ACTIVITIES THROUGHOUT THE DAY

To increase everyone's enjoyment of the occasion, the Pioneer Reunion Board has sanctioned other events which will be ongoing during the day.

A juried art show has been set up by the Floyd County Arts Association. Entries may be taken to 103 North Main on May 21, Thursday, from 1 until 8 p.m. The entry fee is $4.00 per entry. The show will be open to the public from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. on Saturday.

A flower show featuring wildflower arrangements will be on tap at the Floyd County Museum. Entries may begin registering at 9:00 a.m. The show will be open to the public.

On a softer note, the Floyd County Historical Museum sponsored quilt showed will continue through Saturday from 10:00 a.m. until 5:00 p.m. This display is worth a look as it features quilts both "old and new" for a glimpse of the past alongside the present.

Several booths will be set up around the square affording those in attendance a chance to purchase a variety of items including food and beverages.

DANCES

Two dances are planned for the evening hours on Saturday. There will be a country and western dance at Massie Activity Center from 9:00 p.m. until 1:00 a.m. Admission is $5.00. The band will be Blue Denim.

Site of the second dance is the rodeo slab east of town. The Mike Porter Band is scheduled to play from 9:00 to 1:00 and the admission will be $5.00.

REUNION OFFICIALS

Responsible for planning this 56th annual affair were Boyce Mosley, president of the association, Francis Staniforth, vice president, Gayle Reay, secretary, and H.E. Frizzell, treasurer.

Many others devoted time and energy to organizing the day. They include Barbara Edwards, chairman of registration, and Aldine Williams, who served as chairman of the dances and will see to clean-up operations. Sed Waller is in charge of parade preparations. He has been assisted by Janice McCandless, Carolyn Jackson, Lisa Mosley and Fred Cardinal. Don McCandless will announce the parade and Josephine Lyles will register parade entries. G.L. Fawver is once again in charge of lunch plans and Bill Daniel has been taking care of the preparations for the auctions. John Fortenberry has been responsible for the team roping event and Nancy Willson was tapped to serve as publicity chairman.

Chairing related events are Lovene Moore, in charge of the memorial service, Mamie Wood, chairman for the wildflower show, and Jo Goen, chairman of the art exhibit.

Connie Galloway and Phil Wilson are handling necessary electrical wiring and Script Printing is responsible for the printing of handbills and maps.

BRING CHAIRS

The Pioneer Reunion officials are urging everyone planning to attend the events of Old Settlers Day to bring their own chairs for use during portions of the planned events that can be enjoyed while sitting. "We are certain that many will be more comfortable in their own chairs and this will insure that there are enough chairs to go around," says J.K. West.

West asked that anyone bringing chairs be certain that each chair has the owners name and address on it so that it will be easily identifiable. He also asks that those bringing chairs "try to keep up with their own."

Hardin stated that he had been told that the county would not have to close the jail if the court would Jonelle Fawver to Penny Golightly. CPA "follow through" with the renovation of the jail interior according to information they were given by architect Ed Stiles, hired by the county for the project on May 13. The TJSC also stipulated that "a jailer and a dispatcher (two employees) will have to on duty from 8:00 a.m. until 12:00 midnight seven days a week. One employee who may be designated either a jailer or a dispatcher can work the 12:00 midnight to 8:00 a.m. hours seven days a week."

Those conditions resulted in a motion by Precinct 3 Commissioner Thomas Warren that Sheriff Fred Cardinal be authorized to hire a third jailer to institute the two employee coverage required by the commission. The motion was seconded by Kay Crabtree, commissioner of Precinct 4. The unanimous vote of the four commissioners approved the measure.

According to Hardin, "Taking these steps relieves us of the need to go to Austin for a previously scheduled hearing to show why the jail should be allowed to remain open.' That hearing was to take place on May

Other matters addressed at the May 19 session included the granting of an easement on county road West Ollie Avenue of the south side of Floydada for the installation of a 14 inch water line as part of a water improvement project for the city.

An approval of spending an additional $309 towards the rural fire truck was obtained. The truck, purchased from Oden Chevrolet, has arrived. The axle had to be adjusted to meet specifications and this increased the cost. Approval was forth coming and the charge will be paid. The extra expense still leaves Oden the low bidder on the equipment on the new vehicle "within ness" for a parent or guardian.

The personnel manual under dismissioners agreed to meet the rec- cussion for adoption to set policy for county employees was again tabled pending adoption at later session. The to retain the Floyd County Jail as an final policy will regulate hours, salary and wages, vacations, sick leave, and

Curfew ordinance to undergo enforcement

"At the request of the city council and the Mayor, we will be actively enforcing the curfew ordinance for minors under the age of 18," said

Floydada police chief James Hale. Members of the city council asked Hale to begin more strict enforcement of the ordinance due to complaints from residents along the "drag" and adjacent businesses and vacant lots on Second Street. The complaints centered on "groups of young people standing around parked cars and conversing loudly after midnight."

A September 1976 ordinance, numbered 572, is being dusted off by the police department and will be enforced by city police. This action is being taken in an attempt to alleviate the problem which grows more prominent with the coming of summer months and the end of the school year.

The curfew regulates "the presence of minors under the ages of eighteen (18) years in public streets and other places between certain hours in the City of Floydada." It is unlawful, according to the ordinance, "for any parent or person havng lawful custody to permit a minor to be upon the streets and around other public buildings within such time

The specific time limits, 12 midnight to 5 a.m., are applicable each night of the week including weekends. Exceptions to this regulation are for minors engaged in "lawful employment" during these hours, in the company of a purchase by more than $1,000. Under this ordinance, it is "unlawful for the parent or other adult person having the care and custody of a minor under the age of 18 to knowingly permit such minor to go or be upon any of the streets of the City of Floydada or be in or upon any other public grounds, public places and public buildings between the hours of 12:00 o'clock midnight and 5:00 a.m." Violations of the curfew may result in penalties for both the minor and the parent or guardian. As a misdemeanor, "any minor violating the provisions shall be dealt with in accordance with the juvenile court law and procedure." Continued violations will result in the classification of the minor as an "habitual violator."

Parents or guardians found guilty of violating the ordinance may be fined up to $200 per violation. Each instance will be considered a seperate violation under the terms of the ordinance.

City officials are reminding those responsible for minor residents of Floydada that it is up to them to see that their children are "in by midnight and do not create a public disturbance after that hour."

Baccalaureate Service Sunday

The First Baptist Church will hold Baccalaureate Service Sunday night at 8 p.m. for Floydada's graduating seniors. The program will be televised on Channel 2:

STATE COMPETITORS - Representing Floydada High School at state competitions in early June will be juniors Jane Willson and Ludustia Leatherman and seniors Lonna Batey [back row] and Sabrina Stepp [front]. Willson will be competing as a solo twirler and with Leatherman and Batey as an ensemble. Stepp will be competing in music theory. This brings to six the total number of FHS band students who will make the trip to Austin. Junior Gabriel Mendoza and senior Dawn Atteberry are also representing FHS in solo contests with their instruments.

Infant walker recalled

In cooperation with the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, McCrory Stores has announced a voluntary recall of Baby Walker, Reference Number PHT417, made expressly for York Distribution Company, due to seat and strap designs which could result in injury to a child. Approximately 103,000 walkers have been imported nationwide since 1983.

McCrory is recalling these walkers as a result of 30 incidents of crotch strap slippage or disengagement and tearing or stretching of the seat material, which could allow an infant to fall through the seat to the floor and become caught or entangled. One incident of crotch strap slippage is known to have resulted in a broken collar bone. The walkers involved are round with a silver metal frame and yellow tray with three play dials, with multi-colored animal print vinyl padded seat and six yellow plastic wheels. The affected walkers contain a silver sticker under the trav listing Reference Number PHT417 and York

Distribution Co. McCrory will provide a full refund to all owners of the Model PHT417. The walkers were sold for approximately $15 at the following McCrory Company stores: McCrory, T.G.&Y, J.J. THE REV. HOWELL FARNSWORTH was born in McKinney, Texas, but moved to Dallas at an early age, and attended schools there. He graduated from Sunset High School. He married Linda Sue Tate in 1960. They have two children, Phillip who was born in 1962, and Holly born in 1966. The Rev. Farnsworth received a B.A. degree in 1970 from Dallas Baptist College. He attended Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, receiving the M. Div. degree in 1974. He has served as pastor of Baptist Churches in Alvord, Texas, in Groesbeck, Texas; and Iowa Park, Texas. He became the pastor of the First Baptist Church in Floydada in October 1984.

Looking Forward

In a few days we will be saying to another Senior Class at Floydada High School. 'Best Wishes, Good Luck, May God bless you," and other such greetings. The Bible tells us that we are very important to God. Jesus said in Matthew 10:29-31, "Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing? (about four cents) and one of them shall not fall on the ground apart from the will of your Father. But the very hairs of your head are all numbered. Fear not therefore, ye are of more value than many sparrows." Our young people need to know that we love them and want God's best

I was reading a book the other day entitled Meeting the Challenge by Herbet C. Gabhart, Chancellor at Belmont College, Nashville, Tennessee. In the book he gave "Thirteen Rules for Right Living on Campus or in Society." It would do well for all of us to adhere to these rules. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength" (Mark 12:30).

"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" (Mark 12:31).

"Love your enemies" (Matthew 5:44). "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness" (Matthew 6:33).

"Whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain" (Matthew 5:41). "Whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also" (Matthew 5:39).

'Give to him that asketh thee," food, water or clothes (Matthew 5:42; Matthew

"All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them" (Matthew 7:12).

"Bear ye one another's burdens" (Galatians 6:2).

"See then that ye walk circumspectly,...Redeeming the time" (Ephesians

"Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man" (Colossians 4:6). "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth" (2 Timothy 2:15).

"Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him" (I Corinthians 16:2).

All of these rules are out of the New Testament and if we all lived by them our world would be a better place to live. Our young people need to see the need to walk with God and to live for him each day. So, Senior Class of 1987 we wish you the best which comes by having a close walk with the Savior and by seeking His will in your life every day. Class of '87, may God bless you as you read His Word and live by the Bible one day at a time. God has a plan for your life; seek him every day.

FHS student, Marti Stepp, becomes published poet

Floydada High School student Marti Stepp will soon have a poem she wrote published in a hardbacked book of poems. The volume, titled "The Great Amerian Poetry Anthology," is due for publication in late June in an artbook format Marti entered her poem "To Mary from John" in the national world of Poctry contest for great American poetry this spring and received an honorable mention award for her efforts. This led to the publication of her poem in the anthology.

A junior at FHS, Marti is active in the Speech and Drama Club. She has been a cast member in several plays the group has presented, competed in UIL contests in prose, poetry and spelling and is a past member of the band. She is a daughter of Joseph and Juanita Stepp.

To Mary From John By Marti Jo Stepp

[copywright pending] During the war I was a nurse. I visited the patients and talked to them.

But, mainly, I just listened.

There was one man, boy actually. His name was John. He asked me to help him.

He wanted a letter written To his beloved Mary I sat with parchment, ink and quill.

His lips moved. But all he said was, "Mary I love you."

Then his voice faded away. I wrote the line, then looked over at

His eyes were closed. And no breath he drew

I looked at the parchment. I felt I should finish the letter But how...how... How to tell her he was gone

I wondered on that point, But, then I knew. I finished the letter By signing it "John."

Regulated Texas shipping rates

Texas is the second largest foodgrowing state in the nation, yet only 6 alternatives to reverse this trend, and percent of the Texas consumption is processed in-state. Tons of Texas gain a major share in this important onions are shipped North where they are processed, packaged and frozen and shipped back to Texas for sale in grocery stores.

Texas grows a third of all the nation's cotton, but only 1 percent of all cotton cloth manufacturing is done in Texas textile mills. Anderson, Clayton & Co. uses the equivalent of all the soybeans grown in the state for its vegetable oil products, yet it buys its soybean oil from Kansas and Arkansas because Texas growers ship all of their sovbeans out of state to be processed.

It is cheaper to move Texas agriculture out-of-state via deregulated interstate rates to be processed, packaged and/or frozen and shipped back into Texas via deregulated interstate rates for consumption. Intrastate shipping of canned corn and spinach Austin, to Lubbock, is 416 miles at $651.00.

Interstate shipping: Austin to Baton Rouge, LA is 428 miles at $558.00.

The cost of moving Texas agriculture to Texas markets is so high that it's cheaper for Texas grocery stores to buy agriculture from outside of Texas because the transportation cost is such a big factor.

Texas farmers receive an average of 26 percent of the consumer's total dollar while the processing and marketing sectors receive 74 percent of the same dollar. Raw products sent out of the state for processing and returned as a consumer product defines - undevel-

It would be advantageous to explore consider methods by which Texas can Reform of Texas' regulated trucking system would create an economic environment, in the heart of Texas' agriculture districts, conducive to processing and distributing agriculture for 17 million Texans to consume.

The June, 1986 report from the Agribusiness Task Force entitled Agriculture Technology: The Texas Agenda

"Intrastate transportation regulations were examined in a recent legislative session with a view to reducing the cost of transportation of agricultural products within Texas. Present regulations place a substantial penalty on intrastate shippers of agricultural products. It is appropriate for state government to re-examine these issues and to develop a contemporary set of regulations that do not place Texas at an disadvantage relative to out-of-state industries shipping products to Texas."

Finished feed products are comprised of grain products such as corn. milo, wheat, rice, wheat by products and rice by products; and are sold as cattle, poultry, horse and hog feed. The finished feed products industry is negatively impacted by Texas' regulated trucking system. Texas feed producers are less competitive in the market place because Texas' regulated intrastate rates inflate the cost of the finished product while serving as an umbrella for Oklahoma

The Oklahoma feed producers can deliver a lower cost product because of lower interstate rates but the entire savings is not passed on to Texas consumers. The Oklahoma feed producers undercut Texas prices to maintain a competitive edge at the highest possible profit margin.

The meat and meat related industries are striving to remain a viable part of the economy. Texas' trucking regulations place an unfair burden on their ability to be competitive.

The shipping of agriculture products was deregulated in the Texas' 1983 legislative session only to the first point of processing. When the tops are cut off carrots, or the dirt is washed off of strawberries, or a piece of paper is placed between fruit, the produce must be shipped under regulated intrastate

Reforming Texas' regulated trucking will regenerate the agriculture communities of Texas and create jobs and tax revenue through processing industhe focus of Soil and Water Stewardship Week, May 24-31.

This year's theme is "Help, Hope, Healing.'

"The theme reminds all Americans that our vital soil, water and related natural resources must be of deep concern to all of us as well as a concern for the survival and well-being of the primary custodians-farmers and ranchers," notes Dr. B.L. Harris, soils specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"Help, hope and healing are needed to bind the economic and resource wounds on America's farms and ranches," adds Harris. "The survival and welfare of farmers and the land they till must be a matter of deep concern to all

Taking care of nature's resources is of us who eat food, wear clothes and build homes. Caring for soil and water resources is a responsibility none of us can ignore."

> The Extension Service is joining with the Association of Texas Soil and Water Conservation Districts in the nationwide observance of Soil and Water Stewardship Week, which annually focuses on the importance of caring for this nation's precious soil and water resources so as to provide for future genera-

"The basic motivation for the conservation and orderly development of natural resources is man's recognition of his responsibilities under God to protect and use wisely His precious gifts of soil and water," Harris points tions. The observance was begun in

"Human survival depends on other living things-and those living things are dependent on soil and water," says Harris. "So conservation of soil and water is essential for meeting the food needs of future generations. "Clean water and fertile land are the basic source of abundant food and fiber," adds the soils specialist. "We have an obligation to leave our descendants an inheritance whose capacity for producing food has not been depleted. "In today's 'high tech' society, there often is a tendency to overlook the basic things on which our lives depend," emphasizes Harris. "Soil and Water Stewardship Week serves as a reminder that all life forms come from nature's soil and water resources."

Management controls machinery costs

ket value - salvage value) x annual use

This will provide a straight line

÷ remaining life)

Machinery cost is one important production cost that can be controlled by good management. As farm acres decline due to participation in government programs, producers need to make adjustments in machinery capacity to reduce costs, says Dr. Jim McGrann.

"Many farmers have not replaced machinery in recent years because of low farm income, but they must replace worn-out machinery or face increasing repair costs. All these factors point to increased opportunities to increase farm income through intensive management of the farm machinery investment," notes McGrann, a Texas Agricultural Extension Service economist.

The first step to control machinery costs is to develop a detailed inventory of the farm machinery, suggests Mc-Grann. This inventory should include machinery description, year of purchase, current market value, annual use, use to date (accumulated use), and expected economic life (remaining life).

'From this inventory, identify machinery that is not used or is not worth repairing," advises the economist. "Sell these items even if they only bring scrap iron value; it's money in the pocket."

Next, calculate annual ownership cost of each item of machinery. This includes interest, insurance and depreciation cost on the machinery investment. Values developed in the inventory are used for this cost analysis.

Calculate current interest cost by multiplying current market value by the interest charge on current debt or what one could earn in a savings account (opportunity cost), says McGrann. A similar calculation is made to determine insurance cost.

Economic depreciation cost is calculated by taking the machine's current market value and subtracting the expected salvage value, multiplying this value by the annual use and dividing by the remaining life. Expressed mathmatically, economic depreciation is as follows: Economic depreciation = (mar-depreciation based on the current market value and expected annual use, or what part of the remaining life that is used during the operating year. This depreciation value will differ from income tax depreciation that does not reflect true economic life. 'All ownership costs can be calculated on a per acre basis by dividing annual ownership by the number of acres farmed with each machinery item," explains McGrann.

Operating costs can be estimated by keeping a record of fuel use for different operations and repair and maintenance

"Having a good machinery inventory and estimation of ownership and operating cost is essential for cost control and replacement decisions," emphasizes

Developing a seasonal machinery use calendar can provide good information to estimate machinery capacity and requirements, he adds. In critical periods (planting, primary tillage and harvesting), consider how capacity could be increased by working more hours per day, or perhaps adding, seasonal labor. If excess capacity exists, what is the chance of picking up custom work? With cutbacks in acres farmed, look for ways to reduce machinery investments and get capacity in line with requirements.

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service has microcomputer software that can facilitate machinery management decision making, adds McGrann.

MEMORIAL DAY

Our thoughts turn to those brave people of our armed forces who died while serving their country. In times of peace and times of war, these courageous men and women stood ready to defend the very freedom that we so cherish. On Memorial Day, we pay silent tribute to them all. Their deeds shall never be forgotten...they did not die in vain.

Earlier Days' remembered by Will Martin

By Will Martin

A few interesting experiences that took place to me in earlier days:

I shall begin with the first automobile that I ever had the pleasure of riding in when I was around five or six years old. Of course, I had ridden in wagons and buggies long before I was old enough to remember riding in anything.

We had a neighbor by the name of Gravitt, a family who lived about 11/2 miles southeast of our place. John, as the man of the Gravitt family was named, traded for a Brush automobile from a man who lived at Hale Center. After John got the hang of how to operate the automobile pretty well, he came over and took Mama and Papa for

One reason they left me at home with my sister Jewel was lack of room, as anyone can see if you will visit the museum at Crosbyton. My seeing the Brush automobile at Crosbyton was one of the things that jogged my memory

A week or so after Mama and Papa took their ride we were picking cotton close to the south road. An automobile happened to come by which was a pretty rare thing at that time. It was very interesting to me and I asked Mama, "How does it feel or seem to ride in one of those things?" Mama's answer was that it's just about like riding in a buggy only a whole lot faster. I think someone estimated they were going about 15 miles per hour.

About two or three weeks after the cotton patch episode, Mama and I walked over to the Gravitts for an afternoon visit. We visited each other quite often, and we also visited other neighbors up to a couple of miles away, always on foot.

The evening I spoke of, John said he would take us home in his Brush. If I remember right his machine did not have a tool box on back just had a small bed on the back where I sat and rode home. Anyone will notice the Brush was and caused me to decide to attempt this chain driven on the rear wheels. It car had ratchets to take the place of the modern differential.

I thought I was in hog heaven flying home along at about 15 miles per hour listening to those chains humming a tune. The word "car" had not come into general use at that time.

Allow me to say a few more things concerning automobiles in that day. I have in a previous writing told about Brother Henry getting a job on helping pave the first streets in Floydada. Pretty soon he felt "rich" enough to make a payment on a 1914 model Ford touring car. I think it was Flynn Thagard who showed Henry how to drive it. Flynn worked at the garage where Henry bought the auto.

He took all the family for a ride that evening when he brought it home. I hoped he wouldn't turn us over and he didn't. Autos scarcely ever had a wreck with one another in those times; they just turned over. It was cold weather time in the fall and Henry drained the water out of the cooling system so it wouldn't freeze and burst things.

There was no such thing as antifreeze then. I heard a few people put coal oil in the cooling system, but that was too risky to get hot and catch on

The next morning after Henry got his Ford he filled it with water and tried to crank it, but it wouldn't start. He tried jacking up a back wheel with the high lever pushed down to make the fly wheel run closer to the field coil circle, so it would throw more electricity to the coils and on to the spark plugs. But still it wouldn't start.

So he hitched up a team and Papa helped him pull it all over the place and still it wouldn't start. Poor old Henry had to drain the radiator of water and walk to work late. He went to ask Flynn more about it and with more knowledge and experience he mastered it pretty well. I watched him and studied the machine. Henry wouldn't let me drive it but just now and then. He said I was too

Cars in those days were quite different to what they are now. When I wrote about my brother's first Ford it was hand cranked with no battery or starter and magneto lights. When you slowed down the lights would get dim. This was after they quit using carbide lights and coal oil lights on the side. There were no heaters or air conditioners. We just had side curtains that we put up to keep the cold wind out. I could tell a lot more about cars in those days, looked to me that the shaft next to the but I want to talk about some things of other subjects that have changed over the years.

> We will go back to John Gravitt. He wasn't rich but seemed that he could get a hold of more of the new things of that day than the average person.

One of the first things that I remember seeing and hearing at Gravitt's home was the first phonograph I ever saw or heard play. It was one that had cylinder records and had a needle that took the sound off the cylinder and played the sound through a large horn, like we sometimes see today in the ads that say, "His master's voice." To me, the talk or music was coarse and hard to understand, but I enjoyed it just the same when Allie Fay "Gravitt" Holiday would play it for me.

Uncle Josh, a comedian, entertained us with jokes but I can't recall any of them now. Anyone who did not hear those players then can't imagine the vast difference in the quality of tone in players of today and back then.

Like everything else, the progress in players has all depended on the success of science.

The next thing that I first recollect seeing was a cuckoo clock. They still build one or more models similar to the old models. But I think they are powered different.

The old clock hung on the wall with the works and cuckoo in a decorated frame that I thought was pretty and interesting. It had two fairly long metal weights that to me seemed to be about three feet long when down full length. When the top weight started down it turned a shaft that ran the clock works. And I think when it got to or almost to the bottom it had to be wound back up manually with the other weight.

I will confess that I don't know exactly how it worked. I do know the cuckoo bird hopped out of the top of the frame on the hour and made a sound like a real cuckoo bird as many times as the hour. Three cuckoos, for example, meant three o'clock. I think it sounded every half hour, too.

Most country people did not have grass on the yard and keep them mowed as we do now. We kept the weeds hoed and swept clean with a broom.

Such as Allie Faye's yard. She had sort of a four-wheel machine that had a lever the rider would work back and forth and run a cog that turned the back wheels and made it carry you over the smooth yard. The machine was guided with the feet by the front wheels.

She would let me ride the machine, our house. Their name was Shultz.

After 1918 they came out with newer model tractors called wheatland tractors that plowed wheat land to be sowed with mostly tandem disks and one-way plows. I never had the chance to operate a tractor until about 1924. Shultzs were plowing a little patch of wheat land for Papa. Bonnie was driving the Allis Chalmers tractor. He let me ride with him and guide the machine a couple of rounds. As we came to the end where the windmill was and I sure enjoyed the ride. Allie Faye located he jumped off and went to get called it the "Chicago Flyer." I never himself a drink of water. I was left on the tractor by myself. I sure thought I was doing "something." Of course, Bonnie came back and finished the plot of ground.

I drove tractors several years after that, as well as combines. You got covered with dust and chaff so bad your own wife hardly recognized you, and most of the women made you wash up on the back porch before you could come inside for supper.

I suppose it is hard for young people to grasp the difference of modern cab machinery and the first open air machines, where you have air conditioning and radios and what not.

My first experience of operating a tractor came where I took on the full responsibility after being shown how to operate the tractor, watch and plow and keep everything greased and operating properly.

Harvey Patterson, a neighbor of ours on the south from our place, heard I was looking for a job, came over and hired me to drive a tractor at night. He said he would sleep in his car and be there the first night. So all things started off without a hitch. I didn't have to bother Harvey until after I had eaten my midnight lunch, filled up with kerosene and greased all he had told me to grease and did all I could think to do.

Mrs. Patterson could make the best sandwiches I ever ate in a field lunch.

The old Model "D" wheat land tractor had two cylinders, operated on kerosene and had a valve on top of each cylinder that had to be opened partly to let part of the compression out so anyone could turn the motor to crank it. You had to prime it with gasoline for quick firing. Anyone must crank the Model "D" by turning the fly wheel which was on the side.

I forgot to open the valves or prime it. When I set the gas level and tried to turn the fly wheel I just barely could turn about one-fourth round on account of the high compression.

So I gave up and awakened Harvey. I told him I must be getting weak because I couldn't turn the motor. After he saw the situation, he slapped his knees and really took a good laugh. He showed me my mistake. I never forgot it again.

One time when I was working for him we ate dinner at the house in daytime with another of Mrs. Patterson's good cooking. As we sat at the table, Harvey said, "Well, Bill, if you have the nerve to eat it up from the wife and kids just help yourself."

I see Mrs. Patterson nearly every Sunday at church. She sure is a friendly, sweet lady. Harvey and Mrs. Patterson had a large family. One of her girls and families live here and a son lives at Vernon. These three are my favorites and greatly respect them and all their

Ag trade, U.S. constitution

Agricultural trade was almost as important to the United States the day the U.S. Constitution was signed-Sept. 17, 1787—as it is now, according to Douglas E. Bowers, USDA historian.

The United States in 1787 was already a major exporter of agricultural commodities, as it is today, and it depended heavily on that trade to pay for the crops for export. Some didn't work, goods it had to import.

Like most nations emerging from colonial status, the United States produced primarily raw materials and imported most of its manufactured goods. Even with agricultural exports, countries in growing flax and hemp, but the balance of payments was usually negative in this period—a problem we in this country. are facing again now.

Americans had a critical interest in exports from the beginning. With some 90 percent of the people living on farms, there was little internal market for agricultural goods. Even if there had been large cities, transportation within our three primary agricultural exports and between the states was so poor that it was often easier to ship overseas than to send goods a short distance overland.

After the Revolution, America's trade was in jeopardy. Most of the country's trading partners in Europe and the Caribbean were part of colonial systems. Great Britain, France, Spain, the Netherlands and Portugal each wanted to use raw materials from its own colonies in the West Indies (Caribbean) or South America, and to restrict business from competitors. So when the United States left the British Empire, it lost much of its market for exports, and former allies like France were not eager to open their ports to a new competitor.

We now take it for granted that the national government (and not the states) has the necessary power to regulate international trade as well as interstate commerce. But 200 years ago-before the U.S. Constitution was drafted, signed and ratified-it did not, and the question of giving the national government broad powers to regulate trade was a very debatable issue.

Under the Articles of Confederation (in effect from 1781 to 1789) the national government was too weak to negotiate real trade concessions from other countries. It could not even control America's own internal trade.

States levied individual tariffs on imported goods. And some states. including New York, erected trade barriers between themselves and neighboring states.

Western farmers had trouble shipping their produce down the Mississippi River because the Spanish did not want them to use New Orleans as a loading point for export.

In fact, trade issues caused several states to send delegates to Annapolis in September 1786 to discuss revision of the confederation Constitution. These same trade issues were a factor leading to the Constitutional Convention in Philadelphia the following year.

Americans had tried growing various some did. Thomas Jefferson and others had attempted to grow European-style wine grapes-without success. Silk growing had been tried in several states. There was also an effort to compete with Russia and the Baltic these needed cheaper labor than we had

By the time of the Constitution, a number of successful export crops had been introduced, each with its own market. The three primary exports were grain and grain products: wheat flour, wheat and corn, in that order. Today, are similar: soybeans, corn and wheat.

Grain was not used as livestock feed then nearly as much as now, so corn made up only a small part of grain exports. Wheat was grown mainly in the Mid-Atlantic states, but was also important in Virginia. Despite high tariffs in Britain and some other countries. Americans found a market for grain in Europe during the 1780's and 1790's due to crop failures and the wars on the European continent that followed the French Revolution.

Indies. Livestock was occasionally exported, as were salted meat provisions for ships and for West Indian plantations. These came mostly from Northern Southern crops benefited from more reliable markets because they competed less with European crops. Then as now, tobacco found ready sales in most of Europe. It was produced in such quantities that by the 1780's some progressive Southern farmers were turning away from it because of soil exhaustion and a desire to be less dependent on world prices.

Rice was grown mainly in South Carolina and was shipped to the Caribbean and Southern Europe. Exports of indigo, which made a widely used blue dye, declined after the British bonus payment to indigo growers ended. In addition, farmers clearing land throughout the new states were able to profitably turn surplus logs into exportable potash used for making soap. Some southern farmers produced naval stores such as turpentine or pitch.

The Constitutional Convention debate on trade had a modern ring: At issue was how much power the Federal government would have to protect

Southern delegates-whose region depended the most on exports-expressed concern about granting broad commercial powers to the national government. They feared that such powers might lead to high tariffs on imports, which would increase the cost of goods they had to import and raise the specter of retaliation against their

Some delegates believed Congress might try to pass navigation acts in the style of the British Parliament, restricting foreign trade to American ships or making other regulations that would discourage trade. They argued that Congress should not be able to pass trade legislation without a two-thirds

A few Southerners also worried that the new government would undermine the plantation system of agriculture by cutting off or taxing the importation of slaves into the United States.

By contrast, Northerners generally wanted a strong national authority over commerce so the government could negotiate trade matters better with foreign powers and raise revenues by a protective import tariff.

As Alexander Hamilton argued, tariff collections could finance the government and eliminate the need for a federal tax on land. After much debate, a compromise was worked out: Congress could pass trade acts by a simple majority, but could not levy any tariff on There were also markets in the West exports. The Constitutional prohibition against export tariffs has been an important benefit to farmers for the last 200 years.

As for the slave trade, Congress could tax imported slaves but could not interfere further with the slave trade before 1808.

In its final form, the Constitution gave the national government the power it needed to regulate domestic and international trade.

While broad international trade agreements were unknown in the 18th century, early governments under the Constitution were able to negotiate trade concessions with Britain and other countries which worked to the advantage of farmers.

In later periods, this national control of trade would be even more significant. Agricultural exports were extremely important to the development of the new nation: They became the basis of American economic growth in the first half of the 19th century, which in turn led to industrialization and the emergence of the U.S. as a world power.

Cholesterol levels increase risk

Many people are trying to cut back on saturated fat because of its association fats. with elevated blood cholesterol levels and increased risk of heart disease.

is that to decrease their intake of cholesterol from saturated fats, they must change their overall eating habits to reduce total fat," maintains Mary Kinney Sweeten, a Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service nutritionist.

"It's not simple to cut out saturated fats alone since fats in foods are mixtures of saturated and unsaturated fats," she explains.

In general, foods containing saturated fats are solid at room temperature. says Sweeten. They include animal products such as poultry, fish, meat, eggs and some dairy products.

There are two types of unsaturated

Unsaturated fats are usually from plant sources and are liquid at room temperature.

"But even a polyunsaturated oil, such as a standard vegetable oil, will contain 40 percent polyunsaturated fat and 13 percent saturated fat," she remarks.

"Palm oil and coconut oil are also important exceptions to note." says the nutritionist. "Both these vegetable oils, which are used extensively in processed foods and commercial baked goods, are over 80 percent saturated fat.'

Sweeten says it would be very difficult for many people to eat only foods that are low in saturated fats.

"Most people want and need to include some foods from animal sources in their diets, because they are a major the skin from poultry will help reduce saturated fats from these protein foods," she says.

The nutritionist advises building a diet lower in total fat around the recommended two servings daily of protein foods and rounding it out with fruits, vegetables, breads and cereals, and low-fat dairy products.

"Simply watching your intake of fried foods and the fats you're getting from processed foods will also help reduce both saturated and unsaturated fats in vour diet." adds Sweeten.
