FIFTIETH YEAR

SOMETIMES WE feel like we are living in an age where nothing seems to work like it is supposed to. This age is typified, perhaps, by a cartoon we saw several years ago showing a toy salesman talking to a mother as he exhibits an "educational" toy: "Here's one to prepare him for modern living: no matter how he puts it together, it won't work."

What the trend toward poor workmanship, poor service, empty promises and guarantees and false advertising of products and services and credibility in general (outright lying) has brought about is a feeling by many persons that you just can't trust anybody anymore.

For some reason we're reminded of something which happened 15 or 20 years ago when my wife's grandfather, M. H. Winningham of Littlefield, was still living. The old gentleman decided that maybe he ought to trade in his car. The old Ford had been well cared for, but it wasn't worth quite as much as he thought it was. When he went to a car dealer and the man told him what he would give him on a trade-in, Mr. Winningham just stared at him a minute and declared flatly, "Why, you're nothing but a bunch of crooks!" And he got in his car and drove home.

Recently there has been considerable discussion about where all the pennies have gone to. The government says about 30 billion have disappeared, and assumes that they probably are being hoarded in pickle jars, piggy banks, dresser drawers and shoe boxes. They figure that many of them are being hoarded because of speculation that copper prices might go up so much it would be profitable to melt the pennies.

The Treasury report we read didn't mention that many persons are saving the "wheat pennies", those with the leaf on the back instead of the building, figuring they are worth a lot more. I've heard all kinds of comments about these pennies being worth more than a penny, but nobody has offered to buy the ones I have hoarded. (I have 11 of them hidden under a loose corner of the carpet in the closet.)

Now the government is putting on a big campaign to get people to take their pennies to the bank and get them back into circulation, telling them the pennies aren't going to increase in value, anyway, because the government has prohibited melting them for copper, and even if you could, the cost of melting them would eat up the increase. The trouble is that old credibility gap mentioned above. Nobody believes what the government is telling them. Aha, they say, these pennies must be getting pretty valuable now because the government wants to do us out of them.

Among those people who are suspicious of the government's contention that it's unpatriotic to hoard pennies and that they won't be worth more is me. Quite possibly they are being entirely truthful and honest, but one does wonder. They're not gonna get my pennies back in circulation, by cracky, unless they pay through the nose for them.

I do know a lot of truthful, honest people, but most of them aren't in government.

MRS. BRENT WHITEAKER

Couple Wed In Church

In a candlelight ceremony Friday evening, June 14, double ring nuptials were repeated by Miss Linda Diane McAnally and Gerry Brent Whiteaker in the First United Methodist Church of Littlefield.

Presiding minister for the reading of the vows was Rev. David Hamblin of Aldersgate Methodist Church of Abilene.

Mr. and Mrs. John Winston McAnally of Littlefield are parents of the bride. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Whiteaker of Sudan.

The nuptial altar was decorated with a large hurricane tamp candle tree with pink and white gladiolas, baby's breath and daisies centered beneath the cross. Smaller hurricane lamp candle trees of huckleberry and baby's breath were placed on either side. These were flanked by two pedestal arrangements of baskets filled with the pink and white gladiolas, daisies and other greenery with pink and white checked bows accenting the sides of the bas-

The memory candle was centered within an arrangement of pink roses, baby's breath and English ivy upon the communion table. Below this was the kneeling bench, also decorated in baby's breath and English ivy. The communion rails on either side of the aisle were decorated with six hurricane lamps, three on either side and were accented by English ivy and baby's breath. Other decorations were votive candles nestled in ivy in the side windows of the church.

While the couple knelt at the altar "The Wedding Prayer" was sung by Miss Venita Whiteaker, sister of the groom. She also presented vocal selections of "Sunrise, Sunset" and "One Hand, One Heart" while Mrs. Al Chambers accompanied her at the organ.

Escorted and given in marriage by her tather, the bride were a formal length gown of white organza tashioned with a deep scoop neckline edged with heavy Venetian lace. Appliques of Venetian lace were featured on the deep cuffed lantern style sleeves. Venetian lace also formed an overlay on the empire bedier which was connected to a softly gathered a-line skirt extending to a chapel length train. A deep self ruffle termed the hemline of the skirt and train. Three tiers of illusion extended from her Juliet cap of ca netian lace. She carried a colonial bouquet of pink sweetheart roses, baby's breath and stephanotis atop her lace covered white Bible. For something old, the bride wore a gold wedding hand belonging to her maternal great grandmother. Something new was a single strand of cultured pearls given to the bride as a gift from the groom. She wore her mother's pearl earrings for something borrowed, and for something new she wore the traditional blue garter. She also wore a sixpence in her shoe, a gift from her brother.

Miss Debra Kay McAnally, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Attendants were Miss Jeanie Reast of Littlefield, Miss Shelly Grant of Lubbock, and Miss Terri Lynn Martin of Redmond, Wash. The attendants wore identical gowns of large pink and white checked gingham fashioned in a colonial style with a high rolled collar, long full cuffed sleeves and a six inch ruffle at the hemline. Over the gowns they wore white eyelet pinafores with large eyelet ruffles extending over the shoulder and a tie sash in the back. The hem of the pinafore was edged in tiny eyelet lace. They carried pink and white checked gingham parasols with self ruffling around the top edge and center. Nosegays of pink rosebuds and ribbon were nestled in the crook of the handles. Extending from the handle was a heavy cascade of baby pink ribbon caught in love knots. Cascading pink organza flowerlets down the back of the hair served as head-

Wayne Whiteaker, father of the groom, served his son as best man. Groomsmen were Delon Walker and Glenn Short, both of Littlefield, and Donnie Graves of Muleshoe. Ushers were Larry Baker of Sudan and Doug Cummings of Amherst. John Scott McAnally, brother of the bride, served as ring

Liz Harlan of San Angelo registered guests from a table laid with a pink and white checked tablecloth topped with a wicker basket filled with scrolls.

The bride's mother wore a carpet length gown of pastel pink floral polyester with white accessories. She wore a cluster of fresh flowers in her hair and her corsage consisted of two cymbidium orchids. The groom's mother wore a carpet length gown of blue knit with white accessories. Her corsage also consisted of two cymbidium

TREATING CATTLE FOR GRUB CONTROL

Cattlemen who are faced with grub infestations in their stock ought to be considering control measures now, according to County Extension Agent Buddy C. Logsdon.

In the High Plains region, says Logsdon, heel flies have laid their eggs on cattle and the grub larvae have penetrated the skin, beginning their migration through the body. Since these larvae are more effectively controlled when they are small, cattlemen should be stepping up their treatments now.

Logsdon says that information on grub control is available at the County Extension Agent's office.

TDPS REPORT

The Texas Highway Patrol investigated seven accidents on rural highways in Lamb County during the month of May, 1974, according to Sergeant Thurman Keffer, Highway Patrol supervisor of this area.

These crashes resulted in no person killed and five injured.

The rural traffic accident summary for this county during the first five months of 1974 shows a total of 45 accidents resulting in one person killed and 31 persons

CENSUS TAKEN

Young wives 18 to 24 years old expected to have an average of 2. 3 children as reported in a Bureau of the Census survey in 1973, down from 2.4 in 1971 and 2.9 in 1967. Is this desire for smaller families continuing in 1974 or not?

Percy R. Millard, Director of the Bureau's Data Collection Center in Dallas, announced today that a survey in this area will help to answerthe question. Information on the number of children families plan to have within the next five years will be collected here the week of June 17-21 from a sample of households. Responses from the nationwide survey will provide data on the future growth rate and composition of the U.S. population, data vital to planners in government and private business.

REVISION MADE OF COTTON PRODUCTION The U. S. Department of

Agriculture's most recent

acreage and production, printed in the May issue of "Cotton Situation" obviously will need revision in view of recent developments on the Texas High Plains and elsewhere, according to officials of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. of Lubbock. USDA projected the U.S. upland cotton crop for 1974 at 14 million bales, to be harvested from 14.7 million planted acres, and PCG says it is reasonable to assume that some 2.5 million in sections of the Plains have reduced the area's potential to around 2 million acres and perhaps 1.5 million bales. Excess rain has
