What can we say? The space shuttle Challenger blew. A number of brave people died. The nation is in mourning. The first real "civilian" to take part in the program, a plucky young teacher from New Hampshire, died with the rest. It is a tragedy of vast proportions. This is not the first time tragedy has struck the program, but of late it had all become so routine, like clockwork, that we have tended to ignore the real danger that rides with our astronauts. It is there, and probably always will be. All we can do is express our sorrow and hope it doesn't happen again.

Our governor is not getting off to the best of starts in this political year. He has run into a firestorm from some of the very people who helped put him where he is today.

We see by the papers that the state's teachers are up in arms over his suggestion that they take drug tests to assure our children a drug-free environment at school. Comments coming out of a meeting held by the leadership of the Association of Texas Professional Educators down in Austin indicate they are taking a dim view of the governor's reported comments. In answer to a reporters questions at a previous press conference, the governor is reported to have said that "instructors in our educational system and workers in our plants" were examples of people who could be eligible for drug tests in order to assure a drug-free environment.

One of the milder responses was from Sue McGarvey, state president of the association, which claims 45,000 members, and also claims to be the largest "non-union-affiliated" teacher organization in the state.

"First," she said, "he says education is the reason for the $3.6 billion tax bill of which we only received $800 million. Second, he claims we're all illiterate until proven otherwise by a basic skills test. Now he plants the seed that we're all drug addicts until we take a test to prove differently. Our chief executive officer needs to boost, not blast, his own state employees."

And that was for openers. Other officers in the group were not so kind. The bottom line was that they will evidently urge their members, and all teachers, to actively oppose White in his bid for reelection.

We can understand the teachers' ire. They were among White's biggest backers when he defeated Bill Clements. He courted them mightily during that election, with promises of higher pay, more respect, and a generally better life. They got the money, but not the respect. Many of them are now feeling they were victims of a sort of flim-flam by White. In that they can find a lot of sympathy from other Texans, who also believed Mark when he said he was going to lower utility bills and hold the line on taxes.

Still we can have a little sympathy for the governor too. He did not really suggest, as we read his comments, that teachers were all drug addicts, or that they were all illiterate until proven otherwise. He could have chosen his words more wisely, no doubt, and White is usually very careful about that, but we did not read quite as much into his remarks as the responses would indicate.

We suspect there is more to this than meets the eye. There is currently a battle going on among the teachers' organizations for membership. The leaders of each organization are quick to demonstrate that they are doing more for the teachers than their rivals. But the unhappy aspect of all this, from the governor's viewpoint, must be the fact that about the only thing they can agree on this year, in a political sense, is that Mark White is bad medicine. That must cause an ease within his camp. If the teachers depart his coalition, and if some other groups keep dragging their feet, the governor may end up in more trouble than was apparent a year or so ago.

Mark is a master at pouring oil on troubled waters however, and we would suspect he will find a way this time as well. He has, after all, managed to keep major candidates from surfacing as opponents in his own party. It is doubtful that any of those who have filed against him in the Democratic primary will cut much of a swath.

One of the ways he might calm the waters is to follow a suggestion offered in this column the other day, after the drug flap broke around the governor's ears. The suggestion was that since Mr.

SWEETHEARTS

Floydada will be represented by two sisters in the contest for Floyd County Livestock Show Queen this year. The FFA organization has chosen Debora Reeves as their Sweetheart and the 4-H group has selected Becky Reeves.

The two young ladies are daughters of Keith Reeves. Both are students at Floydada High School and active in many school activities.

Debora Reeves is a DECA student and works at Thompson's Pharmacy. She has participated in tennis, annual staff, and FFA. She was on student council for three years, was Junior Class Favorite last year, and was FFA Plowgirl in the 9th grade. She is presently vice president of DECA.

Becky Reeves has been a cheerleader for two years and was a member of FHA last year. She is secretary of the local 4-H organization and is on the county 4-H council. She has given method demonstrations and shown lambs, going to state competition last year.

Both young ladies will be selling memberships to the Floyd County Stock Show Association. The contestant who sells the most memberships will be named Queen at the county stock show in mid-February. The Floydada representatives will be competing against the Lockney representatives for the title.

Week-long activities being planned for celebration

The Floydada Chamber of Commerce and Radio Station KKAP are presently in the planning stage for sponsoring a week long Sesquicentennial celebration for the Floydada area. The event, being billed as Floydada Frontier Days, is tentatively scheduled for March 1 to March 8. An organizational meeting with Judy Mulkey, the coordinator for the project is scheduled for 3:00 p.m. at Nielson's Restaurant on Thursday, January 30.

Mulkey will explain the details of the proposed activities to be included in the week-long celebration. The event is to serve a two-fold purpose, honoring the Sesquicentennial and drawing area residents into the business community of Floydada.

If everything proceeds on schedule, Floydada Frontier Days will feature entertainment, contests and various other events to delight those attending. Among the proposed events are a fiddling contest, stick horse races, a hot dog eating contest, a treasure hunt, a greased pig contest, pony rides and a cow chip throwing contest. An antique car display, square dancing and live entertainment will round out the week along with the appearance of fantasy animals.

A stage coach which is participating in the Sesquicentennial Wagon Trail will be featured when it arrives in Floydada after leaving the train as it travels down the east side of the Panhandle.

Chamber secretary Nettie Ruth Whittle stated, "This will give Floydada something to promote in connection with the Sesquicentennial as well as providing a drawing card for bringing additional consumer business into the community."

According to Whittle, the support of between twenty and thirty local businesses and organizations will be necessary in order to actively develop the project. Any organization or group wishing to participate in the project or provide a concession stand for the event should contact KKAP Radio or the Chamber of Commerce.

Fair Board requests help

The Floyd County Fair Board is faced with making a major change in the scheduling of the annual county fair and the board members are asking Floyd County residents to express their opinion in the matter.

The fair board must decide whether to have the fair during the second week in September as usual, but possibly not have a carnival to accompany it, or to hold the fair the third week in August and be assured of a carnival service. There is a conflict of scheduling with the carnival and the services of another carnival may be difficult to obtain at this late date.

Board members are asking residents to contact the board and let them know which time they prefer. Board members include Jim Martin, Ginger Warren, Penny Ogden, Eddie Teeter, Cheryl Bybee, Cindy Cotham, Laura Wilson, Betty Hayes, Don Vernon, Lawson Rowell, Sandra Cummings and Johnny Dorman. Martin may be contacted at the J&K Insurance office at 652-2711. Please make your opinion known so that the board can make an informed decision. The board must decide by February 1, so it is important that your contact someone now to let them know how you feel as soon as possible.

Pioneer descendant, Duncan Hollums dies

The death of Silas Duncan Hollums early Saturday morning, January 25, following a lengthy illness, brings to a close another chapter in the chronicles of Floyd County Pioneer History. A descendant of the first family to settle in what later became Floyd County, Hollums was born in Floydada on June 5, 1908 to Maude Eudora Duncan and John A. Hollums.

Hollums' mother had the historical distinction of being the first white child to be born in Floyd County. Her parents, Arthur B. and Sarah Kizziar Day Duncan were the first settlers to come to the area in 1884.

As a teenager, Hollums helped his mother in the florist business. He graduated from Floydada High School in 1930. Hollums worked for Pioneer Gas Company. He married Edwina Christian in Plainview in 1938. Hollums served in the U.S. Navy during World War II. He also sold real estate and farmed during his active years.

Hollums was a member of the Church of Christ and was active in the Floyd County Historical Museum Association and the Floyd County Old Settlers Association. He was also a member of the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Hollums was laid to rest in the Floydada Cemetery on January 27 following services at the First United Methodist Church in Floydada. Rev. Earl Blair officiated. Burial was supervised by Moore-Rose Funeral Home of Floydada.

Hollums is survived by his wife, Edwina, two children, and three grandchildren. His son, John R. (Randy) Hollums, is the Floyd County District Attorney and his daughter, Harryette Eudora Purvis, is a teacher at Ranger and lives in Cisco.

VOLUNTEER FIREMAN DAN NIXON of Floydada checks the equipment to see that everything is in readiness...just in case. Dan's regular job is Lineman for Lighthouse Electric, but he is proud of his service on Floydada's volunteer team of firemen. He is one of about 17 volunteers who respond to calls when the alarm sounds, and who take turns manning the station on a 24-hour basis. Dan's job when on duty at the station is to see to the general maintenance of the trucks, police the bay area, and "listen for that phone." A 14-year resident of Floydada, Dan feels his job, and that of the other volunteers, is important, because if there is a fire "we know there will somebody there to help."

HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT PARTICIPATES IN SESQUICENTENNIAL—Texas State Department of Highways and Public Transportation Maintenance Foreman Donnell Gowens poses beside the identification sign installed as part of the department's efforts to landscape and beautify the grounds of the local office. The department plans to level and seal coat Highway 70 and 62 through the city during the year as well as continuing their on-going programs of maintenance and landscaping. Gowens urges all Floydada residents to get involved and do whatever they can to make Floydada look neater for the 1986 Sesquicentennial.

IN A PIG'S EYE, IT WAS A HUMAN SKULL—Workman moving a house on East Missouri discovered what was first thought to be a human skull. The HESPERIAN received a number of calls to that effect. Law enforcement officers were called in, and an examination of the relic by archeologist Jim Word, who pronounced it a pig's head, ended the matter.

Drip irrigation to be explored

Some of the "pros and cons" of growing cotton under drip irrigation will be explored February 18-19 at Midland.

The Drip Irrigated Cotton Symposium and Trade Show will be at the Holiday Inn-Country Villa and will open at 1:30 p.m. the first day. The event is being hosted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service of The Texas A&M University System.

"Information will be presented to cotton farmers on the potential and risks of growing cotton under drip irrigation," points out Joe Henggeler of Fort Stockton, Extension Service agricultural engineer. "In two years of demonstration work, we have witnessed successes as well as disasters on drip irrigated cotton, and speakers at the symposium will discuss factors that led to these mixed results."

"Drip irrigated cotton is still experimental in Texas, with about 200 acres grown last year," notes Henggeler. "However, more than 25,000 acres of cotton are now being grown under drip irrigation in Arizona, where yields have been increased 25 to 40 percent."

The symposium will cover topics ranging from installation to the economics of a drip irrigation system, Henggeler points out. Key discussions will deal with farming changes under drip irrigation and the effects of drip irrigation on cotton insect control, growth regulators and varieties.

White is the state's chief executive, and since leaders maybe ought to lead by example, perhaps he ought to be the first to take the test. Just to assure that those who work in the governor's office have a "drug-free" environment. Judging from some of the comments coming out of Austin, perhaps that would not be a bad idea. Occasionally it appears that he, or his advisers, are breathing something a little different.

Elsewhere in today's edition, gentle reader, you may notice a picture of Dan Nixon, who was featured in last week's "People at Work" feature on the front page. Dan didn't ask us to run it again, but we are doing it to try to make amends for an error in the picture's cutline caused by the Lamplighters eyesight. Misreading the notes turned in by the editor, we spelled his name "Don", rather than Dan. That was bad, and we apologize. We are extremely happy that our "People at Work" feature has met with such acceptance from our readers. Some have told us they cut them out and save them for one reason or another. In the off chance that Dan might want to do the same, the least we can do is see that his name is right. Hence, the reproduction. Again, our apologies. It was a good picture.

Animal sciences

teach 4-H'ers responsibility

By Clay Bloodworth, CEA-Ag

Helping young people to develop a sense of responsibility and caring is basic to 4-H animal science programs—programs in agriculture, beef, sheep, swine, commodity marketing, dairy, dog care and training, horse and veterinary science.

These programs give people a chance to explore many areas of the animal industry and to place special emphasis on areas of individual interest. The programs offer opportunities to 4-H members whether they live in rural areas or in major metropolitan areas.

4-H'ers in animal science programs are exposed to everything from simple pet care and training to marketing, breeding, research, nutrition and careers. These programs can be an integral part of their learning and living experiences and can offer young people an almost limitless array of opportunities for education and explorations.

Objectives common to program in animal sciences are these:

1. To develop leadership activities, build character and assume citizenship responsibilities.
2. To explore career opportunities.
3. To develop skills, knowledge and attitudes for lifelong use.
4. To share knowledge gained with others.

4-H members who excel in animal science programs can reap a host of awards, including some scholarships and trips to the National 4-H Congress in Chicago awarded each fall.

Projects in animal science can open an exciting world to 4-H members. To find out more about these programs, contact the County Extension Office.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serves people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

Peanut Outlook Stable

The best thing that could happen to peanut growers this year would be a major decline in the value of the U.S. dollar, says an economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System. The demand for peanuts has been stable in recent months, and a 20 percent reduction in the dollar's value would be a major breakthrough in boosting peanut exports. Peanut demand and prices have remained under pressure due to abundant world supplies of oilseed crops. The 1985 Texas peanut crop was a good one, with yields about 14 percent above average due to timely rains.

AROUND THE COUNTY

By Richard Crow

Ways to improve irrigation efficiency and curtail production costs, guidelines to determine whether to convert from one system to another, and details regarding state loans to obtain water conserving equipment were presented to some 200 farmers, ranchers and agribusiness leaders during the annual High Plains Irrigation Conference in Amarillo.

In addition, a panel of farmers related their experiences with surge, low energy precision application systems and moisture sensing devices. Farmers also viewed displays of irrigation equipment by 20 commercial suppliers.

The conference is an annual highlight of the continuing educational effort of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service to help producers make more efficient and effective use of irrigation water, said Paul Gross, district Extension director.

He cited more than two decades of demonstrations on area farms, showing how to improve row watering, merits of surge and low energy precision application (LEPA), ways to reduce tailwater runoff, retain water on the soil, reduce energy consumption and costs, and improve pumping efficiency.

Results of Extension tests on more than 600 wells and pumping systems have been placed on computers to give producers instant access to information applicable to their situations, Gross said.

"For a number of years, we've asked county Extension agents to put out demonstration handbooks" which provide the information gained through these on-farm demonstrations, he said. "Go by your county agent's office and use those demonstration handbooks," he urged.

Improving the efficiency of an irrigation pump engine by one percent cuts fuel costs by five percent, said Don Hardy, head of Don Hardy Race Cars in Floydada. Hardy said he began working with Leon New, Extension irrigation specialist and engineer, in 1981 to find ways to improve pumping engine efficiency.

He noted that truck engines popular in powering irrigation systems were designed to run on 90 octane gasoline, but were being used on natural gas. This requires modifications to improve efficiency, he said. Making the motors last under the heavy stress of pumping requires still other adjustments.

The use of irrigation systems to apply herbicides, pesticides, nutrients or other chemicals to a crop was discussed by Walter Hughes, branch manager of Tide Products, Farwell. "Chemigation is a tool that can improve efficiency, increase yield and increase profit," he said. But he stressed that no one single system fits all needs. "What works in one area may not work in another."

Moisture sensors can help producers locate water penetration, identify crop rooting depths, identify soil moisture content and guide irrigation applications New said.

He explained merits and applications of three common kinds of sensing equipment. He said tensiometers are best for corn and alfalfa and cost between $30 and $35 each. Gypsum blocks are versatile, and work well in cotton and soybeans; they cost about $150 for a meter and $3 each for the blocks placed into the field. More elaborate and more expensive, New said, is the neutron probe, which costs about $4,000 and requires licensing and adequate storage for radioactive materials.

Costs per acre for using the sensing equipment are approximately $3 for gypsum blocks or neutron probes, and $4 for tensiometers, the Extension engineer said.

Producers considering improvements to their irrigation systems need to look at more than the cost of the equipment, said Dr. Steve Amosson, Extension economist and management specialist at Amarillo. Other factors include savings of energy, water and labor, as well as uniformity and effectiveness of irrigation.

He cited a study comparing cost effectiveness of converting from furrow to improved furrow, to surge, or to sprinkler; from sprinkler to improved sprinkler or LEPA.

"Every situation is different, depending upon the efficiency you have now," Amosson said. He said that, as a general rule, the study indicates that going from furrow to improved furrow, or from sprinkler to LEPA wouldn't be profitable.

Details of a state constitutional amendment approved by voters last November and creating a pilot program to finance water conservation equipment installed by producers was discussed by State Rep. J.W. "Buck" Buchanan of Dumas. He explained that farmers would apply to their local underground water conservation district or soil and water conservation district, which would act as "bankers". These agencies would make the loans, based on criteria being developed, at a rate of 8.25 percent interest. The agency can add a service fee not to exceed one percent.

On catch, the legislator noted, is that these conservation district offices are responsible to the state for half of any loss on such loans.

"I can see some problems," Buchanan said, "especially with soil and water conservation districts, because they don't have any money except operating money" and might not want the responsibility for defaults.

County wells being tested

High Plains Water District personnel are heading out into the field to determine what effects this past year's irrigation pumpage had on the water level in the Ogallala aquifer.

In Floyd County, David Swaringen will be making the readings in a total of 97 wells.

District staff members will be making their annual depth-to-water level measurements in the District's network of more than 950 water-level observation wells. This measurement determines the distance from the land surface to the water table. Wells in the observation well network are located at a density of approximately one well per three square miles. The wells, which are privately owned, will be tagged with the well number and the water-level measurement as readings are completed.

The Water District's staff will use the information gathered through this measuring effort to update water table elevation maps and maps showing the saturated thickness of the Ogallala aquifer. This data will also be used in updating the Water District's Hydrologic Atlases.

Range weeds to be heavy

Texas ranchers can expect to see heavy weed populations on rangelands in 1986 since weeds were plentiful last year following droughts in 1983 and 1984. Broomweeds and ragweeds are the most common weeds and can be controlled easily with several herbicides, says a range brush and weed control specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System. Controlling weeds will increase forage production and will boost grass cover on rangelands. Generally, a pound of grass can be produced for every pound of weeds controlled.

Sauces add up on low sodium diet

You can carefully avoid the salt shaker and still be getting significant amounts of sodium from the sauces you use to flavor food, says Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service nutritionist Mary K. Sweeten. For example, soy sauce contains about 1,029 milligrams of sodium per tablespoon. One tablespoon of Teriyaki sauce contains 690 milligrams, chili sauce 227, Worcestershire sauce 206 and barbecue sauce 130 milligrams. Those people on a physician-prescribed low-sodium diet of 1,000 to 2,000 milligrams per day, should carefully select from sauces and other condiments to avoid exceeding their sodium allotment, she says.

Your Co-op Gin. The Best Way to Keep The Future in Your Hands.

Your co-op gin does more than gin your cotton. It's the start of a system that takes cotton all the way to the market. A system that makes cotton growers who gin at co-ops a factor in the complex system of buyers, sellers, and users of cotton.

Bringing your cotton to your co-op gin means that you're doing all you can to work within the system, and it gives you better control of your own future.

Your co-op gin also lets you share in the profits of the gin and you have a voice in how it's run. The more cotton that goes through your gin the better job it does for you, the more it pays in dividends, and the more it strengthens your voice in the industry.

Class visits cafeteria

By Lucy Flores

The Floydada High School Vocational Home Economic class, woodwork class and welding class students went by school bus to Lubbock in December. On this annual trip the Home Economic class finished up their study of food service with a visit behind the scenes at Choices Cafeteria. The manager talked to them about working in food service while they are still in school and how to get a job and keep it.

The boys went to a place where welding is done. Also they toured a factory where school tables, desks and bookcases are made. Then they went back to Choices and ate lunch with the girls. They went to South Plains Mall for a little while. They got back to Floydada in time to catch the buses. Teachers who went were: Mrs. Joyce Williams, Mr. Dale Smith and Mr. Al Galloway.

Space shuttle explodes

By Cody Nichols

This morning at 11:00 a.m. the space shuttle "Challenger" lifted off and was on its way into orbit. Approximately one-minute, twelve seconds after lift-off "Challenger" had permission to go at full thrust.

At the time when "Challenger" went at full thrust the shuttle exploded. As NASA perceived the explosion on the monitor, it looked as-if both rocket boosters exploded.

At the time of the explosion the shuttle was at an altitude of 7 nautical miles high and climbing. The shuttle burst into hundreds of pieces and were falling into the ocean just 3 or 4 miles outside of Kennedy Space Center.

Aboard "Challenger" were Francis R. Scobee; commander, Michael J. Smith; pilot, Judith Resnik, Ronald E. McNair, Ellison S. Onizuka, Gregory B. Jarvis and special passenger Christa McAuliffe, who was a school teacher.

Nobody now at this time knows what caused the explosion or if there are any survivors remaining from the explosion.

Let's take in memory the 7 passengers aboard "Challenger", and think of them of dedicating themselves to world of aeronautics, NASA, and Space.

Floydada Nursing Home Happenings

by Florence Van Hoose

Monday and Tuesday morning Dolores Cannon and Leona Neff were kept very busy in the beauty shop making all the ladies' look and feel pretty. We certainly do appreciate these two ladies who give so much of their time to others.

Monday morning devotions were by Trinity Church. The singers were Rev. G.A. Van Hoose, Deanna and Amy Westbrook, Francis Rose, Clara Redd, Dartha Westbrook and Eula Mae Wilson. Rev. Van Hoose spoke concerning faith and adding to our faith. In the afternoon we had ceramics class. The residents who painted were Myra Hall, Lucille Duncan, Mavis Willson, Estelle Eubanks, Opal Morrison, Addie Lindley, Iva Simpson, Charlie Spence, Sally Sue and Myrtle Self.

Tuesday morning devotions were by Brother Neeley Richardson. In the afternoon we had a good time of Bible study, sharing and prayer.

Wednesday morning devotions were by City Park Church of Christ. The singers were Mary Spears, Beulah Baker, Vernola Hanna, Mary Hale, Lula Teague, Lorilla Bradley, and Eunice Hardy. After devotions Myra Hall and Charlie Spence beat Faye McMahan and me in a game of "42". In the afternoon Jo Bryant came and played Bingo with us. Estelle Eubanks and Myra Hall bingo'ed the most times.

Thursday morning devotions were by Rev. Earl Blair. In the afternoon we watched movies and ate popcorn.

Friday morning devotions were by Virginia Cage, Mrs. Withers, Freida Simpson and Mary Coreley. Virginia led the singing and Freida spoke about Jockabed, Moses's mother. In the afternoon we went on the bus ride to Plainview and were treated to ice cream at Sonic. The residents who went on the bus ride were Opal Morrison, Della Halenack, Addie Lindley, Una Clark and Faye McMahan.

This week's visitors included: Rena Barris, Elvia and Lovelle Childs, Hazel Bradley and Winnie Neil.

Lakeview News

Land clearing equipment has been at work on the Joe Dunn farm, as the old garage and outbuildings were burned. A large pit was dug beside the building, a tractor bladed the remains into the pit, and smoothed the ground level over it. The same method was used a few weeks ago on the B.L. Breed place and now all is level as though never a house, barn, orchard or any mark of an efficient farmstead had stood there for decades. Time marches on, and the prairie remains.

Mrs. Sherry Moses is up and going about her business, after her severe burns. She was operating a cotton stripper that came in contact with a live high wire shortly before Christmas. She lost two toes off each foot and part of an index finger where the electricity exited. The power had encircled her hip in a deep third degree burn, which healed quickly, thanks to her youthful good health and prayers from many.

Mr. and Mrs. W.A. Bunch have been staying quietly at home since they visited in Carrolton during the holidays with their sons and families. They visited Rodney and Vicky Bunch and children, Kalisa, Brandon and Jeramy. They also visited Mr. and Mrs. Darrel Bunch and children, Brenda and Tonya.

A pack of six large coyotes attacked the Australian cow dogs at the T-Bar ranch house Sunday morning about daylight. The pack crouched about a quarter mile from the house and sent the dogs reeling every time they ventured toward the mesquites. Finally the leader headed straight for the house followed by the other five coyotes in a dead run. A pistol shot from the front door swerved them at the car port and the coyotes headed back to Blanco River, followed by the emboldened cowdogs. The dogs were called back for fear the coyotes would kill them if they got them into the brush. A few years ago when Lakeview hunters decorated the fence posts with coyote hides, predators would not have been so bold. Now they are protected by the Federal government and are highly visible over the community this year.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Harrison were in Hale Center Friday to visit Mona and Jean Dunn. From there they went on to Plainview to visit Roy and Sunshine Smith.

On Tuesday Ruth and Don went to Amarillo to visit Don's sister, Mrs. Vivian Hall. Their hosts took them out for lunch at a new Luby's cafeteria in Amarillo.

Beverly Harrison says they have not done much except school since Christmas. On that day she served dinner to her parents, the Dwight Sniders of Amarillo and Milton and Jo Harrison.

Misty Bertrand is walking her herd of pigs everyday, getting them in shape for the local show February 7 and 8.

Faye and William Bertrand joined friends at Ruth and Weldon Hammonds house Sunday to watch the Super Bowl game.

Max and Jeanette, Debbie and Tracy Harrison came out to the Don Harrisons for Sunday dinner.

Warm sunny days are beautiful for working outside. Forsythia bushes are in bloom. Still dry, dry.

Go out and support the local stock show next week.

CEDAR HILL NEWS

By Grace Lemons

January 27:

Our weather is still cold and dry. The farmers are doing field work but need moisture on the wheat.

There is still wildlife among the canyons. Phil Lemons captured a bobcat last Tuesday on his farm near the cap when he crippled him and then roped him. The bobcat is a species of the North American Lynx weighing from 12 to 30 pounds with a short tail and yellowish brown fur according to the encyclopedia.

Lindsay Lackey is at home after spending several days at Caprock Hospital in Floydada last week. He is much improved.

Sylvia Yeary is improving at Lockney

General Hospital after suffering a stroke while at Sunday school Sunday morning. We trust that she will rapidly gain her strength.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl F. Lemons had supper with their son, Marvin and Linda Lemons and family Monday evening in Lockney.

"Happy Birthday" to Junior Taylor who celebrated his birthday Tuesday, January 21.

Dinner guests in the home of Edna Gilly Sunday were Trudi and Craig Gilly, Amy and Tara, Lori and Mark Gilly, Emory and Jessica and Leah and Jerry Lackey, Brandi, Kacie and Mack.

Edna Gilly had dinner and visited Johnnie and Delise Harrison in Lubbock Saturday.

Ruthie Clark of Plainview visited Edna Gilly Thursday afternoon.

Last Wednesday, Cephus and Imogene Fortenberry visited their daughter, Jean and Troy Smith and boys in Dumas. They returned home Saturday.

Houseguests in the home of Tom and Gladys Fortenberry for the weekend were Preston and Patrick Vick of Lubbock.

Jackie and Glenda Thompson visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Les Thompson Monday.

Mindy Evans of Floydada spent Friday night with her friend, Kacie Lackey.
