

Protected Lands Hold While Bare Soil Blows Away

From Kansas to Texas, residents of the old dust bowl last week were looking for rain. Rain that could stop the development of another desert in the middle west and southwest.

The area, including Cochran County, hasn't had a good soaking rain in at least six months. Since the first of October the county has had only 1.32 inches of rainfall.

The last fifteen years, the average rainfall for these months has been 5.68 inches. Folks in this area who didn't prepare for the dry winter months have had an opportunity to worry. Others who listened last fall and summer to the advice of soil conservationists are proud of the soil practices which are holding their few inches of valuable topsoil in place.

As Marshall W. Howard, district conservationist of the conservation service reports, the recent dusters have greatly encouraged farmers who have tried soil conservation methods.

Cotton Fields
As was pointed out recently by a soil conservationist here, the big trouble in Hockley County this year was the bumper cotton crop.

Need for Soil Conservation Indicated

Farm pictures shown here were made by Lloyd C. Miller during one of this season's worst sandstorms. These pictures and others made where no soil conservation measures are being practiced emphasize the need for soil conservation methods in this area.

Pictured above is a wind break on the J. W. Pond farm, four miles south of Morton. There was no soil movement for more than 1000 feet on the east side of the windbreak on the afternoon of March 27.

Probably the worst struck areas in the current dusters are the cotton fields which were plowed clean in the summer, harvested with machinery and left unprotected to blow away. And they are blowing. A trip through the county any windy day will prove that to the most doubtful person.

As one of the pictures illustrates on these pages, land that was suitable for chiseling is much less susceptible to wind erosion when the practice is employed. Many farmers in this county tore into such lands immediately after the harvest and turned up clods of dirt that puts the brakes on wind erosion.

Sandy Loam

Other cotton farmers owning sandy loam soils in the county have resorted to deep plowing to hold their soil. Where the practice turns up a clay base, the method greatly aids in holding topsoil when the brisk winds rip through the Texas South Plains.

Such a practice was put to work in March on deep sandy lands just south and west of Coble Switch where a huge mechanical deep plowing unit was employed to turn up a base of clay. Where no clay base is found, such a practice is almost worthless as far as controlling wind erosion is concerned.

Cover Crops

But the lucky farmers of the county are those who have planned ahead. Last summer and spring they took the advice of soil conservationists and allowed native grasses to grow in the cotton and grain rows. Today, as pictures on these pages show, their land is holding against the blowing sands.

These farmers have been advised by soil conservationists to retain these grasses as long as possible in order to receive the maximum amount of protection.

Such litter protection, whether native or planted, may be observed in fields in almost any direction from Levelland.

Chiseling, deep plowing, hoeing and listing are all emergency soil practices employed after the crops are harvested. Native grass, litter and cover crop conservation practices must be employed in connection with long-range planning.

Green Cover

Soils protected by winter cover crops are holding against the dusters, but as illustrated on these pages most of this type of cover requires irrigation to keep it going during the winter on the South Plains.

Such crops may serve a double purpose. They not only prevent sand from blowing, as J. M. Horton has proven on his farm just south of Whitharral, but they serve to build back the topsoil and produce a litter that will aid in holding rainfall.

The pictures employed on these pages are examples of what can and does happen when the topsoil—that soil which produces the crop—is allowed to go unprotected.

But there is more to such practices than wind erosion protection. Aubrey Holt, work unit conservationist, points out that crop litter or residue left on the soil produces organic matter that increases the rate of water penetration and the ability of the soil to hold water.

Thus, as he points out, the rate of water loss is reduced by organic litters which cover the topsoil.

Chiseling, an emergency practice, if properly employed in the tighter soils not only leaves the litter on the surface but also opens up the soil and makes it easier for the rainfall to penetrate into the soil.

But anyway one considers the problem of saving the topsoil farmers from Kansas to Texas are becoming more and more considerate of their land.

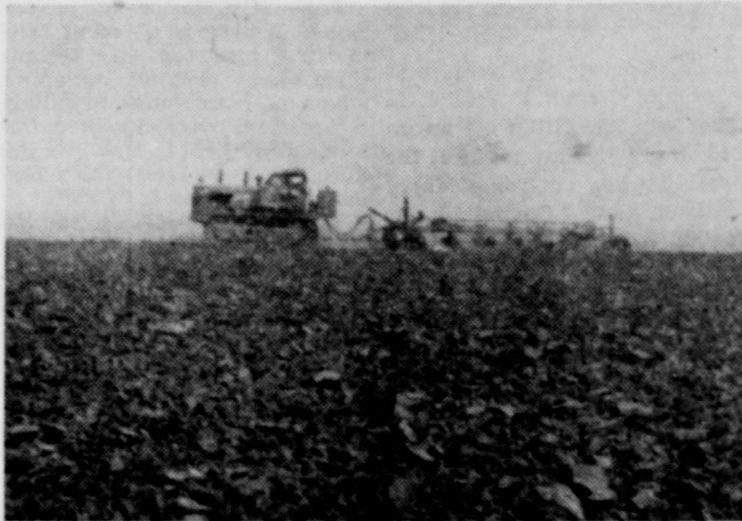

The memory of the earlier dust bowl still lives with them. Thousands of farmers fled the dust between 1930 and 1940. Others stuck it out. New farmers replaced the others during World War II. Many such farmers have failed to note the signs of previous dusters and today they are seeing their investments blown away.

As one conservationist puts it, "fighting wind erosion must be a personal battle for each farmer. Today farmers know what causes erosion and how it can be cured. It's just a matter of education and inspiration."

The above picture was made during the height of a sand storm on the afternoon of March 27. Shown is a portion of the C. C. Slaughter farms two miles west of Morton. This field is planted in rye and altho the soil is very sandy there was no blowing.

Above picture made on the Buford Webb farm southwest of Morton on the afternoon of March 27. Note the clay turned up in the foreground and the blowing sand behind the tractor. To date 4500 acres have either been deep broken or are in the process of deep plowing, according to figures in the P.M.A. office, supervised by Mrs. Ruth McGee.

One of my molars was giving me a hard time Tuesday afternoon, so I hopped over to Doc Jones, hoping to catch him free. When I arrived, Gabby Jackson was sitting there reading a magazine. I said hello to Gabby and he nodded.

As Doc went to work he told me that he's glad to have Gabby come up and read magazines . . . they might not all be fresh off the newsstand, but if Gabby—or anyone wants to while away some time who is he to stand in their way?

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE 'A MUST'

Cleveland has had a lot of drives this year. But last week, the Lions Club started one which will pay for itself many times over, the drive for a chamber of commerce in Cleveland.

Actually, the Lions are only surveying the merchants to see whether or not they want a chamber of commerce. If the business men want the organization, the Lions will bring in expert speakers for a mass meeting and the advantages and organization of a chamber will be shown and discussed.

But the ball is rolling; that is the important thing.

Cleveland has to have a chamber of commerce if it is to grow. No town can expect industries to locate in its area or roads to be built right to its doorstep without some organized group backing the move.

We must realize that our city is in competition with every other town in the area for these things. A hit-or-miss program cannot get the job done, for the other towns do not have hit-or-miss programs.

Only a chamber of commerce, properly organized and receiving the complete support of the citizens of Cleveland, can formulate and carry out a detailed program for Cleveland.

With a chamber of commerce, the city's future growth is assured. Without it, the future is not so certain.—Cleveland Advocate.

REAGAN ORMAND SHOWS COLOR TRAVEL MOVIES

Korachrome (color movies, taken overseas during World War II by Regan Ormand of Morton, screened recently in the Methodist Church.

Ormand, a lieutenant colonel in the Army Air Forces and pilot of the huge C-54 transport planes was stationed at Cairo, Egypt; Ankara, Turkey; and Bahrain Island in the Persian Gulf during the conflict. His private record of his travels, including glimpses of such exotic places as Casablanca, the Sahara Desert, the Holy Land and Constantinople, is contained in this film.

The flier, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Ormand of Sudan, was overseas about a year and a half, and was commanding officer at the Persian Gulf base. Ferrying troops and supplies from South America to Dakar, on the eastern coast of North Africa, was another of his assignments.

Ormand now in the Air Force reserve, is manager of the Minward-Ormand jewelry store in Morton. His wife, the former Dorothy Boren of Sudan accompanied him.—Sudan News.

DUST STORMS BOULDER SIZE IN NEW MEXICO

Bill Lovett seems to feel that although we have been having some first class dust storms we have let the big honors go to New Mexico.

Bill brought me a copy of the Carlsbad Current-Argus in which it told in big bragging headlines about their dust storms, or perhaps it was a boulder storm. It said that the wind had reached sixty miles per hour and that buildings had been blown down, light poles dumped on the ground and thousands of dollars damage done.

According to the unreliable newspapers and radio stations in this part of the country our last dust storm reached sixty miles per hour, too, but we cannot boast of any loss of buildings, power lines or that any plate glass has given away. It must be that a sixty mile per hour wind in West Texas does not have the destructive power that it does in New Mexico or we have gotten so used to them that our buildings and other above the ground construction won't go down under less than a one hundred mile per hour wind.

What I'd like to know is how any one can tell how fast a wind is traveling; especially a dust storm wind where one does well to see a Court House fifty feet away. How could you see a wind meter if you had one and knew what it was.—A. M. T. in Slaton Slatonite.

Miller Attends Levelland Meet

E. A. Miller, Cochran County Coordinator, and some twenty-five teachers and coordinators from a four-county area of the Lubbock region of vocational agriculture schools for veterans gathered in Levelland recently for a discussion of developments in the vocational school program. Under the direction of Zane Brewer, state supervisor for the board of education in the Lubbock region, the meeting considered points of a fourth year program of training for eligible veterans and reviewed progress of the program during recent months.

Brewer told the group that Sam Adams, supervisor of the entire state program recently made an unannounced visit to a number of schools in the Lubbock region and expressed satisfaction with progress of the schools.

The teachers and coordinators who were present at the meeting are in charge of on-the-farm training of an estimated 500 veterans in Terry, Hockley Yoakum and Cochran counties. They represent schools in 13 towns in the area, including Levelland, Brownfield, Ropesville, Anton, Wellman, Lehman, Pettit, Pen. Smyer, Witharral, Morton, Meadow and Plains.

Easter Sunday was pretty—that is until after church services and then one of our west Texas dusters blew in full force.

The spouse really did himself proud this time—not only did we get the customary huge potted hydrangea but a double gardenia corsage. Not only that but he went to church too. Guess we were the proudest gal in the Easter parade.

Miss Hattye McKell, Colorado City friend, sent a delicious box of candy; the usual number of thoughtful Easter greetings were received from various friends scattered around here and there.

Despite the sand, Sunday turned out nice. Several of our favorite people visited us during the day; Van and his Lubbock guests and Roger Southall spent the afternoon and early evening. Roger had been ill and driving out in the terrific dust didn't help matters a great deal.

One of our cute little girl friends, Deanna Rose, celebrated her birthday Sunday. Her grandmother Dean, an aunt and cousin all came up from Gorman for the occasion.

Noticed Lewis Owen and daughter, Carol, oldest of nine cherubs, in towns shopping one day last week. Carol is a lovely teen-ager and if the other eight are half as sweet and pretty (we are certain they are) Mr. and Mrs. O are to be envied.

Artie Hicks told us Friday that the Texas Company had sent in a check for $25.00 for the Red Cross. Artie did exceedingly well as fund chairman for the Red Cross drive this year. He thinks the job should be given to some one else next year.

Think Kate Hargrove feels the same way about the chairmanship of March of Dimes—it too, under Kate's leadership was a success.

The rest of us (mere contributors) wish the various welfare agencies would fall heir to millions and millions so they would not have to put on these periodic fund campaigns. Personally we're just about campaigned down to zero.

A quotation from the column, "Trail Dust" by editor Douglas Meador, which has appeared with a fair degree of regularity in the Matador Tribune for 16 years, is to be published in "Slick" magazine of national circulation.

The "quote" will appear in the May issue of Cosmopolitan magazine, under the heading "Main Street," a page devoted to the sayings of newspaper columnists in America's small towns, as compiled by John M. Henry.

All we got wrong in mentioning colleague, Doug Meador, and his popularity was the month the darned quote is to appear. Oh, well it won't break us to buy the May issue, too.

Jeannette Childs was down town visiting her mommy and daddy the other day. She is a darling little blue-eyed blonde; hair so far is slightly sparse but what she has is curly.

Miss Sue Lindsey and David Rozell Married Here Sunday Morning

Miss Doris Sue Lindsey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Lindsey, became the bride of David Rozell, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Rozell, Malakoff; Easter Sunday morning at the First Baptist Church. Rev. W. C. Wright performed the double ring service. White stock and palms decorated the altar.

Mrs. Winfred Lindsey played a prelude of wedding music and accompanied Mrs. Bill Proctor who sang "I Love You Truly," "Always" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a dress of Copenhagen blue with white accessories, a white carnation corsage and a strand of pearls, gift from the bridegroom.

Mrs. Glenn Brazil of Lubbock, sister of the bride was matron of honor and Winfred Lindsey was best man. Ushers were Daniel Rozell and Willie Mae Zuber.

After a week's wedding trip to El Paso and Old Mexico, the couple will be at home here where he is engaged in farming. Mrs. Rozell is a graduate of Morton High school and attended Draughtons Business college in Lubbock. She is employed at the Morton State bank. Mr. Rozell, a graduate of Cross Roads High school.

Residents of the South Plains area were warned this week to be on the lookout for "our worst enemies, the common house fly."

The warning, issued in the April publication of the South Plains Health Unit, said that with the arrival of spring it is time to consider means of fly control.

The following recommendations were offered to residents of this area as ways and means of controlling the fly problem.

Elimination of breeding places. The article recommended that animal lots inside the city limits of this area be removed.

The elimination of all open pit privies within the cities, use of proper covered garbage cans and proper collection of disposal of garbage. The keeping clean of all public and private premises and the use of effective insecticides by spraying.

These measures, it was pointed out, would go a long way toward attacks this area each spring.

Grace Vernon, attending business school in Lubbock, spent the Easter holidays here with friends and relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Buster Stevens of Hereford visited relatives here Monday.

Jack Burks visited in Borger last week with his father who is ill.

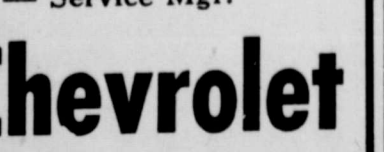

We wish to express our sincere thanks to our Sheriff, Herman Crockett, for the good work he performed for us last Wednesday and Wednesday night.

Last fall one of our colored hands left our farm owing money we had advanced to help him. On Wednesday, March 29th, we learned that he may be located in Lubbock and when we notified Mr. Crockett as to this information, he immediately began working on the case and took time to go to Lubbock and find our man. He did all this without assistance of other officers, and through his efficient police work on this case another law violation has been corrected. This should serve as a warning to other farm hands in this county, that whenever an employer advances assistance they must not take such help and in turn commit theft by running off.

Again, we say thanks to Sheriff Herman Crockett.

Junior High Receives Books For Library

Junior High School has received over a hundred books from L'Allegro Junior Study Club; these books have all been on the approved list of Southern Library Association, according to Mrs. J. A. Gowdy, librarian.

Just recently this organization has contributed money for a set of Encyclopedias. The Junior High School appreciates these books and the interest of these young women in the school.

"The closer the cooperation between the school and the town's people, the greater the progress to be made in building a good school. Our school has made great progress in the last few years and if we all work together we will continue to advance. Thanks to the Junior Study Club and to all others who have given books and magazines to our library," Mrs. Gowdy said.
