WOODWORK TIME CHANGES!

BY DALTON

WELL, it's nearly Halloween and time for such creeps as Dracula, Frankenstein's monster and Tiny Tim to crawl out of their hiding places. Look closely at midnight Saturday and you may even see Phyllis Diller or Bella Abzug outlined against the moon.

Really—and my house probably will get bombed on account of this—it seems that there is less hoodlumism around West Texas towns on Halloween night than there was when I was a hoodlum, and even considerably less than there was just a few years ago.

I remember one Halloween night in Sudan several years ago when there was almost a riot, with cotton trailers burned in the street, and a few kids wound up incarcerated in the local bastille. But kids nowadays seem to be interested in other things, with a few exceptions. Maybe they just have matured faster than they used to. Adults, too, may be showing more restraint on Halloween.

Oh, yes, I know all about razor blades in the apples and such stories, but most of this stuff is from up north somewhere, where you have to be a little bit touched just to live.

There seems to be less trick-or-treating, with too-big kids out trying to haul in a lot of undeserved loot, and less vandalism, although what vandalism there is seems to be worse than it once was.

I surely do hope the youngsters around these parts don't make me look like an idiot by tearing up Jake Saturday night.

IF YOU WANT to learn to speak Swahili and Russian, all you have to do is go to high school. One particular city's high schools, I guess, since the only ones I know of which teach these languages are in Dallas. That's true of Swahili, anyway, although we understand Fort Worth schools teach Russian.

Until I read all that in an Associated Press dispatch, I wasn't even aware there was such a language as Swahili. I had a vague idea a Swahili was the insignia of Nazi Germany.

City Gets Garbage Truck

The City of Sudan recently purchased a new city garbage collection truck. The 1971 2-ton Chevrolet was purchased from Cleburne Truck and Body Sales, Inc. of Cleburne who manufacture and install beds especially equipped for garbage collection. The truck cost some $8,250 and has many modern and convenient features. It compresses the collections enabling city employees to collect from the entire city in two loads. All ordinary garbage and trash can be handled by the truck. Also, the way the truck is built prevents trash from blowing out on the way to the dump. However, for large tree limbs, residents are asked to contact city hall for the regular delivery truck.

The City of Sudan recently received their first dividend on the city sales tax. The check for $1361.00 for the quarter of April, May and June.

The Sudan Hornets saddened the Happy fans Friday night as Sudan came home with their first district win of 28-21.

Happy opened the scoring first on a 16-yard run and a kick for the point after giving them a brief 7-point lead. Sudan retaliated quickly with Roger Boyles running 17 yards for the first Sudan touchdown. Bo Lance kicked for the extra point to tie up the game.

Sudan seemed to really start clicking when Boyles went in again for the second time on a 5-yard burst. Lance ran-in for the conversion points. Then Lance connected on a pass to Roger Bellar for another six points also in the second quarter. So, Sudan led 20-7 at the half.

The Sudan Hornets tightened up in the third period and held the Happy Cowboys until Bill Looney ran 24 yards for a touchdown. Sudan detoured the Happy plans for a two-point conversion. The Hornets penetrated deep within the Happy grounds with Lance squeaking over on a one-yard keeper for Sudan's final score.

plate. Classes to be honored this year are the graduates of 1930, 1940, 1950, 1960 and 1970.

The Cowboys weren't downed yet as they came back in the final minutes to score another touchdown and added two points for conversion, giving Sudan a 28-21 victory.

The statistics show that it was a close game with Sudan edging Happy in total yardage 308-289. One big difference was that Sudan intercepted three Cowboy passes. Lance nabbed one of these, Larry Baker got another, with Terry Graves also grabbing one.

Roger Boyles led the rushing for Sudan by gaining 99 yards on 18 carries. Lance completed four passes, three to Bellar (including the one for 25 yards for a touchdown) for 60 yards; one to Hanna for eight yards.

Mike Hedges and Eugene Lopez were outstanding defensive players as was Keith Downs and versatile Bo Lance. Hedges had 23 assists and one unassisted tackle.

Sudan will host Bovina in the Hornet Stadium tomorrow, Friday, with action to begin at 8 p. m. Sudan and Bovina are tied for district play, each having one win and three losses. Happy defeated Bovina earlier in the season and the Mustangs were downed by Kress last week.

Vega is still leading the district with a 4-0 record although Hart came within one point of defeating them last week.

The Sudan Junior Varsity came on strong Thursday night and blanked the Bulldogs from Anton 46-0. Terry Hatch began the scoring for Sudan in the first quarter by returning a punt 90 yards for a touchdown.

The second quarter belonged to Pat Hedges as he scored three touchdowns; one from 87 yards, one from 45 yards and one from the three-yard-line. He also blocked a punt in the third quarter and the final score for Sudan in the final period, giving him five touchdowns and a total of 225 yards for the night. He also blocked a punt in the third quarter which Richard Tamplin ran all the way back for a touchdown with Curtis Chester going over for the conversion points.

Also outstanding on offense was Carroll Legg who gave some key blocks from the end position. Tamplin also threw some blocks especially on the 87 yard run by Hedges.

Outstanding on the defensive side was Hedges with 39 tackles at linebacker, Curtis Chester with 18 tackles from safety position, Tommy Seymour, with 15 tackles, Jimmy Markham with 13 tackles and Mart Davison with 15 tackles.

Sudan racked-up 351 yards on the ground, compared to only 120 for Anton.

The Hornets will go to Bovina today, Thursday, along with the seventh and eighth grade teams. Action will begin at 4:30 p. m.

MISS WILSON PLEDGES KO JO KAI CLUB

Miss Sharon Ann Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Wilson, is pledging Ko Jo Kai women's social club during the 1971 fall semester at Abilene Christian College.

A 1970 graduate of Sudan High School, Miss Wilson is a sophomore music major at ACC. She is a member of the Big Purple Band, Chorales, Omega Roe Alpha, and has been a member of the dean's honor roll for four semesters.

Constant change and the threat of change in farm laws and in the way farm laws are administered is one of the most frustrating and economically damaging phenomena facing today's farmers.

This was a comment elicited from Donald Johnson, Executive Vice President of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. on hearing of proposed changes in the regulations governing the payment limitation for 1972.

"Investments in agriculture of necessity are long term investments and can be recouped only by long range planning," Johnson continued, "and this is made extremely difficult when farmers have no assurance of continuity in government programs."

As a part of the Agricultural Act of 1970 Congress imposed a $55,000 per person per crop limitation on government payments. Farmers naturally and justifiably assumed that the limitation would hold for 1971, 1972 and 1973, the life of the law. But even before the Act was signed into law there were attempts in Congress to lower the limit to $20,000. There were other attempts to change the law this year. Fortunately they were unsuccessful, by a narrow margin of votes, and the higher level still stands.

But farmers are fully aware that proponents of a lower limit have not given up. They will try again next year.

"And as if this were not enough," Johnson says, "the Department now proposes to change the rules laid down last year for enforcing the payment limitation, and this is almost too much."

Johnson points out that the 1970 Act instructs the Secretary of Agriculture to issue regulations defining "persons" and prescribing rules pertaining to the payment limit. This was done in 1970, and "This action, no less than the action of Congress in passage of the 1970 Act, constituted a three-year commitment to farmers — a commitment we had every right to believe would be kept," Johnson said.

Under the regulations set out in 1970, corporations were considered as separate persons, and the payment eligibility of minority stockholders was not affected by payments earned by the corporation. Some farmers no doubt have borrowed money to invest in corporation-type agricultural enterprises on the assumption that they would have three years to repay borrowed capital from corporation earnings, and that their eligibility to receive production payments on separate and individual farming operations would not be reduced for three years.

The proposed regulation change would now tell these farmers that if they own more than 10 percent of the corporation stock their individual payment limit for 1972 and 1973 will be reduced by an amount equal to their pro-rata share of payments earned by the corporation.

"This is a drastic, basic change from the previous rule," Johnson stated. "It will have unconscionably adverse effects on a number of producers, and we are going to resist the change as strongly as we can."

Other proposed amendments to the regulations, titled "Changes in Farming Operations," would nullify perfectly legal and acceptable restructuring of farm situations made last year in accordance with the regulations in effect at that time, according to Johnson. Johnson believes the changes are being proposed as a result of pressure brought to bear on USDA by legislators motivated by issues more political than economic.

"And if farmers are ever to achieve any semblance of an equitable return on their contribution to this country's well being," he concludes, "farm laws and administrative decisions must be based on economics and fairness, not on politics."

Area residents filing for social security benefits this year should include the proper documents to avoid any delay, said John G. Hutton, social security district manager at the federal building.

"Most people know they will need their social security number and birth record," he said. "However, one record frequently overlooked but usually required is the W-2 form or copy of their 1970 income tax return for the last calendar year."

Hutton said those planning to file claims for social security benefits this year should take their W-2 forms and a copy of their 1970 income tax return with them.

"By having the necessary records with you when you file you will be assured of receiving your benefits at the earliest possible date," said Hutton.

He pointed out that it would be possible to handle the claim by telephone and then mail the W-2 form or tax return to the office later.

LEWIS LLEWELLYN

Subversion

In San Rafael, Calif., Judge Harold J. Haley was kidnapped from his courtroom and murdered on August 7, 1970. His head was almost blown off by a blast from a shotgun which one of the kidnapers had taped to his neck.

Angela Davis has been identified as the owner of the guns used in the crime and is accused of supplying them to the criminals who carried out the vile deed. During the kidnapping one of the criminals shouted, "We are revolutionaries!"

Miss Davis, an avowed Communist, is a brilliant young woman who is more honest than many others, in that she has declared openly what she stands for. In her first lecture as an instructor at UCLA, she said, "The first condition of freedom is an open act of resistance—violent resistance."

In an off-campus speech in June, 1970, she declared, "When people start saying that we are subversive, we should say, 'Hell, yes, we are subversive; hell, yes, and we are going to continue to be subversive until we have subverted this whole damn system of oppression.'"

The system to which she referred is, of course, the American system of government. She prefers the Communist system.

Authorizing

Now, an astonishing aspect of the situation is that an investigating committee of the American Association of University Professors has recently charged that the University of California regents violated the concept of academic freedom because the regents refused to allow Miss Davis to continue teaching at the university.

Even more astonishing is the fact that the YWCA and the Council on Church and Race of the United Presbyterian Church have taken positions favorable to this militant Communist.

Since the Presbyterian Council on Church and Race contributed $10,000 to the Angela Davis defense fund, "unaccounted thousands have quit the (United Presbyterian) Church," according to UPI religious news editor Louis Cassels. It is reported that at least 4,000 letters of protest have been received at the Presbyterian National Headquarters in New York City. Obviously, many United Presbyterians are strongly opposed to this action by the Council on Church and Race.

Home Divided

Surely the height of academic animosity must have been reached when the AAUP committee proposed, in the name of academic freedom, that the people of California should pay a UCLA faculty member to teach in the university while advocating the violent destruction of our freedom.

Surely the pinnacle of the postmodern must have been attained when two major Christian organizations gave their support to a Communist who is, of course, atheistic.

The Founder of the church said, "A house divided against itself cannot stand."

Maybe it's time for us to remind ourselves of the saying of the Master, "He that is not with Me is against Me"—and to make sure which side of this fence we are on.

OUTDOORS IN TEXAS BY VERN SANFORD

Waterfowl stalking is rarely done today.

It's rare for two reasons: first, because you can use decoys to make the ducks come to you, and second, because stalking involves a lot of work.

Still it's a very exciting and different way of hunting ducks and geese. Now let's clear up one thing fast. Stalking doesn't mean sneaking up on the birds and raking them on the water. There's no sport in that.

Real waterfowl stalking means sneaking in close, flushing the birds and then dropping them with wing shots.

If you're interested in making a waterfowl stalk hunt, here's how it's done.

Weather and terrain are the key factors involved. It can best be done on a day when visibility is low and there is a lot of wind to cover any noise you might make in your approach.

As for terrain, it can be done only where marsh and rice-field vegetation is high. The cover must be tall enough so that you'll be well hidden while you're walking, leaning over. Forget all about stalking if the cover in a field is less than three feet high.

The stalk must be made into the wind. First, the wind will carry any noises you make away from the game. Second, like airplanes, waterfowl must take off against the wind. Hence they will always face into the wind. That gives you the advantage of a "blind side" approach.

A goose stalk is harder than one for ducks. This is because geese are "cagey" and there always will be "watch" ganders around eyeing all directions. Most ducks, however, are notorious about not keeping a watch to their rear.

A goose stalk is most successful when the hunt is made in pairs. One hunter will make himself plainly seen ahead of the birds in order to hold their attention. They won't fly as long as he stays several hundred yards ahead of them. But, he must make enough noise to keep the birds' attention on him while the second hunter makes the stalk from the rear of the flock.

Now this might sound like the fellow up front will do a lot of work for no shooting. This isn't true. When geese are flushed, there are always a few birds that will swing by and within range of the man up front. He can get in some interesting pass shooting.

Hunters in pairs can also make a duck stalk. Again, use the man-up-front and man-behind approach. Only note that as the man-up-front slowly approaches, the ducks will begin to quarter away from him, first to one side of the pond and then to the other.

Yet, in their retreat, they will keep their eyes on the approaching hunter. Often the ducks will retreat to within easy range of the man behind. So, he'll be the one who gets the shooting. In this case when the ducks flush the fellow up front will be lucky to bust a cap at anything in range.

So, if this kind of hunting is to be fair for both hunters, they'll have to alternate at being the man in front or behind.

Actually the team stalk on ducks is easier if both men approach from the rear, staying about 100 yards apart. Although ducks take off against the wind, most species will quickly turn and fly with the wind to get out of an area quickly.

If they pass between the two hunters, both men get some exciting pass shooting.

Waterfowl stalking is hard, but the excitement is quite rewarding.

Bewitching Halloween Decorations
Easy to Make with Paper, Staples

It's that time again. Whether you're making decorations for a neighborhood Halloween party or just preparing some colorful bags for the little trick or treaters who will soon be ringing your doorbell, all you need are some colored construction paper, a pair of scissors and a Bostitch stapler.

To brighten up plain paper or cellophane "treat" bags, first decide how many shapes you want to use—witches, pumpkins, black cats and ghosts (friendly or otherwise) are just a few of the possibilities. Next, sketch the outline of each figure on a separate piece of sturdy construction paper. Place each sketch on top of several other sheets of various colored paper and cut along the outline, using the sketches as patterns.

Eyes, noses and other features can be cut out the same way and stapled in place, completing the decoration and sealing the open bag in one simple operation. The staples themselves reflect light and become part of the design as well as eliminating the need for messy glue and unsightly adhesive tapes.

Larger decorations of the same type may be placed in doorways and windows to create the Halloween spirit and let the neighborhood kids know that they're expected and welcome. It's easy to make an interesting mobile by stapling the decorations to strings and hanging them from a wire hanger or a double leader from your husband's fishing tackle. With a Bostitch stapler, you can also make paper chains in a snap, alternating orange and black links. So get busy—the witching hour is approaching.

GRAIN SORGHUM
HARVEST PROBLEMS

The annual problem of "when to cut" is again facing grain sorghum producers, with an added twist this year. Grain is coming into elevators with higher-than normal moisture content. The late rains and subnormal temperatures have delayed drying of the grain, which is constantly threatened with wind loss during the fall months, according to Marvin Sartin, Extension area economist at Lubbock.

Producers must decide whether to go ahead and accept the reduced price that goes with early harvest or to wait for the grain to field dry and take a chance on yield loss.

Ray Anthis, chief inspector for the Lubbock Grain Exchange, says the recent rains caused sucker heads to emerge on the plants, which increases the moisture level of the entire crop.

"As of last week, the number carloads moved through Lubbock was only about ten per cent of the amount moved by the same date last year," Anthis says. He explained that harvest usually peaks the last half of October, but will probably come much later this year.

A possibility that presents problems to both the producer and the elevator manager is the chance of an early frost. The young suckers would be frozen and dried out, Anthis explains, but the endosperm will remain white. A test at the elevator will show the load of grain to be low enough in moisture, but damage will still occur. Anthis says the white endosperm will eventually turn brown and show signs of heat damage without ever getting hot.

Elevators generally desire grain with 14 per cent moisture or lower, which is at the level commonly referred to as "storable moisture." Grain which is harvested at 20 per cent moisture will lose about seven per cent of its weight to shrinkage by the time the elevator can dry it to 14 per cent, says John Seibert, grain marketing specialist at Texas A&M University.

Grain harvested at lower moisture levels loses much less weight to shrinkage. For instance, 18-per-cent moisture grain will lose only 4.6 per cent of its weight when dried to 14 per cent moisture.

Another factor that Seibert points out is that there is much less carry-over in elevators than in past years. Ordinarily, an elevator can combine the new grain with older material that is very low in moisture, and help in the overall drying process. Reduced yields in recent years, plus the big increase in grain sorghum use, has resulted in very little carry-over, he says.

The obvious question is "why doesn't the producer just wait until the grain is field dried?" Here is where vital decisions must be made. Old Man Weather is the chief factor.

The dock on wet grain may seem like quite a large sum, but one day of damaging wind can easily offset the income gained by waiting to harvest. Also, the producer must often schedule his harvest to match the availability of custom equipment, according to Ed Garnett, area economist at Amarillo.

He cites an example of what adverse weather can do. A producer with a crop that will yield 6,000 pounds per acre will have to face a reduction of 11 cents per hundredweight if the grain has 18 per cent moisture at the elevator. This would amount to $6.60 per acre lost for the early harvesting.

If he decides to wait, and adverse weather such as wind and rain knocks down ten per cent of his crop, this would be a loss of almost $11 per acre if the current price of grain sorghum was $1.80 per hundredweight. Under the heavy financing that most crops are burdened with, it is easy to see why the producer harvests early.

There are alternatives to every question; and this is just another of the problems faced by High Plains and Panhandle producers, whether to harvest early or wait.

"Plenty of people will give God credit, but not cash!"—J. E. Dudley, Havana (Fla.) Herald.

It's about time for us to recognize that the protection of the law is for the innocent, not the guilty.—Joe K. Helbreth, Southwest Virginia Enterprise.

National Fashion Wagon Week Honors American Working Girl

The "American Working Girl" is being honored this year during National Fashion Wagon Week, October 25-30. Working women are being honored because they present a fashionable, neat and pleasant appearance in the world of business, all of which they do on a budget, and for their sense of fashion and good taste.

The sponsor of National Fashion Wagon Week is Minnesota Woolen Company, a fifty year old Duluth, Minnesota-based firm operating under the trade name of "Fashion Wagon."

Today's 29 million working women represent 37% of the total labor force in the U.S. Mary Tyler Moore was chosen to accept the "American Working Girl" award, symbolically, representing the ideal working girl as she does on her own CBS Television show.

The award, presented to Miss Moore by Richard C. Polinsky, president of Fashion Wagon, reads: "1971 National Fashion Wagon Award to The American Working Girl, accepted by Mary Tyler Moore on behalf of all working women who bring style, taste and fashion to the business world. Through her portrayal of Mary Richards on the Mary Tyler Moore Show, Miss Moore symbolizes the modern woman in the world of business."

Fashion Wagon, whose products carry the Good Housekeeping Seal, is a leading national seller of women's, men's and children's fashions, through "party plan" sales.

Previous woman-of-the-year Fashion Wagon awards have been given to Helen Keller, Pearl Buck, Jean Shrimpton and others.

GIRL SCOUTS AND LEADERS VISIT GAME RESERVE

Some 46 Girl Scouts, leaders and guests visited the Muleshoe Wild Life Refuge Friday afternoon although the chilly winds kept them from observing the birds as much as they would have liked. Officer Gillium was in charge of the tour following a lecture and presentation of stuffed animals at the office building.

The girls visited three lakes on the reserve and observed the wild birds in their natural habitat. Highlighting the trip was the sighting of a golden eagle and watching several sandhill cranes which were panned.

War and Faith

It has happened before and it could happen again.

"Look at the other nations in the world, pay close attention to them, and get ready to be surprised, for I am about to perform such a feat in your lifetime that you won't believe, even when I explain it to you."

That's what God told a man named Habakkuk, back in 600 B.C., but the point of the story concerns us, now. Because what happened to Habakkuk and Israel could happen again, to our America.

The Warning

Here's what God warned (and it's exactly what occurred a few years later):

"Watch, I am preparing the Chaldeans, that vicious and unpredictable nation, who will leap across the continents to take possession of homes which are not theirs. Terror and horror come with them, for they invent their own justice and laws to suit themselves. All of them love violence, and their numbers will overwhelm you like a hurricane. They will capture prisoners of war by the millions. Chosen rulers they laugh at, and they scorn the people's leaders. Defense systems mean nothing to them; they have means to destroy everything. But they realize their strength. They will come in and take over. Their god is their power."

Substitute Red China, Russia, or another enemy, and imagine God told you this would happen to the United States. Would you believe it? Habakkuk didn't believe it about Israel. He argued back.

"God, aren't You eternal? Don't You control history? We won't die. (After all, we are a believing nation.) They are the nation You must judge; You have already determined that they should be punished.

"Look at them. Your nature is too holy to see evil and permit sin and let it go unpunished. How can You let God-hating, treaty-breaking armies overcome a nation which is more moral and righteous?"

"Answer me that, God. I'm waiting."

The Answer

Perhaps you've wondered the same thing. For instance, how could God permit a Hitler?

God answered Habakkuk in two ways—concerning nations and concerning individuals. "The vision may not make sense," God said, "for a long time. But in the end it will be found true, so wait till then. In the meantime, don't you know that everyone will eventually begin to mock these conquerors because they will overextend themselves and will not be able to keep what they have taken? When that time comes, men will revolt on behalf of their slain countrymen and will slaughter their proud captors. Violence punishes itself."

God's purposes in the maneuverings of nations are not all clear, even yet. But evil is always punished. To individuals caught in these national and international wars, God says, "The righteous man will live by his faith."

It took a lot of faith in 600 B.C., when the Chaldeans ransacked Israel and wiped her off the map for more than half a century, for Habakkuk to believe that God still loved Israel and loved him.

How do you think you will react if God allows (and He might) the United States to be conquered in this decade? Will you still "live by your faith"? Copyright Dave Llewellyn 1971
