I HATE LAWNMOWERS. I hate em, I hate em, I hate em. Yeah, I know: my Bible says you're not supposed to hate anything or anybody. But Jesus didn't have to mess with lawnmowers, so just maybe they could be the exception, and besides, I think we're supposed to detest all evil, and lawnmowers are vile, evil, obscene devices which the devil has caused to be placed on earth as a plague to all mankind, meant to cause man to lose all control of himself and do such things as kick the dog and scream at his wife and kids.

Many lawnmowers are advertised as dependable, reliable, e-z (easy) start, cut smooth, run good, no sweat. I have never seen a dependable, reliable lawnmower, and I certainly never have seen any gasoline mower that was easy to start, except perhaps for the first two or three weeks you own it.

It makes no difference how good the mower is supposed to be or how much you paid for it, nor does it matter if your neighbor swears he's had one just like it for six years and it's never been in the shop and it always starts on the first pull. Yours just won't do it. In no time at all, you go out one day and yank the cord and nothing happens. You try again. You put the choke and throttle in every conceivable position. You take the plug out and clean it. You clean the air filter. You check the oil. You pull and pull and pull until you're cross-eyed, exhausted, white around the mouth and totally unfit to live with for the next three hours. Sometimes it will start and you'll begin to mow and it will die immediately and won't fire again.

Usually this happens when it's late in the evening and you just barely have time to mow it all before dark if you get with it. And you really need to get it done this afternoon because tomorrow is Saturday and you'd like to go play golf or go fishing with a clear conscience and you really don't enjoy the game as much when you know your wife's at home mowing the lawn. But the blame thing won't work, so next day you have to go get it fixed (always temporarily) so it will work that day and you have to decide whether to stay home and cut the stinking grass or go out and hit those beautiful long drives or catch that 9-pound bass. Anything you decide is going to be wrong, and it's all the fault of that abominable hunk of machinery that never works when it is supposed to.

My mother once told me that it never does any good to get mad at an inanimate object; the object couldn't care less. I know this is true, but I can't help it — I hate lawnmowers.

They should be banned, and the nation's big-brains should get busy and develop a kind of grass that just gets so big and quits growing, and stays nice and level and green.

There is no such thing as a good lawnmower. To paraphrase Topsy (or somebody), I hate every lawnmower in the world, and I wish there were more lawnmowers, so I could hate them, top.

SUNDOWN STOMPS HORNETS 34-6

HORNETS LOSE OPENER

The Sudan Hornets lost their opening football game of the 1974-75 football season Friday night to host Sundown, 34-6.

Although the Hornets gained 433 yards offensively, their mistakes proved costly. And the 10 returning experienced Sundown Roughneck's offense was a strong factor in the game also. They were able to accumulate 503 total yards. Sudan had only three returning offensive men from last year's team. Coach Stewart stated that he felt our boys were real tight prior to the start of the ballgame and didn't begin to relax until during the second half.

Stewart said, "I am pleased with the fact that the boys came back and played well in the second half. If you take out their 85-yard-run in the second half, then we completely stopped them which is a credit to our young men."

Stewart felt the locals moved the ball better than he thought we would, but we made too many mistakes on offense when we couldn't afford to do so. "We turned the ball over too many times and got only one turn over from the Roughnecks," said Stewart.

The Hornets' defense made too many mistakes also. Some boys did not play their position and it hurt us as the defense is keyed to everyone doing his job. Stewart felt like too many men were trying to do someone else's job during the first half.

The Hornets gained 251 yards rushing, 182 passing 13 first downs. They received nine penalties for 80 yards and punted four times for 155 yards. Their touchdown came in the second quarter on a one yard plunge by Kyle Martin. The extra point try failed. The Hornets gave up the football five times inside the 20 yard line during the game. Craig Pickett booted the ball four times for an average of 39 yards.

Sundown scored two touchdowns and two extra points in the second; and one touchdown and one extra point in the third to end their scoring.

Any youngster 8 through 13 years of age, accompanied by a parent or guardian, may register at any participating Ford Dealer. There is no entrance fee.

Participants compete only against others in their own age group. No special equipment is required and there is no body contact. Also, participation does not impair a youngster's amateur standing.

When a youngster registers, he or she is given a free PPKK Tips Book by the sponsoring Ford Dealer. This booklet includes a complete set of rules, helpful conditioning exercises and important punting, passing and place-kicking tips by outstanding pros.

More and more cotton producers on the High Plains are discussing and even making plans for the possibility of holding at least a part of the 1974 crop, hopefully to be sold later at prices higher than now appear to be in the offing.

In the early harvesting sections of the Cotton Belt, the "holding action" is already on. For example, except for cotton contracted for sale earlier in the year, very little of the cotton ginned in the lower Rio Grande Valley of Texas has moved to market. With market prices hovering near the cost of production, growers simply are refusing to sell.

There is evidence at this time to indicate that cotton producers might profit by holding the 1974 crop, says Donald A. Johnson, Executive Vice President of Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., but, he adds, "the many unknowns in the cotton marketing picture make foolproof advice an impossibility."

The supply-demand picture, assuming that current estimates of production and consumption are accurate, is in delicate balance.

The carry-over of cotton as of August 1 this year is estimated to have been 3.3 million bales. The 1974 crop is now guesseed at 12.8 million, giving a supply for the year of 16.1 million. This compares with a projected total oftake of 12.5 million, which would leave a U.S. carry-over on August 1, 1975, of 3.6 million bales, a level not excessive by any standards.

Foreign production for 1973-74, earlier estimated at 47 million bales, now looks more like 46 million and the 1974-75 crop may be up only slightly from that figure, according to an analysis made by Cotton Incorporated's Economic Research & Development Division. The analysis concludes by saying, "World carry-over is therefore less than thought . . ."

Addressing himself directly to the question of a "holding action" by growers, the Cotton Incorporated writer points out that if producers collectively put one-third of their crops in the loan as the crop is ginned, the cotton "pipeline" would drop to a level of one million bales by November of this year, and "loading of ships would slow as dockside inventories dried up, and some mills would be forced to close."

Should two-thirds of the crop be withheld from the market, according to Cotton Incorporated, "major disruptions would occur in November as the pipeline level fell to well below a million bales."

But here, Johnson notes, the spectral threat of unlimited raw cotton imports makes its appearance. The Tariff Commission, over strenuous objections from the producer segment of the cotton industry, has recommended that the President remove all cotton import quotas. Should the President follow that recommendation, and should a holding movement make the supply tighter in this country than abroad, cotton could be imported from other producing countries to blunt the effects of producers holding U.S. cotton off the market.

High Plains growers may be fortunate in that they are not forced at this time to make a "hold or sell" decision. There appears to be no likelihood on the Plains of any extensive pre-harvest contracting of cotton this year, and the bulk of the High Plains crop will not be ginned until November and December.

By this time supply-demand estimates will be based more on fact and less on conjecture; the extent and some of the effects of the holding action in other areas will be known; the direction of the U.S. and world economies may be in better focus, and there may be an indication of President Ford's intent with regard to import quotas.

As noted cotton economist Dr. M.K. Horne has written, these and "other unforeseen events in coming months will decide whether the price moves up or down."

Today's cotton market picture, Johnson elaborates, is highly subject to change, "and with little or no price protection under the current government program, a producer's income will be largely dependent on his expertise in recognizing and reacting to change as it occurs."

Mrs. Geraldine Yandell of Littlefield and formerly of Sudan is a patient in the Methodist Hospital in Lubbock where she underwent eye surgery Tuesday.

When West Texas business profits, West Texans profit.

A lot of people in other parts of the country are saying business makes too much money -- too much profit. Luckily we don't hear it much in West Texas.

It's that kind of talk that can cost us all a lot -- maybe a lot more than we realize.

Profits in American business have been, for over 200 years now, the basis on which the American standard of living has evolved.

If a business isn't making a good profit it isn't going to be able to expand. And expansion is what provides more jobs and job advancement opportunities.

If a business isn't making a profit it can't feed its share of taxes into the economy. Taxes that help pay for things like better schools, hospitals, libraries, parks, recreational facilities and vital police and fire protection, as well as provide funds for hospitals, churches, museums and other civic projects.

But, most of all, if a business isn't making a profit it isn't going to be able to issue paychecks very long.

Without advertising, you can wave goodbye to the comic strips, the sports page, and the front page of your newspaper.

And maybe your own job.

Think about it. Advertising pays for the features and the news that your newspaper brings to you so economically. Companies that want to tell you about their products, their sales, and their unique services pay for the space to advertise and that pays for most of the newspaper.

If these companies were suddenly deprived of their right to advertise -- to communicate with their customers -- you can be sure sales would drop. If sales drop, production slows and ultimately people lose jobs. And if certain Texas companies could possibly be ordered not to advertise, who would be next? Maybe your company?

The next time you think about advertising, think about free speech and the right of one person to communicate with another. It's all the same thing.

Write Governor Dolph Briscoe, State Capitol, Austin, Texas 78711 and your legislators to tell them how you feel. Then sit back and enjoy your newspaper.

"Only 30 percent of the registered voters cast their ballots in the May primaries," Governor Briscoe said. "I certainly hope that many more of our citizens will participate in the November elections and vote for the candidates of their choice. The right to vote is one of our greatest Constitutional privileges, and I urge all Texans to exercise this right on November 5."

WATER, INC.-----

Water impurities into residential areas of Texas and New Mexico is included in the statewide action program being drafted by the task force, Gen. Rose said. This means that the project along with delivery of water to the Rio Grande Valley and various dam construction projects are being put "on the front burner" he said.

The water task force, organized late last year by the governor, has been meeting monthly and is developing an overall water program to recommend to the governor, and is calling on him for leadership in implementation. Gen. Rose is chairman of the task force.

Gen. Rose praised the efforts of Water, Inc., in keeping the "ball rolling" on an import program, and he told the directors that the organization must continue to play a key role in the development of a unified program for water development that all areas can support.

A highlight of the board meeting came when Geo. W. McCleskey, president, presented a resolution to Marvin Shurbet of Petersburg commending him for his service on the Texas Water Development Board and as a longtime Advisory Director to Water, Inc. Shurbet retired from the Water Development Board earlier this year after 12 years of service.

Mary of Trenton, N. J. Rev. and Mrs. Moses Padillo of Whitharral were Sudan visitors Tuesday night and attended revival services at The First Baptist Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Acie Daniels have returned home after a recent fishing trip to Red River, N. M.

Hay Front Better... Pastures Growing... Cotton Farmers Recall 1971

THERE'S GOOD news on the hay front, including rains that might have delayed harvest of some crops. The rains will help hay meadows. The U.S. Department of Agriculture reports that imports of baling twine is up, and domestic production of sisal and of plastic twines has increased. Additionally, more jumbo balers are being used to harvest hay, and they require less twine per ton of hay. Further, early tests on the use of aluminum in baling wire are encouraging, and more tests will be made. Plans for the tests were made at a meeting in the offices of the Texas Department of Agriculture which has been concerned for some time about the shortage of baling wire and twine. Field tests of aluminum wire showed that it could be used in baling machines, but the wire broke at places where tests were made when the bale was handled. On the bad-news side, the price of baling twine is high, around $26 per roll, compared to around $9 in 1973, according to USDA. Meanwhile, rains have improved pasture grasses over much of Texas and cattle have a good chance to go into winter in good condition.

BETTER PASTURES can be expected to mean that there will be fewer cattle on expensive feeds. The cost of production for farmers and ranchers has risen faster than the output of crops, curtailed in Texas by drought. There has been a dramatic rise in export orders for grain (corn and sorghums) and soybeans, according to a recent issue of the New York Times, and that probably means even higher prices of production for farmers as well as higher prices for consumers. Foreign buyers are trying to fill their needs before prices of grains and soybeans go higher, apparently. These sales are sparking debate over export controls and requests from the Federal government for exporters to cut their purchases. The reduced production now expected from crops will have a direct effect on the Nation's balance of payments, and it is having a direct effect on Texas farmers' decisions on whether or not to keep that beef cow through the winter or sell her before she has to be fed.

TWENTY-FIVE counties in the Lubbock area of West Texas grow more cotton than any other similar area in the world, probably. Last year was one of its best years, but this year farmers there are recalling 1971, not one of the better years, when only 1,280,000 bales were harvested. During August 1971, a total of 4.15 inches of rain fell on a promising crop of cotton. More rain and cold weather came in September of that year. Light frosts came September 19 in the north edge of the cotton area. Cotton yields went down to 264 pounds an acre. Before August 24 this year, there had been a total of 4.40 inches of rain, and the farmers who were plagued with drought before the rains started are remembering all too vividly the 1971 circumstances. Howell's "Cotton Letter," printed in Lubbock, summed up the situation this way, however: "There has been nothing in modern times to compare with those conditions (in 1971). And there certainly is no reason to believe the stage is set for a repeat performance this year."
