the government stepping in to take an active part in the health care industry," James said. "Initially, the government was interested only in protecting the elderly, who are usually on fixed incomes, with Medicare, and others who are otherwise unable to get health care, with Medicaid."

However, the proposals now tend to suggest that the government provide the delivery of all health care to all persons through National Health Insurance, James said.

The doctor pointed out that 9 out of 10 people in the U.S. are already covered by some form of health insurance. Health care costs about 130 billion dollars per year in the United States. The government's assuming the burden of handling the delivery of health care should be viewed with some skepticism, he noted. As a basis for his skepticism, Dr. James pointed toward government programs like OSHA, which have created a governmental bureaucracy and paper work, and have been of little success. Even the Social Security Administration will' face being in the red soon, he noted.

The problems which are presented by National Health Insurance should be closely examined. The economics of the situation should be carefully studied," he said. "The record of other governmental programs in the health field are marked by heavy expenditures for administrative costs rather than for medical care." For example, he offered, 81% of the money spent on Medicare goes for administrative and clerical costs rather than for medical care. Because of the increased administrative expenses, government involvement has increased the cost of health care. "The Vogel-Blair Report on the delivery of health care concluded that the government is not as efficient as private industry, or private insurance carriers, in providing health care, and discrimination," said the goose. "Then I will," said the little red hen. She baked five loaves and held them up for her neighbors to see.

They all wanted some-in fact, demanded a share. But the little red hen said, "No, I can eat the five loaves "Excess profits!" yelled the cow.

that governmental involvement increased medical costs," he cited. Dr. James concluded that more government involvement means higher costs for medical services. For example, the same study reveals that the average cost of an office visit to a private doctor, including lab work, is about $18, while the same office call to a doctor working for the Veteran's Administration averages $50.

National Health Insurance, Dr. James stated, may eventually involve the loss of individual freedom, particularly in choosing a personal physician. In England, for example, the national medical program in effect there since 1948 has resulted in the "rationing" of medical services. The fact that medical services were essentially "free," or at no cost to the patients made the demand increase astronomically. The huge demand forced the national medical program to "ration" medical services. This has cost lives," he said, citing examples. One example was that an open-heart surgery patient's opera-tion was rescheduled three times due to heavy surgical schedules. The patient died two days after the cancellation of his surgery. Another patient with a malignant tumor had to wait 8 weeks before getting into the hospital.

"The proposed National Health Insurance is an extension of other strict governmental intervention in the health industry in this country," he said. A "certificate of need" must be obtained from the federal government before a hospital can be built, or before certain equipment can be purchased. "Additionally," he said, 'the Health Systems Act gives governmental agencies the right to survey the medical needs of the population, and to redistribute the availability of medical services."

"There is but one remedy," Dr. James said, "to use to stop the increase of governmental intervention-to stop the increased cost generated by government involvement, to retain the general availability of medical services, and to stop the trend of government intervention. That remedy is to express one's opinions about this trend to our Congressmen, and to encourage our neighbor's to do the same also."

The end of an era came about last Saturday when the soda fountain was moved out" of Arwine Drug. Operat ing since 1924 in Floydada, the fountain portion of the drug store was closed after 53 years of serving young and old, when coffee and cold drinks were priced at five cents each, when a meal could be purchased there, and when curb service was available to people in their motels.

53 Years

Arnold Arwine came west from Fort Worth where he and his partner, Charlie Brazier, had two small pharmacies. The drug store in Floydada in 1924 was known as Brazier and Arwine, Druggists. After five years Braziers moved on and the business became Arwine Drug, continuing under that name since.

Mr. Arwine's comment back then was that Floydada is "sure enough good country," a fine people to do business with, and a country that does more than it promises. His first impressions of this area hasn't faltered over the years.

Mr. Arwine, who retired in April of 1975, recalls that in the early days pharmacists did all their own mixing and weighing of prescriptions. His first drug store was the location now of Hale's Department Store, and in back of the store was a doctor's office and overhead, upstairs was a beauty shop. The first doctor located in the drug store was a Dr. Pennington and later, Dr. Houghton.

Arwine Drug moved to its present location in 1934. Members of the family have worked in the store over the years and the two sons, Gene and Joe became pharmacists. Gene has assisted his father in operating the Floydada drug store consistently since 1954. Joe is a pharmacist in Lubbock.

The marble counter behind the fountain in the drug store has long since been gone, replaced several years ago by a more modern top...this too came down last week and coffee drinkers, some who have patronized the drug store since its first opening, were there Saturday to sit astride the counter stools for the last time and

Undergoing a remodeling job at the present, the drug store will no longer have a fountain, counter booths and stools, but a couple of tables with chairs in the back, will suffice for coffee drinkers, the Arwines said.

Texas Farmers Union Green Thumb is launching a statewide Technical Counseling Program aimed at educating and advising rural employers, private and public of the proven benefits and advantages in hiring the older rural worker. Through this program, Texas Green Thumb utilizes seven years of successful experience in recruiting, training and employing older rural workers.

This announcement came during "National Hire the Older Worker Week," March 13-19, during which time special emphasis should be given to hiring the older worker. Older workers bring experience, proven dependability, good working habits, and positive work attitudes to the job. These workers continue to be able to learn and offer skills, judgement, reliability, and maturity from experiences to his employer. Texas Farmers Union President, Jay Naman, endorsed the program saying, "Not only will rural employers benefit from this, but older workers in rural communities will, hopefully, be given additional job opportunities.

Texas Farmers Union Green Thumb plans to coordinate its Technical Counseling efforts with other interested agencies such as Texas Industrial Commission, the Governor's Committee on Aging and its local representatives, and the Texas Employment Commission. Green Thumb is a work training and job opportunity program for elder (55 years of age and over) rural residents. The purpose of the 35 county program, sponsored by Farmers Union and funded by the Department of Labor, is to employ elderly, limited income persons to community betterment and conservation projects for non-profit organizations, as well as strenghtening existing community services for the aged and hanidcapped. Current Green Thumb projects throughout the state include maintenance and repair for public schools, weatherization of homes belonging to elder persons, public park improvement, modification of county and city barns, and painting of courthouses and city halls. Individual workers participate by serving as home-aides, drivers, escorts, telephone reassurance callers, cooks, and hostess/ activity leaders in Senior Centers. Others work as librarians, museum attendants, and at other activities.

Any employers or agencies interested in the Technical Counseling aspect of Green Thumb may contact David Hartwig, State Director, Texas Farmers Union Green Thumb, 415 Lake Air Drive, Suite 101, Waco, Texas 76710, or 817-772-7229.

MY HART'S IN THE

HIGHLANDS True there are tree-filled forests in Scotland, but to the sportsman the most important parts of the Highlands are the deer forests which are not really forests at all.

Most of the ground consists of bare mountainside, with a few shrubs to relieve the monotony.

Scotland is a small country, but deer forests cover more than 2 1/2 million acres. They are now the happy hunting ground of rich visitors from America, Japan, France and Germany. Their ambition is to bag a royal stag.

Teacher's Scotch Information Centre explains that a stag doesn't have to belong to Queen Elizabeth to be royal. The term royal stag is applied to animals which carry points on their horns.

Accent On Health

People who choose to live in rural or sparsely-populated areas deserve the same quality of health care as their big-city neighbors. The problem is that not enough physicians and other health providers want to live in rural areas.

The problem concerns the entire health services system, both the public and the provate sectors. For a number of years, the medical profession in Texas, through the Texas Medical Association, has looked for ways to encourage young doctors to locate their practices in small towns where they can serve the surrounding countryside.

According to Dr. Ed Schmidt, the past president of the Texas Medical Association, practicing medicine in outlying areas offers several advantages: "short travel time between places, no smog, no traffic problem, relative freedom from crime, a wholesome atmosphere" are some of the examples he cites. a loving other, a Schmidt recognizes that most young doctors are not Until recently, he was not only the only physician in the area, but he operated burdensome caseload. his own hospital-the only one in the South Texas county. Now there's a new hospital in Rio Grande City, but there is still a shortage attracted to rural practice. He explains, "Some doctors feel that they may not be able to cope with the situation, since they've been trained in an academic environment with a large amount of backup from big hospitals and medical centers. They don't feel comfortable" in a more isolated environment, he says.

It's also true, according to the medical association, that doctors in rural areas work harder, often for longer hours, and generally have lower earnings than their big-city counterparts. Furthermore, the doctors-and their spouses-often miss the social life, entertainment and other amenities of a metropolitan environment.

of skilled medical personnel. Dr. Rameriz believes that the best solution is to help areas obtain an education in medicine. Hopefully, after they receive their education, they'll return to their hometowns to practice among the people they know best. This approach has been used with some success, but it's inherently a slow process-and the young doctors don't always want to go back home once they've spent a few years in the bright lights of the big town.

According to Dr. Schmidt, science and technology are beginning to help rural physicians provide better care, and to end the feeling of isolation. New devices such as remote telemetry, closedcircuit television, and computers can be used to give the rural practitioner access to expert consultants and other sources of vital information even if it's thousands of miles away. Also, the expanded use of paraprofessional medical personnel, such as physician's assistants and paramedics, helps to relieve the rural doctor's Public health in Texas has effort to provide better service to people in the countryside. Although there are full-time local health departments in only about 75 of the Area sites considered for nuclear waste dump

LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP) — Sites being considered by the federal Energy Research and Development Administration for dump sites for nuclear waste in the near future include the Texas Panhandle, the South Plains and East Texas, according to an ERDA

Nuclear dump sites require geologic formations suitable for storage of radioactive waste that must be isolated deep underground from man's environment for thousands of years.

ERDA spokesmen said this week the agency's National Waste Terminal Storage program involves studies in 36

Two sites are expected to be selected by 1978 for operation by 1985 and Texas is among the prime candidates because it has the geologic formations required, VENTURA SAID that although some core drilling has been done in East Texas as part of a survey of sites, "Right now, they are just gathering information.

"They may even abort the project at any time," he said.

Clayton Zerby, a spokesman for Union Carbide, the principal contractor for ERDA out of Oak Ridge, Tenn., said contracts will be awarded within the next few months for detailed geological studies of the Palo Duro Basin and the Dalhart Basin.

ZERBY SAID the geological studies in West Texas would determine the underground stability of the area and the conditions of the salt beds several thousand feet underground that are considered ideal for nuclear storage.

In Austin, John Barry, a nuclear studies specialist with the governor's energy advisory council, said the decision to build the dump sites will not be made without local and state consultation. He said there are bills in Congress aimed at giving state legislatures veto power.

AND, HE added, "no matter what the legislature does, I think it is assured that if the people of the state do not want the facility, it won't be there."

ERDA has the responsibility to locate, construct and operate federal repositories for the disposal of radioactive wastes.

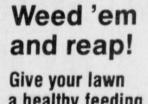

A draft "generic environmental impact statement on radioactive waste management" will be issued next spring by ERDA. The statement will be submitted for public review and comment before any final action is

Trial Moved From Motley County

The Capital murder trials of Stacy Albert Carter, 25, North Carolina and Larry Carnell Fortenberry, 28, of Louisiana, were moved Monday by District Judge George Miller of Floydada. The two are accused of the shotgun slaying of Motley County Sheriff Jinks Wilson.

Carter will go on trial in Lubbock's 72nd District Court after May 1 and Fortenberry's trial will be tried in Hale County at Plainview.

Both Carter and Forbenberry have claimed they are unable to pay for their own defense, putting the expenses of the trial on Motley County. The county has asked for a $51,000 defense cost figure and estimated that $26,000 of the amount would be split between attorneys for both defendants.

According to reports by Pat Patrick, a staff writer for the Lubbock Avalance-Journal, the two accused men, until Monday, were under two count capital murdur indictments- one count for allegedly committing a murder during commission of another felony, robbery, and the second for allegedly killing a peace officer while he was acting in the line of

A companion of Sheriff Wilson, John D. Rogers, was wounded and Carter and Fortenberry face attempted murder charges in connection with Roger's shooting. The first count was dropped Monday, according to the Patrick report, with Fortenberry's count appointed attorneys, Steve Hurt and Joe Cox of Plainview, and Carter's lawyers, John Montford and Mark Hall of Lubbock, successfully arguing the indictment did not make clear who was being robbed or what was being taken.

sponsors who have run "severly dificient operations" in the past will not be approved by the U.S. Department of Agriculture this This statements comes from W. F. Warren, administrator of the Southwest regional office of USDA's Food and Nutrition Service, Dallas, Texas. The regional office serves the states of Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Tex-

Warren said USDA last summer encountered sponsor violations such as claiming meals served to adults, improper site supervision, incomplete or deficient meals and failure to maintain appropriate records. These violations also are outlined in current regulations as reasons for denial of applications.

School districts and city governments are organizations regarded by USDA as best qualified to manage the summer feeding operations, according to the regional administrator.

Too, use of school cafeterias during the summer months is an effective and efficient use of equipment and personnel," he added.

The summer feeding program was started to provide needy children nourishing meals during the summer when most schools are not in session. The program provides lunches and snacks to children at approved schools or other recreational centers. Abuse last summer by some sponsors and vendors who attempted to take advantage of the program resulted in revised regulations to weed out such groups.

Warren encouraged city governments and school districts to apply for the program. Deadline for applications in Texas is May 1. Applications should be forwarded to Ralph Metcalf, Child Nutrition Programs, Food and Nutrition Service, U.S. Department of Agri-electric vehicles offer advantages of clean, low-cost operation, without producing toxic exhaust emissions.

In today's world, with the high cost of gasoline and concern over air pollution, it is not surprising that the electric car of the early 1900's is finally being recognized as the car of the future. DO YOU HAVE A QUES-TION ON ENERGY? Write to: Edison Electric Institute Information Service, NP, 90 Park Ave., N.Y., N.Y. 10016.
