Through the eyes of America's patriots Independence Remembered

By Alice Gilroy

A few days hence, on Monday, July 4, Floyd County citizens will join other Americans in celebrating the birth of their nation.

In doing so, they will fulfill the prophesy of the patriot (and second President) Sam Adams in 1776, that the day would be remembered by succeeding generations as the great national festival, and that it ought to be solemnized by acts of "devotion to God Almighty," and by pomp and parades, shows, games and other manifestations of general celebration.

Over two hundred years ago delegates to the Continental Congress of America issued a proclamation declaring independence from their "mother country" of England. The official vote of the Declaration of Independence was taken on July 2, 1776. The final draft was approved by Congress on July 4.

After the declaration of rights the Congress also added a list of the wrongs they felt had been done to the them by Britain.

Already fiercely independent, having come to America for new lands, new opportunity, and above all the freedom to worship freely in the church of their choice, the colonists once again felt government control encroaching on their freedoms.

The delegates pointed out in their declaration that the British had tightened up trade laws and appointed British controlled custom officials who were known for their corruption.

The Americans were also angry over the quartering of troops in their homes in Boston and the announcement by Britain that the governor and judges of Massachusetts were to be paid by the crown instead of the colonial legislature. The delegates knew this would make the judges dependent of the king's will instead of their own.

Other flames that fueled the declaration included the Tea Act of 1773, which the British imposed in an effort to help the East India Company, allowing them to undercut American merchants while retaining the import tax on tea.

"The Intolerable Acts" had also been passed by Parliament in 1774, which were designed to punish Boston and Massachusetts by closing the port and putting the state under direct British control.

The arrival of General Gage in Boston, as the military governor of Massachusetts further inflamed the Americans. The declaration stated, "the mother country had affected to render the military independent of and superior to civil power."

The fires of independence had been smoldering for some time in America. Those fires were stoked further when the First Continental Congress met on September 7, 1774 with 56 delegates (from every colony except Georgia) for their first joint assembly in Carpenter's Hall in Philadelphia.

At this assembly the delegates began forming their own organization to enforce their decisions and to create alternative government bodies. They condemned British policies and began to work out plans for shutting off all trade to Britain.

The first assembly had met only one day after hearing of a British cannonade of Boston. Many gathered there were worried for their homes and families. The very first official act of the Congress was opening the meeting with a prayer by the Rev. Mr. Duche.

The Library of Congress, from the collected reports of the various patriots, records the effect of that first prayer upon Congress:

"Washington was kneeling there, and Henry, Randolph, Rutledge, Lee, and Jay, and by their side there stood, bowed in reverence, the Puritan Patriots of New England, who at that moment had reason to believe that an armed soldiery was wasting their humble households. It was believed that Boston had been bombarded and destroyed.

"They prayed fervently for America, for Congress, for the Province of Massachusetts Bay, and especially for the town of Boston, and who can realize the emotion with which they turned imploringly to Heaven for Divine interposition and —'It was enough', says Mr Adams, 'to melt a heart of stone. I saw the tears gush into the eyes of the old, grave, Pacific Quakers of Philadelphia.'"

Although in the beginning most of the war was fought with words, the formation of the Continental Congress was viewed unfavorably by King George. He saw the colonists beginning to behave like an "independent government", and moved swiftly to quell their rebellions.

When the Continental Congress met in Philadelphia in May 1775 the still undeclared war had already broken out in three different points.

In May the Green Mountain Boys of New York had seized the British held forts of Ticonderoga and Crown Point.

April 19, 1775, 800 British were ferried from Boston to Charleston and then sent on foot to Concord. Their mission, as ordered by Gen. Thomas Gage of Massachusetts, was to seize the ringleaders of the rebellion and their ammunition. It had become known that the Provincial Congress was storing up arms and gunpowder. Gage decided to raid the storehouses to seize the military supplies.

Before they reached Lexington, where they hoped to arrest Sam Adams and John Hancock, William Dawes and Paul Revere had roused the Minutemen. Seventy Minutemen assembled on the Lexington Green to face off the British. Eight Americans were killed and 10 were wounded. By the time the British returned to Boston, destroying weapons as they went, 273 men had been killed or wounded in battles or sniper fire.

Also waging in the undeclared war was the June 17, 1775 battle at Bunker Hill. This resulted in four hundred and forty-nine casualties of Americans, with 149 dead or missing. The British had 1,000 casualties with 226 dead.

As recorded in The Familiar Letters of John Adams and His Wife Abigail, on June 18, 1775, in the midst of the conflict with Britain, Abigail Adams wrote to her husband, John: "The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong; but the God of Israel is He that giveth strength and power unto His people. Trust in Him at all times, ye people, pour out your hearts before Him; God is a refuge for us.

"Charleston is laid in ashes. The battle began upon our entrenchments upon Bunker's Hill, Saturday morning about 3 o'clock, and has not ceased yet, and it is now three o'clock Sabbath afternoon. It is expected they will come out over the Neck tonight, and a dreadful battle must ensue. Almighty God, cover the heads of our countrymen, and be a shield to our dear friends."

Although fighting the British, Americans had yet to declare their independence and saw these battles as a demonstration of force against, "the tyranny of irritated ministers" in order to bring them to terms.

The fighting continued and finally the decisions were made.

According to America's Promise, on July 1, 1776, the Continental Congress heard John Adams declare his intentions to the delegates of the Thirteen Colonies:

"Before God, I believe the hour has come. My judgement approves this measure, and my whole heart is in it. All that I have, and all that I am, and all that I hope in this life, I am now ready here to stake upon it. And I leave off as I began, that live or die, survive or perish, I am for the Declaration. It is my living sentiment, and by the blessing of God it shall be my dying sentiment. Independence now, and Independence for ever!

July 2, 1776 the Continental Congress approved the wording of the Declaration of Independence. July 4, 1776, the delegates voted to accept it. July 8, 1776, the Declaration was read publicly for the first time outside the Independence Hall in Philadelphia, accompanied by the ringing of the Liberty Bell. On July 19, Congress ordered it engrossed in script on parchment and on August 2, 1776, the members of Congress signed the parchment copy.

According to Letters of John Adams—Addressed to His Wife, on July 3, 1776, the day after Congress approved the wording of the Declaration of Independence, John Adams wrote to his wife Abigail, declaring the importance of that day:

"I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary Festival. It ought to be commemorated, as the Day of Deliverance, by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty. It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires and illuminations, from one end of this continent to the other, from this time forward forever.

"You will think me transported with enthusiasm, but I am not. I am well aware of the toil and blood and treasure that it will cost to maintain this Declaration, and support and defend these United States. Yet through all the gloom I can see the rays of ravishing light and glory. I can see that the end is worth more than all the means; that posterity will triumph in that day's transaction, even though we (may regret) it, which I trust in God we shall not."

According to The Spirit of America essays, "The 56 signers of the Declaration of Independence paid a tremendous price for our freedom: 5 were arrested by the British as traitors, 12 had their homes looted and burned by the enemy, 17 lost their fortunes, 2 lost sons in the Continental Army and 9 fought and died during the Revolutionary War."

Against all odds and any logical reasoning, on October 18, 1781, in Yorktown the British surrendered to the out-gunned, out-manned and out-trained Americans.

Recorded in the Adams-Jefferson Letters, on June 28, 1813, in a letter to Thomas Jefferson, John Adams wrote:

"The general principles, on which the Fathers achieved independence, were the only Principles in which that beautiful Assembly of young Gentlemen could Unite... And what were these general Principles? I answer, the general Principles of Christianity, in which all the Sects were United: And the general Principles of English and American Liberty, in which all those young men United and which had united all Parties in America, in Majorities sufficient to assert and maintain her Independence.

"Now I will avow, that I then believe, and now believe, that those general principles of Christianity, are as eternal and immutable, as the Existence and Attributes of God; and that those Principles of Liberty, are as unalterable as human Nature and our terrestrial, mundane System."

"HOT ENOUGH TO FRY AN EGG!" --Gregory Vasquez, 7, son of Lucio and Irma Vasquez of Floydada, took advantage of the record-breaking temperatures on Monday to see if it really was "hot enough to fry an egg on the sidewalk." All Gregory decided was that it was too hot to wait and see if that egg would fry. A thermometer located (in the shade) close to Gregory was reading a record-breaking 116 degrees at 4:00 p.m. On Sunday, June 26, Energas recorded another record-breaking temperature of 114 degrees. With the high temperature and extremely dry conditions, citizens are urged to use caution with fireworks on July 4 and to remember that it is unlawful to discharge fireworks within the city limits of Floydada and Lockney. --Staff photo

Proclamation

By John Adams

Continental Congress - July 3, 1776

The second day of July, 1776, will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America, to be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival, commemorated as the day of deliverance by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty from one end of the Continent to the other, from this time forward forevermore.

Declaration of Independence Preamble

On July 4, 1776 the formal Declaration was adopted

When in the Course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitles them . . .

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal. That they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness . . .

We, Therefore, the Representatives of the United States of America, in General Congress, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions . . .

And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes, and our sacred Honor.

I think one of the hardest lessons to learn in life is how to deal with bullies.

What works for one bully never seems to work for the other bully. Just when you're feeling proud of yourself because you out-smarted, out-talked or out-punched one bully then a different one comes along and decks you.

They come in all different shapes and sizes and they keep coming all of your life. They aren't just the little kids on the playground. Bullies come in big sizes too (even if they still have the brains of a child).

Police deal with bullies all day long. That's why we have to have police—to protect us from bullies. Bullies not only hurt you with words or fists they also steal from you or just intimidate you for their own pleasure.

Little bullies grow up to be big bullies. Sometimes their bullying methods haven't even changed. Police officers spend many hours every week separating a bully husband from his wife and vice-versa. They still have to take ridiculous reports from grown people calling the police because someone called them names, or made an obscene gesture or looked at them "bad" when they drove by their home. They are grown up people with immature minds.

How do you deal with bullies? Times have sure changed and I don't know how to advise my son anymore.

The first big-time bully I had to deal with was in Junior High. She was the meanest ugliest girl I ever saw. She was built like a weightlifter and the rumor was she carried a knife in her purse. She bullied and beat up people wherever she went.

One day it was my turn. I'll never forget it. I was tall for my age (taller than the bully), but I knew no street survival skills!

Anyway—we were in the locker room changing after P.E. I was sitting on the bench and the bully came up to me and put her face against mine. She said something to the affect of, "I'm going to kick your $%*! ". Naturally I was half dressed and feeling vulnerable.

I stood up and could feel my knees wobbling. I just knew I was going to wet my pants, but I squinted my eyes, grit my teeth, clenched my fist and said, "Take your best shot—but make it good because you're going to regret it!"

She cussed me out and walked away. I had to wait until she was out of sight to faint dead away on the bench. She never bothered me again.

It worked for me. Will it work for our kids? Do we stand our ground or back off??

I've got an opinion somewhere in the middle of telling my seven year old son to run away as fast as you can to enrolling him in Karate classes so he can kick fanny and take names!

There is a bully in my son's elementary school now that I've heard about a million times. He comes from a family of grown up bullies. He doesn't have much of a chance to turn out any different.

Anyway—this bully is about the same age as my son. Brandon has told me all kinds of stories about who this kid has hurt or scared. I would just listen and say comforting things like—"He sure doesn't sound very nice!" Since I'm not very much help—I guess it was time to turn to the big guns.

On Saturday my husband (the police chief) was driving four little boys to a Cub Scout day camp in Plainview. The talk turned to this bully.

Brandon started telling my husband about the bully and how he had beat up every kid in the car (plus some others). One of the other little boys said, "He beat you up too Brandon. Don't forget to tell that part."

Brandon said quietly—"Yeah, he beat me up too."

Silence. (They were waiting for the wrath of the police).

Finally, this other little boy looked at my husband and said innocently, "Are you going to let someone beat up your little kid?"

It seemed like a perfectly logical question. If those kids could just get the policeman mad enough—surely he would deal with that brat.

My husband did what any parent with no pat answer would do—he said, "Ya'll need to tell your teacher and principal about it when it happens. They'll take care of it."

I don't really blame him for that answer. He has to deal with all the grown up bullies. That little meanie's time will come.

County officials meet with labor investigator

Another shoe has dropped on the welfare thing. It's not a well fitting shoe. Our readers may remember the recent Presidential campaign, during which then candidate Clinton promised to "end welfare as we know it."

Our fear at the time was that his reforms, which were not spelled out, would end up looking more like "welfare as we know it" than welfare as we now know it.

Evidently our fears were well founded. The proposals, now sent to Congress, would end up costing $9 billion more than the current system. Mr. Clinton's proposals would add another $9 billion to the $22 billion now being spent in the same area. Current welfare recipients would get a two year free ride. Then the clock would start ticking, and those recipients born after a certain date would be required to either go off welfare, or go on some government-subsidized job (to be created for them) or at least become actively involved in looking for work. How long they could remain on welfare while actively "looking" for a job is somewhat indefinite. A larger welfare bureaucracy would, no doubt, be required to explain and police the new rules.

Mr. Clinton's last budget essentially did two things. First, there was the massive new tax bill. That tax bill, combined with heavy cuts in such things as defense and agriculture, (and misnamed the "deficit reduction act") was designed to provide extra money for increases in government spending for those things Mr. Clinton was interested in. Spending on welfare and a variety of social programs went up substantially. Spending on defense and agriculture went down substantially. In this, the President had the support of our own Congressman.

Now, if the President's proposals become law, (and his party controls both houses of Congress) spending on welfare will grow even more.

And this is "reform"? Somehow we had gotten the idea that reforming the system was supposed to end up costing less, not more.

We don't often get a chance to defend Mr. Clinton, even when we look for ways. (Which isn't often.) But we do tend to sympathize with him in his recent mini-flap with former President Jimmy Carter.

Mr. Carter's efforts in the North Korean matter were no doubt well intentioned. All Mr. Carter's efforts when he was in the White House could be characterized as well-intentioned. But having said that, it could also be said they seldom turned out like he intended.

His recent trip to North Korea could be placed in the same category.

Not that Mr. Clinton is blameless in all this. As far as North Korea is concerned he has marched up the hill and down the hill so many times that it is difficult to determine exactly where he is at any given time. It has been that way with several other hot spots around the world.

Nevertheless he is the current President and Mr. Carter is a former President. Carter really should have waited until he had reported his conversations with North Korea's "Great Leader" to President Clinton before trying to bask in the limelight. He said things on world-wide t.v. (from Korea) that caused Clinton no small amount of embarrassment, things which required the current President to remind the press

Members of the Floyd County Commissioners Court met with Darrell Krenek, an investigator for the U.S. Department of Labor. Judge Bill Hardin turned the meeting over to Krenek who explained his presence and the issues.

According to Krenek, he had advised the county by letter on March 31, 1994, that questions had been raised concerning certain aspects of the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) and Floyd County employees. He said that the alternatives for handling the matter included either an investigation by the U.S. Department or an internal audit performed by the county. He stated that the county had opted to do an internal audit to determine if any possible violations might exist.

The results relayed to Krenek by the county include the fact that no Floyd County employees work over 40 hours per week except those in the Sheriff's Department. The county also reported that those employees are being paid overtime as based on a 28 day work period.

Krenk also informed the court that comp-time is allowable in lieu of payment for overtime. Comp-time accrues at the rate of 1 1/2 hours per hour worked. Regular employees may accumulate up to 240 hours of comp-time (180 hours of standard time worked. Law enforcement personnel can accumulate 480 comp-time hours (320 standard hours worked). Time worked over that amount must be paid as overtime and arrangements must be made to allow employees a reasonable opportunity to take their comp-time off.

According to Krenek, the county needs to review past comp-time records and determine if any current law enforcement employees have accumulated 480 or more hours on the books since April 14, 1986. If any have an excess of comp-time hours, they must be paid overtime for all accumulated hours over 480. Past employees would be due overtime payment for comp-time on the books but not taken between April 14, 1986 and the date they left the employ of the county.

Krenk then offered to answer questions from the judge and the commissioners.

Judge Hardin asked him to explain what constitutes law enforcement employees. Krenek replied that under the regulations of the FLSA, all certified peace officers and certified jailers were considered law enforcement personnel. He added that dispatchers are not included unless they also perform the duties of a jailer. Reserve officers and other such volunteers are not included.

Hardin next asked if schools and continuing education are included in the definition of hours worked. Krenek stated that any school needed in order to retain certification or requested by the county would count as hours worked. In general, schools which would increase the effectiveness or efficiency of an officer would count.

A deputy who attends a volunteer fire school would not qualify unless ordered to attend the school by the county. Attending a CPR course might count as time worked because it could increase the ability to perform the job of peace officer.

Asked if vacation, holiday or sick time was part of the FLSA, Krenek replied that no employer is required by the act to give vacation, holiday or sick leave. That is simply an agreement between the employer and the employee.

Krenk was asked to provide a definition of personal staff. He stated that he was not expecting that question and would have to defer answering until he could research the question and determine a definition.

Further discussion centered on questions concerning fluctuating hours, payment on a half-time plan for salaried employees and the calculations involved in the 28 day work period for law enforcement personnel.

Krenk then told the court that they need to make some decisions concerning what violations might exist, if any, and what pay restructuring might be necessary in order to bring the county into compliance. He also suggested that an official log for comp-time be instituted and kept current. Krenek pointed out that the county must determine if any current employees are due overtime compensation because they have accumulated too many comp-time hours. The county must also make arrangements for payment of unused comp-time on the books when an employee left their job with the county after April 14, 1986.

He offered to review whatever proposals the county might formulate and offer advice concerning county compliance by instituting the proposals. Krenek then told the county that he would expect to hear from them no later than July 25th concerning their solutions regarding the matter.

FARM WORK CONTRACTS

Four farm work contracts were approved on a motion by Precinct 2 Commissioner Floyd Jackson and seconded by Precinct 3 Commissioner George Taylor. All voted in favor of the four contracts requesting burial of old improvements for conservation.

Two contracts were in Precinct 2, #1459 for Harold Ford at a site 1 mile east and 1/4 mile south of Sterly Gin; and #1458 for Joe Cunyus 1 mile west of the intersection of 2301 & 2286. The other two contracts were for Precinct 3; #1436 for Gladys Fortenberry by George Taylor at a site 1/2 mile east of Cedar Hill n the southeast corner of Sec. 30, Blk. G. M.; and #1437 for Charles Joiner by Martha Taylor at a site 1 mile east and 2 miles north of Cedar Hill Elevator.

Discussion concerning the possible increase in fees for farm work contracts followed. Jackson stated that the estimated cost of operating a maintainer is more than the current charge for that type of work. He suggested raising the fee to a break even point.

Bearden stated that he would like to see the fees raised to the point that people needing work done would look at having it done by individuals who do this for a living and consider the county as a second or third choice.

Jackson countered that he needed to do farm work contracts in order to keep his roadhands employed in times when they can't work on the roads or don't have any roads to work.

Taylor stated that he was against an increase of any kind. Bearden made a motion to increase the fees for maintainer work from $50.00 per hour to $70.00 per hour. The motion died for lack of a second.

Jackson then made a motion to raise the maintainer charge to $60.00. This was seconded by Bearden and approved with Taylor voting against.

Jackson made a motion to increase the fee for dozer work from $60.00 per hour to $70.00 per hour. Bearden seconded and the motion was approved with Taylor voting against.

The fee for front loader work remained unchanged on a motion by Taylor with a second by Bearden. All voted in favor. Truck hauling also remained at $2.50 per yd. per mile. Backhoe work will remain the same, $50.00 per hour) on a motion by Taylor with a second by Bearden and all voting in favor.

The new rates will take effect as of Monday, June 27, 1994, on all new farm work contract requests submitted.

Hamburger cooking safety tips suggested by Melissa Long, CEA-HE

The safety of hamburger meat has been making the headlines recently. More than 400 persons in the Northwest became ill after eating undercooked hamburgers containing E. coli O157:H7, a rare strain of bacteria which is particularly dangerous to the very young and old.

"A number of Hotline callers recently have been asking about the safety of cooking hamburgers at home," says Susan Conley of USDA's Meat and Poultry Hotline. "Raw hamburger must be handled properly because of the potential of contamination by harmful bacteria could be present. But safe food handling is important in preventing foodborne illness.

Here are some hamburger safety tips from the home economists at the Meat and Poultry Hotline:

At the store, be sure to choose a package that's not torn and that feels cold. If possible, enclose it in a plastic bag so juices won't drip on other foods. Make ground beef and other perishables your final purchase of the trip.

After leaving the store, get perishables home quickly and refrigerate or freeze them immediately. If the trip home is more than an hour, pack them in an ice chest.

When handling raw ground beef, don't let its juices contaminate foods that won't be cooked. Wash your hands with soap and hot water before and after handling ground beef to make sure you don't spread bacteria from raw meats to other foods.

Don't reuse any packaging materials. Use soap and hot water to wash utensils and surfaces which have come into contact with the raw meat. When taking hamburgers off the grill, don't put the cooked hamburgers on the same platter which held the raw patties.

Avoid the "danger zone". Bacteria multiply rapidly in the "danger zone" between 40 and 140 degrees. To keep bacterial levels low, store ground beef at 40 degrees and use or freeze it within two days. Ground beef kept frozen at 0 degrees will maintain its quality up to four months.

Keeping meat old while it is defrosting is essential to prevent the growth of bacteria. Never leave ground beef, or any perishable food, out on the counter for more than two hours. Thaw it in the refrigerator.

To be sure bacteria are destroyed, cook hamburgers to 160 degrees F or until the center is not longer pink and the juices are clear.

When cooking out, do not partially grill extra hamburgers to use later. Once you begin cooking hamburgers by any method, cook them until completely done to assure that bacteria are destroyed.

Refrigerate hamburgers promptly after cooking. Any left out at room temperature for more than two hours should be discarded. After cooking, ground beef can be stored in the refrigerator for three to four days or frozen up to three months.

When reheating fully cooked patties, be sure their internal temperature reaches 165 degrees F or they are hot and steaming.

At restaurants, order your hamburger cooked to "medium" or "well done" and check for doneness when it is served.

For further information about handling and cooking hamburgers safely, call USDA's Meat and Poultry Hotline at 1-800-535-4555 weekdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Eastern time.

the 1986 Texas Sesquicentennial.

Unfortunately, Abbott did not live to see his dream come true, but the project has continued with astonishing results, Parsons said. With the assistance of other horticulturists, seed and bedding plant producers and farmers, the bluebonnet wild flower has been domesticated into a new multi-million dollar bedding plant industry in an array of colors.

The Barbara Bush Bluebonnet seeds will be made available for landscape design at the George Bush Presidential Library Center on the Texas A&M University campus. According to Don Wilson, executive director of the center, the Bush foundation will explore its options of planting this particular flower, which honors the former First Lady.

"We're certainly looking into the possibility of using the variety," Wilson said. "It could be used as a special exhibit or a large portion may actually be used in the lawn area."

"In his research, Parsons used the eyes of literally thousands of people to locate color variants in the native populations and planted seeds from those rare plants in isolated locations," said James Johnson, horticulture senior lecturer in floral design at Texas A&M University who presented the bluebonnet to the former First Lady. "He progressively increased the color purity of the populations by removing different colors."

The project resulted in bluebonnet plants with several non-traditional flower colors, including pink and white, Johnson said.

For those who believe that bluebonnets should only be blue, "the additional colors (such as pink and white) that have existed in nature for hundreds of years are now being isolated and purified," Parsons explained. "No plant breeding or genetic manipulation of bluebonnets has been done except by God," he said.

"The colors of the state flower, which have existed for as long as bluebonnets have bloomed, have not been changed," Parsons said. "They have only been transformed from a wild, blooming weed into a bedding plant that yields an assortment of colors in different shapes and sizes that can be enjoyed even more by plant enthusiasts."

The Barbara Bush Bluebonnet seeds are available at the Texas Seed Company in Kennedy, and transplants can be found at Peterson Bros. in San Antonio. For more information, contact Dr. Jerry Parsons at (210) 228-0417.

Jody Bueno named USAA All-American Scholar

FLOYDADA--The United States Achievement Academy has announced that Jody Bueno of Floydada has been named an All-American Scholar. The USAA has established the All-American Scholar Award Program in order to offer deserved recognition to superior students who excel in the academic disciplines. The All-American Scholars must earn a 3.3 or better grade point average. Only scholars selected by a school instructor, counselor or other qualified sponsor are accepted. These scholars are also eligible for other awards given by the USAA.

The Academy selects All-American Scholars upon the exclusive recommendations of teachers, coaches, counselors, and other qualified sponsors. Once awarded, the students may be recognized by the USAA for other honors.

Bueno, who attends R.C. Andrews Elementary, was nominated for this National Award by Mrs. Margaret Jones. She will appear in the All-American Scholar Directory, which is published nationally. "Recognizing and supporting our youth is more important than ever before in American history. Certainly, winners of the All-American Scholar Awards should be congratulated and appreciated for their dedication to excellence and achievement," said Dr. George Stevens, Executive Director of the United States Achievement Academy.

Jody is the daughter of Frances Bueno. Her grandparents are Frank and Maria Bueno of Floydada.

County students attend annual summer seminar

Attending the Texas Farm Bureau's 32nd annual Citizenship Seminar here June 13-17 were Michael Mercado and David Watson of Floydada and Mandy Hunter and Trudi Lambert of Lockney. Sponsored by the Floyd County Farm Bureau, they were among approximately 400 high school junior and senior students from over 150 counties across the state.

Purpose of the seminar is to provide the students with a better understanding of their American heritage and the capitalistic free enterprise system, according to John Quebe of Lockney, county Farm Bureau president.

Speakers at this year's seminar and their subjects were as follows: Jack Jackson of Fort Worth, president of Jack Jackson & Associates, "Free Enterprise Principles/Projects"; Jolene Brown, West Branch, Iowa, "Stand Up! Step Out! Lead!", Michael Broome of Charlotte, N.C., a motivational speaker, "You and America—Two Great Champions"; Dr. Ronald Trowbridge, Hillsdale College, Hillsdale, Michigan, "Constitutional Government"; and Texas Farm Bureau President Bob Stallman of Columbus welcomed the students to the seminar. Also, special presentations were made by Curtis Childers, president of the National FFA, and Brooke Leslie, Texas A&M University Student Body President.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor,
I really enjoyed reading the very excellent article on the Railroad History in the June 16 Hesperian. It brought back memories of my youth.

There was another railroad in Floydada (approximately 1925-1929?). It was the Q.A. & P—Quanah, Acme, and Pacific. The Q.A. & P was also known as the "quit arguing and push". I think that it went east or northeast from Floydada. How about an article on it?

The May and June issues of Texas Highways had articles on Railroads in Texas. Your articles is as good as theirs; why not send them a copy? They might publish it!

I enjoy the Hesperian!

Sincerely,
Joe Montgomery

Dear Editor,
Al and I want to thank the Floydada Independent School District for many happy production years of employment.

We served under two superintendents, Mr. A.E. Baker and Jerry Cannon. Both gentle, understanding men. There have been many principals and assistant principals, namely, Mr. A.W. Coltharp, Bob Copeland, Bob Alldridge, Charlie Tyer, Preston Watson, Jimmy Collins (now assistance superintendent), Ronnie Wood, Joe Christian, and Mrs. Ellen Enriquez. Each was/is very special. The school board members were great! Always encouraging and supportive.

Mr. James Poole, principal of Lockney High School, is included in the list of people under whom we served. For four years, Mr. Poole was ever ready to be of assistance in the program, in any way needed.

The Retirement Receptions given were wonderful. The results of those who planned them (and there were many) they were indeed memorable occasions. The "Retirement Watches" presented by Mr. Cannon are beautiful (and they keep perfect time!)

The yearbook dedication at R.C. Andrews was a generous, thoughtful act, for which I shall be forever grateful.

I've been told that all the memories are like keepsakes, always to be cherished. Thank you for our keepsakes!

Sincerely,
Al and Sally Galloway

Dear Editor,
Those who ignore the lessons of history are without exception destined to relive the mistakes of the past. Over 200 years ago government in the 13 colonies had become oppressive, burdensome, and completely out of touch with the average citizen.

People who had risked life and limb to escape religious persecution in Europe came to America to create a new world. A world free of the religious persecution and corruption widespread in European governments. Through hard work and faith in God they became prosperous. That hard earned prosperity began to slip through their fingers as government over taxed and regulated this economy to prop up England economy.

The colonist attempted to reason and petition their kings representatives to allow them relief of the stiff taxes. They also sought more local political control to have a larger impact on the course of their economy and society. Their attempts were met with contempt and more oppression. For many years pastors and church leaders had taught a new concept of government. This new concept taken from the bible reasoned that rights were conferred from God and not from government.

Also any government that ruled contrary to Gods will was not a legitimate form of government. Because of the corruption and immorality practiced by many of their government officials the people came to reason that change must take place. Of course such preaching in church pulpits infuriated English officials. This religious right were causing them much trouble. Across the land churches were persecuted and harassed by the government. Pastors were jailed for treason. The people were alarmed at the government coercion. British officials realizing that they had lost the moral and political base to govern resorted to the only way a tyrannical rules can stay in power, by brute force.

They also began strut regulation of firearms possession and powder. Regulations were enacted that restricted the amount and type of firearm and powder an individual could own. The importation and manufacture of arms was also curtailed. The colonist were not stupid people. They knew why such laws were being imposed on them by their government. The stockpiling of arms by colonists began as they realized there would be no their freedom and right of self determination. They had exhausted all other means of change. The people however, did not initiate hostilities with the government. Rather the British acting on information from a spy sent troops to confiscate a store of weapons and powder that had heretofore been legal to possess but by government edict had become illegal. The rest is history.

Those troops met armed resistance from the colonist realizing that the surrender of those arms would leave them powerless to resist.

The spark that ignited the American Revolution was government gun confiscation. Gun control is not crime control, it's people control.

Heat, boll weevils apply pressure to cotton crop

by Joe Bryant
Extension Communications Specialist

A run of hot, dry days which has accelerated the development of young plants and sapped the ground of moisture has cotton growers in the Rolling and South Plains keeping wary eyes on a potentially outstanding crop.

And these conditions have increased the possibility for heavy boll weevil damage, especially in 18 counties bordering the Caprock, the geologic escarpment which separates the High Plains and the Rolling Plains.

After crop-saving showers the first half of May, the South Plains has received only a trace of rain while temperatures were in the mid-80s to 105 degrees. Five days of June have topped 100 degrees at Lubbock. Strong winds added to the rate of evaporation of existing soil moisture.

"The irrigated and well rainfed cotton continues to make excellent progress as the continued hot weather speeds crop development along," said Kater Hake, cotton agronomist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service here. Many acres of cotton are water stressed, but still alive, he said.

"Cotton can tolerate severe water stress during this seedling to early square stage of plant development and still recover when rains or irrigation arrive," Hake said. "If the (stressed) cotton gets help, rainwise, it will recover, although it reduces the yield potential agreed Dr. Dan Krieg, agronomist at Texas Tech University.

Adequate rain during the next 10 days will be critical for dryland cotton on the South Plains, Hake and Krieg said.

While the hot weather has crop development ahead of schedule for the South Plains, this earliness is creating a problem for boll weevil management, Hake said.

"The potential for a heavy boll weevil year is high," agreed Roger Haldenby, who coordinates the weevil control program of the Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., and organization of producers in 25 counties which has planted some three million acres to the crop.

Last winter was the fourth in a row in which mild weather failed to cause high mortality for overwintering weevils. "Conservation Reserve Program acreage is probably making a contribution to the problem and providing more overwintering sites," Haldenby said.

When the weevils emerge from overwintering, they must find cotton plants with floral buds the size of pencil erasers inside the bracts (third-grown squares) for the grubs to continue developing. Much of the South Plains crop is "squaring" and Haldenby says weevils emerging now can survive and reproduce in the crop.

He said producers in the following counties should be especially aware of the need to monitor their fields for boll weevils: Andrews, Borden, Briscoe, Crosby, Dawson, Dickens, Floyd, Gaines, Garza. Also, Hall, Howard, Kent, Lynn, Martin, Midland, Motley, Scurry, and Terry.

"If you are running traps and averaging more than four weevils in a trap the week prior to the appearance of match head size squares, you will probably need to spray (insecticide) for weevils when squares are pencil eraser size," Haldenby said.

Even though weevil numbers may not be significant enough to cause economic losses to a field this year, "it may still be advisable to treat those early weevils to prevent the buildup of large overwintering numbers by this fall," he said.

Cotton Incorporated helps Texas designer spotlight natural fiber

The second Texas Designer Collective fashion show was recently held at the International Apparel Mart in Dallas.

The show, geared for an audience of retailers and press, spotlighted fall collections of more than 50 Texas firms and their use of natural fibers such as cotton, wool and mohair, as well as leather.

FLOYD COUNTY SITE OF DRILLING ACTIVITY--An oil well is being drilled in the Providence Community north of Lockney on the John Quebe farm. The drilling is being done by Sitton Drilling Company and they have reached a depth of approximately 3,000 feet. Plans are to drill to 9,000 feet. This is the first oil well to be drilled in the county in several years.

SIDERS' SIDELINES

By Kerry Siders, CEA-Ag

The following was written by the late Dr. John Carew, a former university professor that some may remember from a year ago when I submitted it to the paper then. I felt it was important enough to have you read it again.

IN BALANCE WITH NATURE

In the beginning there was Earth, beautiful and wild; and then man came to dwell.

At first, he lived like other animals, feeding himself on creatures and plants around him. And this was called IN BALANCE WITH NATURE.

Soon man multiplied. He grew tired of ceaseless hunting for food; he built homes and villages. Wild plants and animals were domesticated. Some men became farmers so that others might become industrialist, artists, or doctors. And this was called society.

With this God-given ingenuity, man learned to feed, clothe, protect and transport himself more efficiently so that he might enjoy life. He built cars, houses, on top of each other, and nylon. And life became more enjoyable.

The men called farmers became more efficient. A single farmer grew food for 28 industrialists, artist, doctors, writers, engineers, and teachers as well. To protect his crops and animals, the farmer produced substances to repel or destroy insects, diseases and weeds. They were called pesticides.

Similar human substances were made by doctors to protect humans. These were called medicine. The age of science had arrived, and with it came better diet and longer, happier lives for more members of society.

Soon, it came to pass that certain well-fed members of society disapproved of the farmer using science. They spoke harshly of his techniques for feeding, protecting and preserving plants and animals. They deplored his upsetting the Balance of Nature, they longed for the good old days. And this had emotional appeal to the rest of society.

By this time, farmers had become so efficient, society gave them a new title: Unimportant Minority.

Because society could not ever imagine a shortage of food, laws were passed abolishing pesticides, fertilizers and food preservatives. Insects, diseases and weeds flourished. Crop and animals died. Food became scarce. To survive, industrialists, artists and doctors were forced to grow their own food.

People and governments fought Wars to gain more agricultural land. Millions of people were exterminated. The remaining few lived like animals, feeding themselves on creatures and plants around them. And this was called In Balance With Nature.

Based on data from TAEX

Crop potential good as 1993

by Shawn Wade

Kater Hake, Cotton Specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, says this year's crop has the potential to be just as good as 1993, even though dryland cotton prospects have been essentially put on hold by a lack of rainfall this season.

According to Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Growers (PCG) Hake's comments are based on initial data from a TAEX plant mapping study currently being conducted. Hake notes that the study is in its second year and participation has more than doubled in 1994.

Initial information indicates the 1994 crop is off to at least as good a start as last year's bumper crop. The comparison comes from the overall status of 50 irrigated and dryland fields that are participating in the 1994 project. Hake says that 1993 plant mapping information was gathered from only 20 fields.

The 1994 data indicates the crop is doing well, setting 96 percent of its' squares and maintaining a height to node ratio of .74 inches. The height to node ratio is the average distance between fruiting branches based on the overall height of the plant. Hake adds that in 1993 the project estimated a 95 percent square set and a height to node ratio of .75 inches.

Hake is quick to note, however, that while overall prospects for the crop are still bright the bulk of the area's dryland crop is beginning to be severely stressed by the lack of moisture. Without timely rainfall many dryland cotton acres could be permanently damaged in the next few weeks.

Irrigated producers are in the process of applying water to their fields in order to take full advantage of the potential indicated by the TAEX plant mapping project.

Hake notes that with timely rainfall the outlook for the dryland crop could be much improved. He adds that despite the moisture stress being exerted on the area's dryland acreage the majority of the 1994 crop could be established in July and early August, increasing the chances for an early harvest season.

Lockney Cooperative holds 37th meeting

LOCKNEY—Members and friends of the Lockney Cooperatives gathered Friday night for the 37th annual stockholders meeting. The banquet was held at the Lockney Elementary School Cafetorium.

John Lee Carthel, president of the board of directors called the meeting to order and James Morris led the invocation. The welcome was given and guests introduced by Charlie McQuhae, cooperative manager.

Hal Sandefur, representing Sandefur and Swindle, C.P.A.'s of Lubbock, gave a report on the financial condition of the cooperative. He reviewed the balance sheet, the statement of operations and margins for the year ending March 31, 1994.

He told those present that he was pleased with the financial condition of the gin and elevator. "You are in good shape again this year," he stated.

He also said that it is a pleasure to work with Charlie and the office staff. "They make my job easier," he commented.

McQuhae introduced the employees and board of directors and expressed his appreciation for the work they do. "We made a lot of hard decisions this year in an effort to make the organization stronger. Your employees and board of directors work hard and are committed to the organization," he stated.

In his managers report he stated that sales are up again this year. "Sales of fertilizer, chemicals, feed and seed have increased every year for the last several years."

He explained about negative money spent and defined it as money for federal and state mandates that "we can't do anything about."

McQuhae talked about the sale of the South Plains gin plant and told the members that the money made from the sale was allocated back to the patrons.

He concluded with, "As long as we can all work together we can make this organization grow."

George Taylor gave a report on the meeting of the nominating committee and placed the names of Zach Cummings, Bobby Cox, Keith Jackson and G.L. Hight up for election. There were no nominations from the floor.

After the election Taylor reported that G. L. Hight would replace John Lee Carthel as director.

Named to the nominating committee for next year were Jerry Ford, Claude Brown and Joe Cunyus.

Regional reports were given by representatives of the Plains Co-op Oil Mill, Plains Cotton Cooperative and Plainview Co-op Compress.

Gail Kring, representing the Plains

Co-op Oil Mill, told those gathered that they were pleased with the year they had. "All our products are selling well. Frito-Lay is our best customer for the cottonseed oil and 100 percent of the cottonseed oil they use is produced locally. All their potato chips are cooked in it," he stated.

He continued, "I would like to thank you for your support of the mill. John Paul Schacht is your representative on the board and he does a very good job for you."

Bill Cagle, manager at the Plainview Co-op Cotton Compress, expressed his appreciation for Charlie, the office staff and the board of directors. He reported that they are still shipping cotton every day and are looking forward to this being a good year.

He introduced Charles Huffman as the local member of the executive board. "I don't remember him ever missing a meeting. He is someone you can always count on."

Zane Montandon drew tickets for the door prizes and they were distributed by F. L. Montandon and Keith Phillips.

James Morris presented John Lee

Plan ahead before celebrating the 4th

--From the Texas Department of Public Safety
The Fourth of July is one of the most highly celebrated of all holidays throughout the United States, and rightly so. This occasion should be remembered and celebrated, because of the rights and freedoms that each of us possess.

We are also reminded this time each year that far too many will not have much to celebrate in this great state of Texas by losing a loved one in a wreck caused by an alcohol impaired driver. Major Lamar Beckworth with the Texas Department of Public Safety states, "At least 50% of all traffic deaths are alcohol related and during this holiday many people will celebrate by consuming alcoholic beverages."

We urge those that drink to plan ahead to have a sober driver behind the wheel, or risk finding themselves behind the bars of a jail. To help us protect you, as well as others on our state streets and highways, remember; If You Drink, Don't Drive -- If You Drive, Don't Drink.

(and the country) that he, Mr. Clinton, is the sitting President and he is the one who will make official pronouncements concerning Korea. It was something of a put-down for the former President, but he deserved it, in our view.

The whole thing takes on a strange light, however, when we remember that Mr. Clinton made the point (when Carter went to Korea) that the trip was taking place with his blessing, despite the fact that Carter was travelling as a private citizen. But Mr. Clinton's public comments at the time seemed to be couched in such a way that he could distance himself from Carter, should the need arise. Evidently it did, at least temporarily.

We really don't blame Mr. Carter for trying to be helpful. And with his public approval numbers drifting lower in the polls, Mr. Clinton needs all the help he can get.

But if the two are going to team up in solving problems around the world, they really ought to get their act together before it becomes a problem for the country. In this case no permanent damage seems to have occurred from their little snafu. The next time we may not be so lucky.

Meanwhile, from all we can see, the problems with North Korea remain.
