WOODWORK

by Dalton

THE OTHER evening we were eating in a restaurant and at a nearby table a small child (I think it was a girl, but it's difficult to tell when they are age 2 or 3 with lots of hair and big eyes) was getting quite a bit of attention from the crowd of patrons by yelling her head off.

The little girl was cute as could be, and she wasn't at all unhappy. She was just yelling to hear herself yell, and they were happy sounds, although a little loud. Some of the folks eating may have been disturbed, but most thought it amusing. It would have bothered us had she been crying, or screaming or throwing a fit about something. The parents were a little disconcerted and kept trying to quieten her, but finally gave up.

I thought then about how much fun it would be to just cut loose and holler out at the top of my voice anytime I felt like it. I mentioned this to the folks around the table, and they all agreed that if I did so, not only would they get up and move to another table (or another restaurant), but that in just a few minutes the management likely would call the police and I'd be carried off by either the cops or the men in the white coats, and at the very least charged with disorderly conduct.

Somehow this seems like discrimination. Nobody suggested that the little girl should be jailed, or that she was mentally deficient or anything like that. She was just happy and didn't know any better than to let people know it.

The obvious conclusion I get from that is that we adults ought to know better than to be happy (if you can smile in the face of all this, you just don't understand the situation), and if we do get happy, we shouldn't go around advertising the fact.

Well, maybe that's being too harsh on society. Perhaps nobody minds your being happy if you don't get too carried away with it, and I guess I'll have to go along with that. Still, it seems that an occasional happy whoop would be okay in public.

activity is being utilized fully during every moment of time available, he said.

The surge in home casing, which began in 1973, rose sharply in 1974 and reached even higher levels in the first half of 1975. Most of this demand has been fueled by inflation and the overwhelming response of millions of American families to suggestions that they plant new gardens to help relieve inflationary pressures on their income. "This is a reflection of the immense demand generated by the American economy as people respond to a recognized need," Fisher said.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture estimates there were 20 million home gardens in 1973. This rose to 26 million in 1974 and then jumped to 32.5 million in 1975. Ball Corporation, in the home casing business since 1884, longer than any other company in the world, said its production statistics indicated that during times of economic stress, such as wars, depression, inflation and recession, Americans have traditionally turned to home casing as a means of easing part of the cost-of-living problem.

"Ball Corporation is making a maximum effort to satisfy the need of consumers throughout America for home food preservation equipment—necessity to preserve the beautiful surplus of their gardens. Ball Corporation has (Continued on page 2)

Class Of '65 Reunion

The 10 year reunion of Sudan High School's Class of '65 was held this past Saturday. Old friendships and memories were renewed when the class members met at the community center in Sudan.

The affair began with a coffee at 2:30 p. m. This was a time where everyone got to meet each others families and find out how each had prospered after 10 year span. Several teachers came by to reminisce with the students.

At 4:30, the group then went to the old class room where Mr. B. M. Wilson took them on a tour of the school. Here, the spouses of the class members could see where each had attended school and see the rooms where many of the stories they had heard had originated.

Then at 7:30, the group met at the Central Restaurant in Lubbock for a formal banquet. After the meal, Paul Wilson of Louisville, Ky., the Master of Ceremonies interpreted in being in the Hornet Band, but have not tried-out for a place are asked to meet at the band hall on August 7, at 9:00 a. m. There will be a short rap session and each person will be asked to play a short musical exercise for placement in the band. If you will not be able to attend the meeting, please contact Mr. Bryant, at the school or at home, to arrange another time. Those who do not try-out before the first practice on August 11, will not be placed in-band. (Unless other arrangements have been made.)

Area Sunflower Boom Spurs Research

A booming increase in sunflower production — from 5,000 acres last year to nearly 300,000 this year — on the High and Rolling Plains has resulted in a new "package" of research by agricultural scientists at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center in Lubbock.

The package includes studies ranging from seed emergence, breeding, volunteer sunflower control and dynamics of insect populations to fertilizer rates and effects of environmental factors on hybrids.

areas of insect infestations, plant diseases and production practices. But only this year, when acreage jumped to more than a quarter million and sunflowers became an economically important crop, did scientists set out to assemble bushels of heretofore unknown facts about sunflower production on the High and Rolling Plains.

Already, the short-season crop which may be planted in early April or grown as a late-planted catch-crop is yielding up its secrets, according to Brigham.

explains. Most of the oil seed sunflower production in the High and Rolling Plains areas is intended for food uses after the oil is expressed in local oil mills.

Dr. George Teetes, TAES research entomologist, with co-worker Curtis Schaefer, are monitoring seasonal carrot beetle populations in 23 counties of the High and Rolling Plains in an attempt to correlate light trap catches with field damage. They are also utilizing dates of planting hybrid sunflowers to determine infestation damage levels present, and potential pests such as the sunflower moth, sunflower beetle and various stalk borers.

Aburnathy is checking a number of herbicides, applied both pre-plant and pre-emergence to deter-the most effective material and rates of application. He has some 42 treatments under study. The weed control scientist also is looking at potential herbicides for use during the growing season.

been in this important business more than 90 years providing safe, reliable containers and closures and the best in food preservation information. Any inconveniences or hardships which have occurred are regrettable; however, the real culprit is not the home canning industry but the unprecedented demand which has developed as millions of American families respond to inflation pressures," Fisher said.

According to word experts, the only thing exotic about anything exofic is that it's literally, "from a foreign land."

Botulism Can Be Found In Home Canned Foods

With the increase in home canning has come a serious health hazard -- botulism. Botulism is a serious form of food poison that produces critical illness and is fatal in one-fourth of all cases, the Texas Medical Association states.

Unless strict precautions are followed, home-canned food may be contaminated with the spores of Clostridium botulinum. The problem of botulism is prevented in commercial canning by use of equipment producing a combination of temperature and pressure capable of killing the spores so they cannot grow into bacteria to produce their toxin. However, since the botulinum bacteria can survive 20 hours of boiling at normal sea level pressures, simple home canning methods may not succeed in getting rid of them, and during storage there is plenty of time for the quickly obtained and the correct diagnosis is rapidly made, it may be possible to save the patient. A serum may be injected which, while it cannot help the nerves already damaged, is sometimes able to limit further paralysis. But the best treatment for botulism is prevention. Commercially canned food can be considered safe. If you are given some home-canned food you can make sure it is safe by boiling at least 10 full minutes before use. Those who do their own canning should review their procedure to make certain it protects against botulism, even if they have been canning for years without incident!

Never taste preserved food which appears to have spoiled for a very small amount of botulism toxin can produce illness. When in doubt, throw it out!

HOME CANNING JARS

If you preserved foods in "loud mouth" jars that keep "talking" all year on the pantry shelf, help is at hand to prevent it happening again. Marilyn Haggard, foods and nutrition specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, pointed out these "talking" jars often spell spoilage.

She cited reasons jars don't seal and suggested some solutions.

--Small particles of food left on rim of jar.

--Sealing compound or lid doesn't seal.

Remedy: Lids may be old. Usually, they last five years. Some may have a year date on them, such as 1-75, to indicate the lid was manufactured in the first quarter of 1975 and should be used before the end of the first quarter of 1980. It's a good idea to mark date of purchase on the box of lids.

--Bent or rusty rings.

Remedy: Bent or rusty rings can cause the lids not to seal properly. Always remove rings when jars have cooled thoroughly and seals are tested.

--Rings are necessary for the processing, but are not needed after the seal is made. Rings left on can rust and become difficult to remove -- so store them in a dry place in a container that prevents them from being bent out of shape.

Examine rings before the start of each canning season and discard rusty or bent ones. Never use lids more than once, because they are designed for a one-time seal.

--Rings screwed on "too

Is there an accepted formula for determining how much life insurance I should carry?
Is there an accepted formula for determining how much life insurance I should carry?

There are several... one of which was derived in the Institution of Insurance Marketing: An individual should own from 3 to 5 times his annual income in life insurance and should pay premiums of 5% to 15% of his income. This allows enough flexibility to suit everyone. Once, President Lincoln was asked how long his legs were, he replied, "Just long enough to reach the ground." One should own enough insurance to provide a basic financial foundation for his family in the event of premature death and himself should he live past retirement.

FOAMCRAFTING

Decorated Eggs

Decorated eggs are fast becoming collectors' items and these dazzling eggs are no exception. Locate pictures of favorite flowers, butterflies, birds, enchanting little girls, and cut them out as you would for decoupage. Use cuticle scissors to carefully cut out each design.

You can find delightful subjects on gift wrap paper, cards or paper napkins. Glue the cutouts to a Styrofoam plastic egg. Then, spray the egg with glitter glue (formulated for plastic foam) and sprinkle with "diamond dust."

Decorate the top and bottom with pearls and pearl headed pins, and a bow of gold chameleon cord. Small metal bases may be purchased to display your treasured egg collection.

Wedding Remembrance

Preserve a wedding announcement or invitation in this unique manner. Make a gift of the diamond dusted decoupage announcement to the bride.

When you receive the invitation, glue it onto a 9" x 12" book cut from plastic foam. Cut out pieces of trims, flowers, bells, ribbons, etc. - as you would for decoupage. These can be glued onto the book as decoration. Gift wrap wedding paper will give you an excellent choice of cutouts.

After gluing cutouts to book, spray glitter glue over entire book and sprinkle lightly with "diamond dust."

Projects such as these are found in a new book, "Foamcrafting with Styrofoam," at most craft and hobby stores.

John Butler was visited by Robert Butler and W. L. Key. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Liles, and Lillie Mr. Ivey of Lubbock visited their brother Jay Liles. Visitors to Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Slate were Reverend and Mrs. Gene Louder and Monty, Mrs. J. S. Smith, Mrs. Rodney Nichols and grandson Chad, Miss Bertha Vereen and Mrs. J. W. Olds.

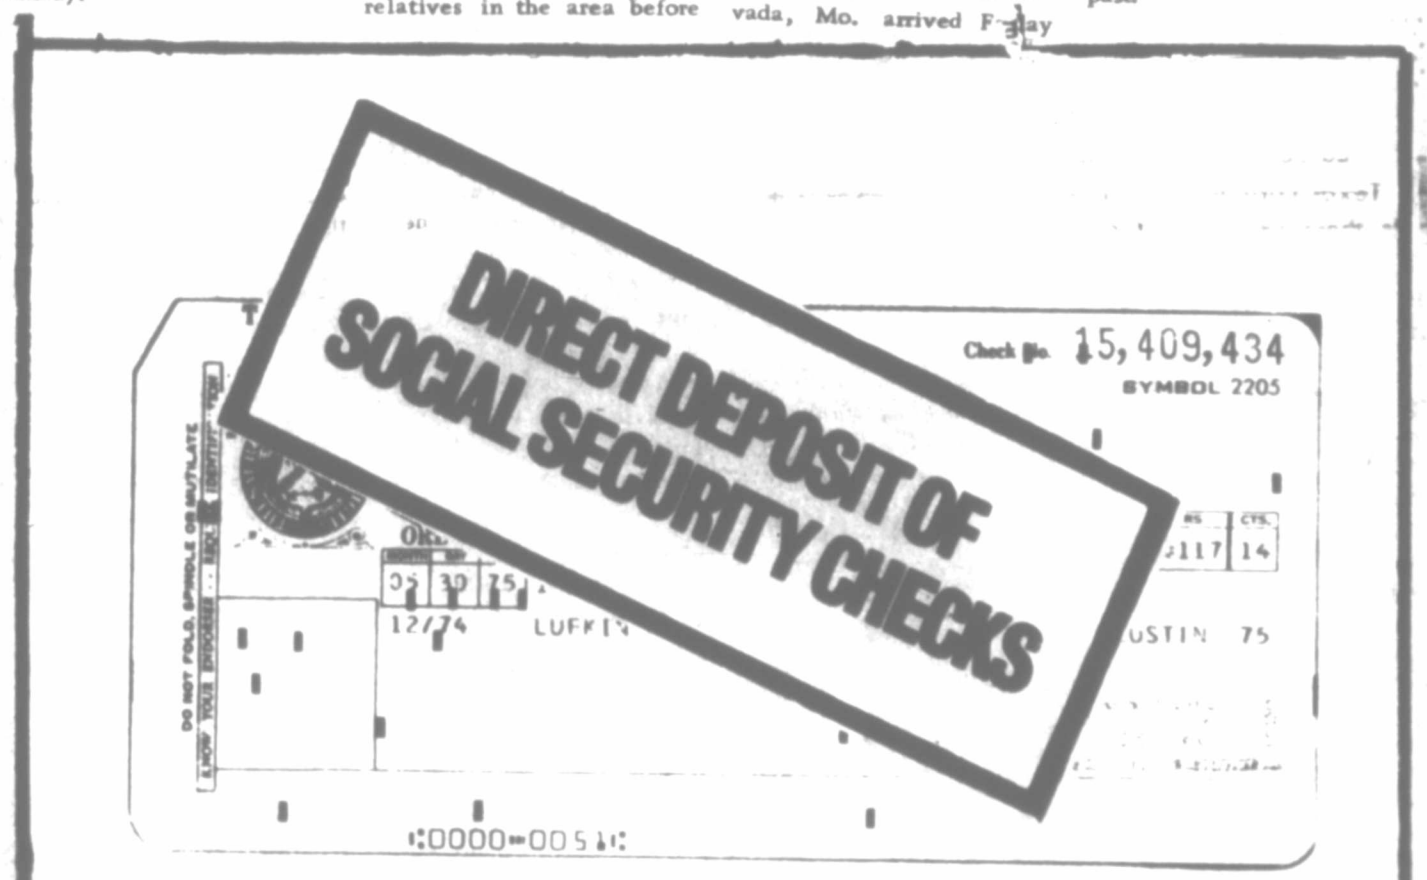

Dorothy Abbott was here to see her mother Etta Jones.

Mrs. Ves Terry visited Mr. and Mrs. Slate, Hattie Doss and Esther James.

Mrs. Daisy Brock journeyed to Lubbock Saturday to attend the wedding of her granddaughter Kay Brock. Fortunately the rain gave them a break and the garden wedding was beautiful.

Everyone was given a double special treat Sunday. A group came from the Amherst Methodist Church Sunday morning to sing, and in the evening a large group from the Sudan Church of Christ was here. Everyone talks today of how very beautiful it was. These efforts on their behalf are so appreciated. We invite you back anytime.

Happiness means accepting each day
And using it well in God's own way,
Not getting frustrated if you find
It is not the day you had in mind.

In doing His will happiness is
With joy that all life's troubles delay,
Give of this joy which you are blessed
And each day will bring you happiness.
