and with His other children we "work out" our salvation — experiencing the new thoughts, the new emotion, the will of God, day by day as we grow up from a crawling spiritual infant into a walking, running, growing-up Christian.

Growing up both physically and spiritually can be painful at times. But just because we may lose a battle does not mean we will lose the war! The war we fight is not one of guns, planes, rockets or missiles — not flesh and blood that we fight, but a war against the powers of darkness that only our faith to believe in God can overcome.
So, let brotherly love continue. Put Christ on the throne of your heart and will and mind, (give all of yourself to Him just as you are) and remember in victorious joy that God's Word of promise says,

"I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee."

'TEXAS' DRAMA OPENS JUNE 26

Five miles of flags will line the streets of Canyon, Texas this summer whenever the "Texas" musical drama is playing. They will lead travelers to the door of the box office which is in Canyon, and then will salute them on the drive from the city to the Amphitheatre in the nearby Palo Duro Canyon State Park, there, the great lights reveal the "Texas" musical drama which plays nightly except Sundays from June 26 through August 31.

These flags will herald the fifth season of Paul Green's musical drama "Texas". This is a spectacular blend of music and dance, drama and sound played by a cast of seventy five people. Their stage is at the base of a 600 foot cliff. Their story is the strains and celebrations of the settling of this area and their songs are the calls of the early western days.

Each night the bugle rivets the attention of the audience on the lone rider who bears his flag to the top of the high cliff.

Each night the thunder and lightning of a great storm crackle through the audience. And each night the actors tell of the land and its grip on them until people go away and say "So that's the way it was!"

Should We All Be One?

By DAVE LLEWELLYN
"Before I built a wall, I'd ask to know
What I was walling in, or walling out,
And to whom I was like to give offense.
Something there is that doesn't love a wall,
That wants it down."
—From "Mending Walls" by Robert Frost.

Walls are for privacy, for separation, for exclusion. We wall ourselves in socially by homes and cars and clothing — and we do this equally rigidly, whether we are poor or rich.

We wall ourselves in personally by habits and prejudices that superficially assess and condemn other people.

We wall ourselves in psychologically by patterns of life, and self-criticism, and discouragement, which unfairly depress our potential.

When someone begins to wall himself in physically — by refusing to leave his neighborhood or home, or by locking himself away from others in his house or in his room — it is because he has already been imprisoned invisibly.

Most of us physically retreat from people only rarely, just long enough — into the office, or bedroom, or vacation — to regain our composure. Spiritually, however, our retreats from one another are more frequent — and, often, permanent.

Christian Unity Desirable

Vast segments of Christian society have walled themselves — "barricaded" might be more accurate — permanently away from other types of true believers. So they have become more "denominationalists" than Christians.

Sunday School Lesson for June 7, 1970

Ecumenism is not to be desired for the humanistic rationale under which it is usually offered. Yet unity of the body of Christ is desirable.

Jesus' great prayer included: "I do not ask in behalf of these alone, but for those also who believe in Me through their word, that they may all be one." (John 17:20, 21)

The earliest examples of denominational squabbles were between Jewish believers and Gentile believers. Their problem was little different from our problem today.

They were divided from each other by walls of "do's and don'ts," by invalid laws, just as we often fence ourselves in from profitable fellowship by laws which have been picked up, not from the Bible, but from our class culture.

Barrier Broken Down

Paul says, concerning such divisions, that Jesus "Himself is our peace, Who made both groups into one and broke down the barrier of the dividing wall." (Ephesians 2:14)

The proper basis of ecumenism is made clear in this Ephesian passage. Peace in the whole church is made "in Christ Jesus" and "by the blood of Christ" — "by reconciling . . . the law" — "by reconciling to God" — "through the cross", "in one spirit" — the Holy Spirit — "having been built on the foundation of the apostles and prophets."

The New Testament laments the walls that believers have constructed between each other by artificial rules. It urges all believers to accept the whole teaching of the New Testament — to be "made one" "through Christ Jesus."

Camper's Corner

For the camper, spring means a return to the great outdoors. Today, here are some questions that are asked frequently at this time of the year—with answers that will help you no matter the season:

We are hooked on camping in our family but our camper is small and my wife can't get the knack of packing lightly. Any suggestions?

By eliminating the unnecessary ounces and inches, the problem will take care of itself. Your wife may want to try cutting towels down to half-size. Items that can do double duty—like a canvas tarp—can also help. For a makeshift basin, spread the tarp over a shallow hole you've dug and fill the tarp with water. With grommets attached to each corner, the tarp becomes a tent or windbreak.

We're planning a weekend camping trip. Since we will be backpacking part of the time, are there any special precautions we should follow?

You have chosen a form of advanced camping that requires excellent physical condition—particularly, your feet! Make sure they are in good condition, and if you've recently bought new hiking boots, break them in around the house and yard. Sudden downpours can ruin quality boots—and cause foot discomfort if they aren't water-resistant. Use Camp Dry, the new silicone water-repellent from Dow Corning, on the uppers and soles for long-lasting protection against moisture. (This new aerosol product also can be used on canvas items in your gear.)

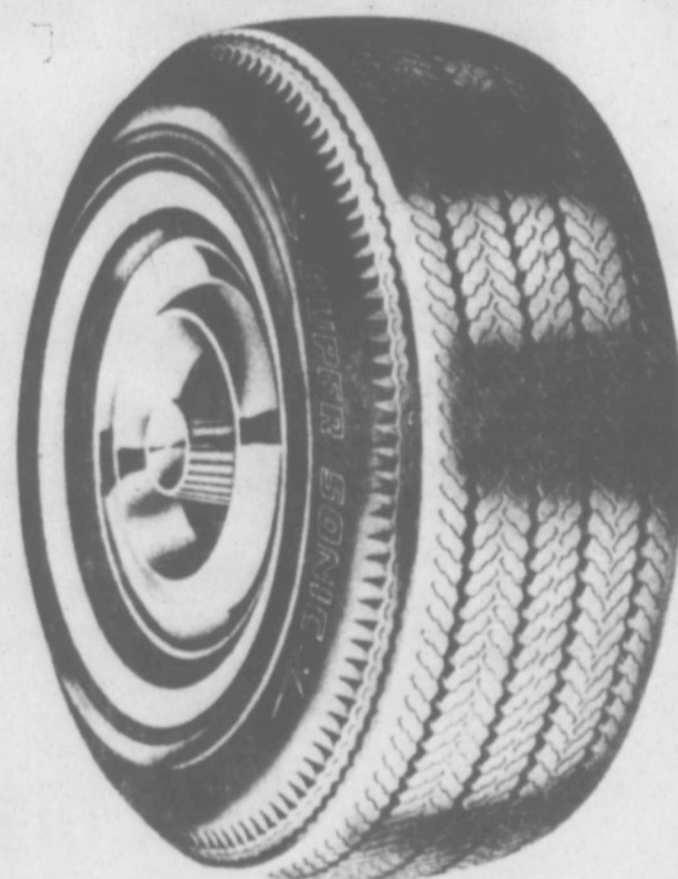

I think the best part of a fishing trip is cooking—and eating—the catch. But if the campsite is on fairly uneven terrain, is there any way to build a campfire that will stay in one spot and not roll?

The secret is to locate two fairly large logs with a short length of limb still attached. Trim the logs and line them up about one foot apart. Next, force the short limb on each into the ground. This will keep them from rolling. Build your fire between the two logs, and start cooking. You can position a heavy skillet or grill over the logs, but remember that when flame is confined to a small area, it will cook food much faster. Don't let that trout burn!

YEAR ROUND SCHOOL SET IN KENTUCKY

Texas schools are "out" for another summer vacation. Except for limited summer school programs, the schools have banked the fires of learning until next September.

And from Louisville, Ky., came word last week that the schools there are going to replace their traditional nine-month school year with a "year-round school" by September, 1971.

The idea of a "12-month school" has been bouncing around the country for at least 50 years. Some educators see it as a possible way to save money in school construction costs, make better use of facilities and personnel, and provide improved instruction.

Others, including parents, object to the idea. Arguments against the "year-round school" in Texas include these:

1. Texas first should adequately finance its present school program.
2. Children should not be forced to attend class without air conditioning during the sweltering summertime.
3. Added building maintenance and depreciation would increase costs, as would added salaries for teaching personnel.

To seek answers to these questions, Texas school systems are authorized by state law to try the "extended year" idea as a pilot operation—either on a four-quarter, or on a tri-semester basis.

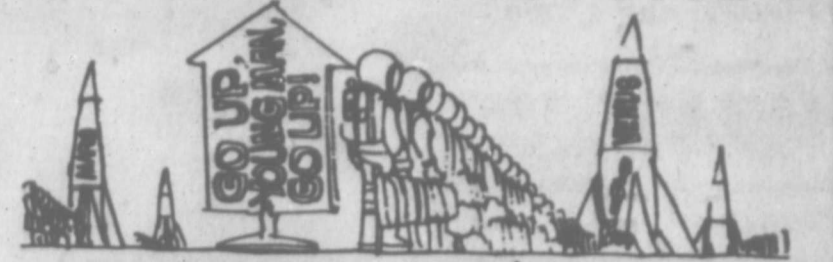

The Legislature in 1967 authorized pilot four-quarter programs, and in 1969 authorized three-semester pilot programs in schools that operate 12 months.

Only two Texas school districts are known to be experimenting with the new plans. One high school has been "piloting" a tri-semester program for the past two years. Another high school has asked for, and received, approval from the Texas Education Agency to try the four-quarter system for the first time in 1970-71.

Meanwhile, many Texas school buildings will be used for part of the summer. In 1968-69, nearly 117,000 youngsters attended summer school classes in 418 Texas school districts, and 63,565 took driver education. The figures probably will be higher this summer. These classes were financed by tuition charges and local and federal funds. No state funds are available for summer school operation.

An interim committee authorized by the 61st Legislature is now studying the feasibility of four-quarter public school operation. Members are Representatives Jack Blanton, Carrollton, chairman; Delwis Jones, Lubbock; and Dan Kubiak, Rockdale; and Supt. H. M. Landrum, Big Spring ISD; Leon R. Graham, of the Texas Education Agency, Austin; and A. H. Hooser of the Texas State Teachers Association, Austin.

Send a letter to North Vietnam.

Right now hundreds of Americans are being held captive in North Vietnam. A few prisoners have made it back. They talk about bamboo cages. Vicious beatings. Malnutrition. Humiliation.

But the North Vietnamese will tell us nothing. And it's this silence that makes our appeal more urgent.

For the families at home, there is no word on who's alive. Who's dead. Or even who's being held. There is nothing. Except the anguish of not knowing.

Maybe you can change this. By writing to the one man who can change it: The President of North Vietnam.

Ask him to release the names of prisoners, allow them to write to their families, and let the Red Cross inspect the prisons to insure proper medical treatment and living conditions.

Remind him that he is bound by the 1949 Geneva Convention which his country signed. And by the Istanbul resolution.

North Vietnamese leaders do care about American public opinion. And if they think they can gain something by bowing to it, they will.

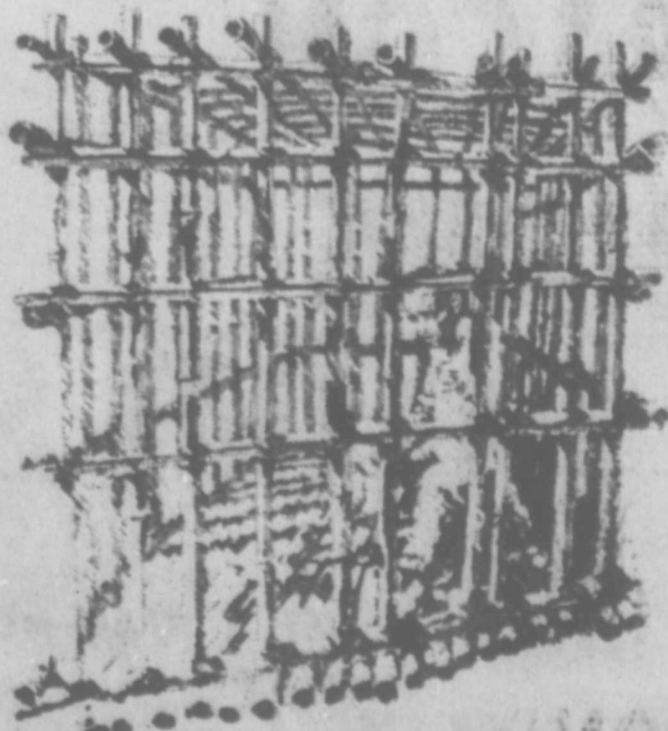

But one letter won't do it. Or a thousand. Maybe it will take millions. So we've got to write now. All of us. And often.

Write a letter tonight. And send it to: Office of the President, Democratic Republic of Vietnam, Hanoi, North Vietnam.

It'll cost you a quarter. But it might save a life.

THE AMERICAN RED CROSS

Maybe they'll open it.

THOUGHT

Best of thoughts most always start from the region of the heart
That's the place where we acquire thoughts that prove our hearts desire.
Evil thoughts won't stay around
Where the best of thoughts are found,
So when searching for the best,
Take a look within your breast.
