How It Looks From Here

by: Ray Freedman

Been almost so totally preoccupied lately with the state of Taxes in our lives that we are almost convinced that it is getting just a little dull. But then again, when forty percent of our money goes to run a government that leaves a lot to be desired, we feel that maybe more of us should take an interest and be at least aware of the situation.

Seems now that we must use our tax money to supply not only free lunch, but free breakfast as well to some of our students. And in doing so, the school seems to think that it would be a good idea to start our children (all of them) earlier in order to accommodate the children who must eat breakfast.

Now all this brings to mind the situation that we find ourselves in. It used to be that a parent could find no nobler goal than that of providing food, clothing and shelter as a minimum commitment to their offspring. All this seems to have gone by the wayside as now there are more and more parents who are willing to let the burden of providing these essentials fall on the already overburdened taxpayer. Food stamps, Welfare, Free Breakfast, Free Lunch and Unemployment compensation are just a few of the many ways that some parents find to shirk their duties and live off the fat of the land.

And most of us are aware that very few people now days eat more than two meals a day (and we still gain weight) so with the free breakfast plan, most of these children will be receiving 100 percent of their daily menu at the cost of the taxpayer. Somewhere along the line, we seem to have lost some of the values we used to live by, and one of the factors that has made this country great, self sufficiency is gone.

There are indeed a few cases where a family is truly in need of help, but rather than assessing the needs of each particular instance, our bureaucratic friends simply make blanket decisions and this is what leads to abuses. The one criteria for assistance of any kind should be contingent upon the fact that in order to qualify, the recipient must have exhausted all opportunities of finding gainful employment. And as we are all aware, it is extremely difficult to fill all the jobs that are available today.

Report From Postmaster

Making arrangements for holding or forwarding mail prior to leaving home for vacations can save customers a lot of misery and inconvenience. Postmaster Joan Ford reminded local residents today.

An over-flowing mailbox can be an open invitation to burglars. Postmaster Ford said. Letting mail or newspapers pile up is advertising the fact the house will be empty and unguarded.

Householders should ask a friend or neighbor to check their mailbox daily and to hold their mail until vacation's over. Or, if they prefer, they can ask the Post Office to hold their mail for up to 30 days, or to forward it to the vacation address.

The postmaster offered these additional tips for taking some of the worry out of vacation planning.

Vacationers should buy enough stamps for scenic postcards and other correspondence before they leave. They may not be conveniently near a post office later. They should use sufficient postage—ten cents for postcards and 15 cents for letters weighing one ounce or less. For letters weighing more than one ounce, the additional postage is 13 cents an ounce.

Mail should be deposited, when possible, at post office or in downtown, business district collection boxes, where more frequent pickups are made.

Travelers should be sure they have the addresses and correct ZIP Codes for persons with whom they'll be corresponding. In fact, the Postmaster says, it might be a good idea to write or type them on envelopes before leaving home, just in case. Envelopes and cards should also bear a return address.

And please write legibly. Postmaster Ford said.

SPS Withdraws Offer

Beri Springer, president of Southwestern Public Service Company, said today that the electric company is withdrawing its offer to provide $100-million and a plant site for building the nation's first gas-cooled breeder reactor.

"This has been a hard decision for us to make. We have been hoping, for nearly four years, that the plant would be built in our service area. However, the program has met with unusual and continuing delays, and the time has come for us to make other plans to be sure that our customers will have plenty of electricity in the future," Springer said.

Southwestern announced in September of 1974 that it had entered into an agreement with General Atomic Company, developer of the gas-cooled nuclear reactor, to provide the plant site and $100-million for a nuclear breeder reactor with an electric generating capability of 300,000 kilowatts.

"When we made our offer in 1974, we made a commitment for a demonstration plant ready to turn out electricity on a daily basis, just like any of our other plants. At that time, it looked like we would get that kind of plant in the early 1980's. It now appears that it will be after 1990 before a plant can be built, and it will be a research project subject to shutdown and testing and not one on which we can depend for day-to-day operation.

"One of our problems is the big battle that continues over the Clinch River Breeder Reactor. The President is unalterably opposed to Clinch River at the same time that he vague about what breeder technology he would support. The Congress seems to be leaning toward Clinch River be built and pays little attention to gas-cooled or other breeder alternatives. As a result, all the breeder debate is on Clinch River, although many of us are convinced the gas-cooled breeder is better. This has delayed the building of a demonstration plant, and it is not to the best interest of our customers to keep waiting around for this problem to be solved," Springer pointed out.

General Atomic has been working on the gas-cooled breeder since 1961. In 1968, a group of utilities representing about one-third of the generating capability in the country was formed to join General Atomic in support of the program. It, also, has had limited financial support from the federal government and some foreign nations.

HBA was started to serve as the organization to contract with the federal government for research and development. When it was established, it was hoped that there would be a significant increase in the federal support of the gas-cooled technology which, in turn, would develop additional utility support.

Southwestern will continue to research nuclear fusion as a charter member of the Texas Atomic Energy Research Foundation. In the fusion process, the atoms are joined, rather than split, and the hydrogen in seawater is the fuel for making electricity.

"We will continue on our plan to use coal as our base fuel. We will, also, look at other nuclear alternatives and continue our support of the fusion program. The decision we have reluctantly made about the gas-cooled breeder will not, in any way, interfere with our ability to serve our customers, either now or in the future," Springer concluded.

THE BIBLE SAYS

By: Art Lynch

'Flee fornication. Every sin that a man doeth is without the body; but he that committeth fornication sinneth against his own body.' 1 Corinthians 6:18
Webster correctly defines fornication as: 'Human sexual intercourse other than between a man and his wife.' If we desire to follow the precepts and principles of God's Word, we will readily see that sexual relations are ordained and sanctioned by our Maker ONLY between a man and his own wife.

The Hebrew writer put it this way: 'Let marriage be had in honor among all, and let the bed be undefiled: for fornicators and adulterers God will judge.' Hebrews 13:4

The sex drive of man is a God-given appetite. In itself there is nothing evil about it. It is a healthy appetite given for a specific purpose. But like any other appetite we have been given, it can and is misused and abused. Through out the Bible there are instances of fornication and adultery and the price (consequence) that had to be paid.

Whether we are Christian or atheist, sin has its price! The price of fornication is high. I am talking about while we live on this earth. We all know and have just read that God will judge this kind of person in the final judgment. But fornication has its present day price tag also!

When a person prostitutes himself or herself to another for a few minutes of pleasure, the psychological effect is devastating even to the hardest conscience. That is why Paul said: 'Every other sin is without the body...' Fornication leaves a scar that is never quite mended even after years of repentance.

Sex can be a very powerful creative force or a very devastating, destructive force.
