WOODWORK

BY DALTON

WE PAID a brief visit to downtown Dallas the other day, and if ever I saw a place which would give a country boy ulcers in a couple of weeks, that's it. Of course, I'm sure that many other urban areas are just as bad, and I guess some possibly could be worse, though it's hard to imagine. We were down there for the state convention of Texas State Teachers Assn., and they met in the nice new convention center right in the heart of Dallas, and within walking distance of the major hotels.

There is absolutely no logic in building a convention center in a downtown urban area, except from the standpoint of the merchants and the hotels, which surely must have underwritten the project. It would make a lot more sense to the convention-goer to have the center built out in the middle of the King Ranch or some such place, where there is plenty of room.

We were stuck into a crackerbox of a room at the Adolphus, and everywhere in the hotel there were wall-to-wall people. We couldn't get our car into the hotel garage because it was filled, so we had to park in the street they recommended. We wound up putting it in a parking garage four blocks up the street. When we left, we decided to carry our suitcases to the parking garage because that would be easier than trying to drive around the 10 blocks necessary to get back in front of the hotel on the one-way streets.

The suitcase weighed 40 pounds when we left the hotel, and 197 when we reached the parking garage.

At one point (it was 11:40 a.m. on a Friday) it took 10 minutes to go one block. All I have to say is that it would take a fantastic salary offer to get me into a job requiring that I work in downtown Dallas (or downtown anywhere of similar size).

One of the consolations of living in smaller towns where business maybe isn't as great as most merchants would like for it to be is that at least we don't have the congestion problems. Our only congestion problem is trying to breathe on a windy day.

PONTIUS PILATE

By DAVID JOHNSON

After the mockery of a trial before Caiaphas, the High Priest, they then took Jesus to the Governor's palace. Pontius Pilate was the governor of the province of Judea. In this trial of Jesus before Pilate, we see the most dramatic account of a trial in the entire New Testament.

The first question that comes to mind about this trial is why did the Jews bring Jesus before a Roman governor. In the time of Jesus the Jews were subject to the Romans. Because of this fact, they did not have the right to carry out the death penalty and the death penalty was exactly what they sought for Christ. It was for this purpose that the Jews were seeking to use Pilate. They could not legally stone Jesus, but Pilate could have Him crucified for them.

The Jews had charged Jesus with blasphemy, but they knew that Pilate would not convict Him on that type of charge. So, they produced a charge of rebellion and political insurrection. They accused Jesus of claiming to be a king and they knew that this accusation was a lie. In this act we see the hatred of the Jews, twisting the truth into an out-and-out lie.

As we take a closer look at Pilate, we see a man who knew that the charges the Jews made were a series of lies. He knew that Jesus was completely innocent. This is clear, and it is also clear that Pilate was deeply impressed by Jesus. Pilate definitely did not wish to condemn Jesus to death. Now, those things being true, the fact remains that Pilate did condemn Jesus to die. And the question rings out far and clear, "Why, Pilate?" "Why did you do this horrible deed when all the time you knew you were doing wrong?" And then we see Pilate was a man on the spot.

Pilate had allowed some in-fractions to take place in the process of governing Judea. He could be reported to the Emperor for these incidents. He had already been reported once and if reported again, he would be relieved of his position.

We have to give Pilate credit for trying to evade placing the death penalty. He first tried to get the Jews to handle the whole thing themselves. However, he had to deal with Him. No one can deal with Him ourselves.

He then tried to find a way of escape for Jesus by releasing a prisoner according to custom. This failed when the crowd chose Barabbas. He then ordered Jesus to be punished by scourging Him, hoping this would be a successful compromise. He continued to try to appeal to the mob for His release but was unsuccessful and finally gave in to their wishes.

And, here is the tragedy of the life of Pilate. He met Jesus. He was impressed by Him. He sought to know the truth. He had one of the most dramatic chances in all of history to take a stand for Christ, but he did not have the courage to defy the world in spite of his past.

Will you stand for Him or choose the way of the crowd?

WALK A CRUCIBLE OF FIRE

By Evalyn Parrott Scott

March 23, in the year of our Lord, 1971. The scream of a siren brought forth the Scott two--stopped dead in their tracks at Gods Creation, Star of the East and a crescent moon, above Mason Chapter 806. A sight to restore the faith, the creator of all is in charge of the Greatest Show on Earth -- providing inspiration and thankfulness -- to be able to enjoy such a splendid display.

MY CUP RUNNETH OVER however dry it may be. Walk with God, hold our your hand--keep the faith via sky-scanning meditation.

The clock said six in the morn and had the phone not been temporarily disconnected would have got on the line to say, come over the Scott way--a thing of beauty you will see.

Will find out later if the fire was disastrous--wish those who were burdened could have been with two Lamb County Pioneers the third day of the week.

No weeping no wailing--out Scotrow of Sudan, after a trip to visit Cousin Gladys Hardy in Big Spring, via San Angelo way. The head of the house discovered a glass of water is a blessing. Project Teacup now underway--in San Angelo the citizens do not mention the name of the river, hold their breath when you cross the bridge--Water a precious commodity--may disappear evaporatively speaking. Thankful are we in Lamb County there is water under the ground.

Let us preserve to a drop, not a drop waste. Cousin Gladys, who made the Fort Worth Cow Town scene neons ago with ye writer is now in a new game. From teacher to director of a Museum, a start from scratch business, including sweeping, mopping, restoring old furniture--restoring of the faith.

Molded Interior Trim Is Predicted for Autos

By 1975 a special polyurethane coating called Neothane, which looks and feels like vinyl, will be used in car interiors, according to The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, which is developing the new trim material.

Neothane coating is spray-applied so it becomes a part of foam-padded parts rather than a covering for them. This eliminates stitches that can break and fabric that can tear, says J. A. Lucas, general manager of Goodyear's Foam Products Division.

Neothane coatings are applied by spraying the inside of a mold with the material, then filling the mold with a liquid foam. Heat expands the foam and chemically interlocks it with the coating. The finished product is a single-construction component.

How to Save— And Go Broke

"Wanted: Anyone. To manage my finances while I am away on a business trip. No experience necessary."

Suppose you saw such an offer. How would you respond? While you are thinking—here is how three other people reacted to a similar proposal: There was a man who went on a business trip and left with one of his associates $5,000, with another $2,000, and with a third $1,000—all with the instructions to manage his money to the best of their ability until he returned.

Too Much Caution
The safe thing to do, of course, would have been to put the money in the bank where, at a rate of about two per cent per year (interest minus inflation) the money would be gradually increased. Losing money this way is almost impossible, and the investment is certain to make a small return. However, none of the three chose this procedure.

The first and second investors put their money into stocks and business ventures, risking $7,000 of their friend's savings. But they knew that was what their friend expected. He was pleased, on his return, to find that, together, these two had increased his capital to $14,000!

The third recipient was cautious, ultra-cautious. He abhorred risks. His $1,000 trust did not go to the stock market or to business investments. Not even to the bank. He hid it. When the owner returned, he was able to give him back the money—nothing more.

The conclusion of the incident was that the first and second men received handsome dividends, while the third man was fired and his funds given to the Back to the ad. Would you accept such an offer?

Offer Genuine
Now that you have had time to make up your mind, you should be told that this offer is real. However, it is not physical, but spiritual. To accept the offer, you must accept Jesus Christ, and anyone who has accepted Jesus Christ has received from Him some investment to manage, whether he is aware of this or not.

The story above is a parable concerning Christians' attitudes toward the potential God has given them.

Christians are all account executives, stewards of someone else's—that is, God's—investments. The money in this story represents potential. God has given all believers some, but not equal, potential for His service. The parable concludes: "To everyone who has shall more be given, and he shall have an abundance; but from the one who does not have, even what he does have shall be taken away."

How can someone who does not have anything have something taken away from him? If he has potential that has been unused, like the buried money, he has nothing and, because he has not used it, even the potential itself will be taken away.

The greatest and smallest potentials, if unrealized, are of equal value—nothing. Do not be jealous. Do not disparage what you have. Enjoy fulfilling your own potential.

THOUGHT FOR MEDITATION

There are sermons found in every flower. They entertain us hour by hour; We watch the many colors glow, And wonder how each one can grow. An idea we cannot advance, Is that a flower might come by chance; The tint, the shade of every flower, Is painted by a higher power.
