Our Congressmen are all in a dither again. It's getting time for the usual August recess, and November elections are fast approaching. It's time they got back home. There are many miles to cover, many promises to be made, again. Many broken promises to explain, again.

They are in something of a quandary. The President would no doubt like to see them out of town. The Haiti situation remains a situation, having upstaged the Korean situation that seemed so perilous just a few weeks ago. To invade or not to invade? That's the question. He would just as soon Congress was not around, should he finally make up his mind, again, about what to do.

But Senator Dole, the Republican minority leader, has suggested Congress remain in session and work on the health thing. The Democrats, split seven ways from Sunday, can't agree on an approach. About the only thing that unites them is the feeling they have to do something, even if it is wrong.

Then there's the Whitewater hearings. Or, rather, the Whitewater Whitewash in the House of Representatives, with presiding Democratic Chairman Henry Gonzalez of San Antonio making it clear that no questions would be allowed concerning the circumstances surrounding the suicide of Vice Foster, the President's (and Hillary's) friend and confidant who was handling the Whitewater matter at the time of his death. And that ban would extend to the circumstances surrounding the removal of Whitewater papers from Foster's office after his death. Questions relating to events in Arkansas were also deemed off-limits. Nor would any witness be required to answer any question the Chairman deems inappropriate. When Republicans objected, the Chairman was able to command a straight line party vote (31-19) to sustain his position. The stage was set for a love-in, rather than an investigation.

Over in the Senate, a more balanced, thoughtful approach is underway concerning Whitewater. They too are under constraints about what they can probe, but at least they seem to be approaching the heart of the matter. Were different "ethical" standards used by Administration officials on matters involving Whitewater and Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan, in order to protect the President and perhaps influence the course of the investigation? Quite obviously they were, judging from the testimony thus far.

The Treasury Department's counsel, who holds some sort of office that is supposed to advise other department employees on matters of law and ethics, testified that fear of a potential press "leak" was sufficient grounds for violating normal operating procedures on the matter of criminal referrals, which are normally kept confidential. In this particular case, he testified, a legitimate "government interest" was being served by giving the President's office a "heads up" on what was coming down the pike involving the President.

So now we have a new definition of ethics by this Administration. Fear of potential public exposure is to be sufficient grounds for violating established rules and procedures when possible politically damaging wrong doing has taken place. In other words, violations of established ethical guidelines are okay if the objective is political "damage control." We don't remember even Richard Nixon's lawyers advancing that novel theory. Perhaps Clinton has smarter lawyers.

At any rate, don't look for much in the way of revelations. The President's party cannot afford to go into the fall elections with a lot of embarrassing questions about Whitewater hanging fire. The logical approach is to prevent those questions being raised in the first place, or at least raised "officially" before a Congressional committee where the threat of perjury is always imminent. They figure they'll have enough problems without Whitewater.

Considering the unfocused, disorganized, state of our government at the moment, perhaps the best thing that could happen would be simply to declare an early, and very long, recess. Let the

City extends water line improvements

FLOYDADA — The City of Floydada extended the scope of a water line improvement project being carried out with Texas Department of Commerce (TDOC) Community Block Development Grant on August 1. The short Monday morning session was held to allow the council members to review costs for installation and renovations to additional lines under an extension provision of the contract previously approved.

Rhoades Construction was the company that made the low bid on the original water line improvement project.

Floyd County proposes tax cut during budget work session

The Floyd County Commissioners Court held a budget work session on Wednesday, July 27 in the County Courtroom. The ten a. m. session was attended by Judge Bill Hardin and Commissioners Connie Bearden, Floyd Jackson, George Taylor and Howard Bishop.

The proposed budget is for the fiscal year beginning October 1, 1994 and ending September 30, 1995. It is based on a total assessed tax base of $249,895,586.00 and estimates a collection rate of 94%. The assessed valuation has increased from the previous year by $2,934,751.

This increase in taxable base has resulted in a proposal to reduce the county tax rate by 0.0030 to an even 40 cents per $100.00 valuation.

A public hearing concerning the proposed budget will be held during the August 8 regular session of the court. It is slated to begin at 10:00 a.m.

The estimated county fund balances at the end of September, 1994, are placed at $464,944.34 and estimated revenues for the coming year are calculated at $1,680,881.81. This will give the county an estimated total of $2,145,826.15 for the 12 month period. Revenues will come from taxes ($939,607.40), delinquent tax collections ($35,000.00), licenses and permits ($400,000.00), state government funds ($33,994.58), other receipts ($272,329.58).

Expenditures include salaries and wages ($839,627.04), benefits

Their bid came in under the estimated cost of the original plan and resulted in extra funds to be devoted to this amended plan.

The council decided to approve the costs and have the work done on more lines than originally planned rather than allow the unused grant funding to revert to TDOC.

Attending the 7:30 a.m. meeting were Mayor Hulon Carthel, council members Eric Cornelius, Wayne Tipton, Albert Hill, and Dale Lawson, City Manager Gary Brown and City Secretary Sharon Quisenberry.

(Other operating expenses ($642,801.81), and capital outlay ($245,000.00) totaling $1,846,816.03, leaving an estimated $299,010.12 in county funds at the end of the next fiscal year.

The 40 cent tax rate will be divided between three basic budget areas. The general fund will receive 0.3721 cents or 93.03% of the taxes for county operating funds from October 1 through September 30. The road and bridge fund will receive 0.0124 cents or 3.10% and the library will receive 0.0155 cents, or 3.87% of the taxes for their operating expenses in the coming budget year.

A copy of the proposed budget is on file at the county offices and may be inspected by any interested party. All interested persons are urged to attend the public hearing on August 8 and present their views to the commissioners concerning the proposed budget.

Other items considered during the Wednesday morning session included: ... Court approval of a request to cross a county road by Adrain Helms. Motion by Bearden, seconded by Bishop and approved by unanimous vote.

... Four farm work contracts were unanimously approved on a motion by Bearden with a second by Taylor, including #1489 for Ray Aston by Ronnie Aston; #1473 for Jim Byrd Garms Inc. by Jim Byrd; #1474 for Kelton Shaw; and #1478 for Louis Pyle. All contracts were for the purpose of soil conservation and the prevention of soil erosion.

Polysonic Flowmeter offering farmers a new way to check wells

A new Polysonic Flowmeter will now be available to Floyd County farmers thanks to a grant from the Texas Water Development Board and the efforts of Floyd County's Soil and Water Conservation District and several independent businesses and cooperatives.

The Polysonics Tyme-Flyte flow meter will be used to measure and evaluate irrigation systems and agricultural water conservation practices on irrigated land. The local SCS office will use the meter to measure the well output so that center pivot sprinkler systems can be accurately designed. The meter will also determine the amount of water flowing through a pivot sprinkler as well as measure well output so the SCS personnel can determine the size of pipeline to be installed when converting a furrow irrigation system to an underground tile system.

Dora Ross, a technical assistant at the local office of the Soil and Water Conservation District, is responsible for the work in applying for the grant.

"J.O. Dawdy (a board member with the Soil and Water Conservation District) told me about the grant and gave me the information on who to contact," said Ross. "I worked on the grant at home on my own time and then presented it to the board."

"The Polysonic Flowmeter cost $6,740 and the district had to come up with 25% of the funds which came to $1,685. Dawdy helped raise most of the money by contacting businesses and asking for contributions."

The contributing businesses were: Cantwell Irrigation and Morton Irrigation in Plainview, Adams Well Service and Best Flex Irrigation in Floydada, Payne Irrigation and Irrigators Inc., of Aiken and Rhoderick Irrigation of Silverton.

The following Cooperatives also contributed: Lighthouse Electric, Producers, Floydada Coop Gin and Lockney Coop.

Describing water usage in the county, Ross stated in the grant, "All the irrigation water in Floyd County is pumped from the Ogallala Formation, where the water level has dropped 29.5 feet during the past 30 years. The water level in Floyd County ranges from 200 feet to 380 feet. The wells pump approximately 100 gpm to 700 gpm."

Floyd County consists of 635,065 acres. Of that acreage, 472,890 acres is cropland; consisting of 258,942 acres of irrigated cropland and 213,948 acres of dryland cropland. Floyd County also has 109,475 acres of rangeland. The remaining acreage consists mainly of wildlife land and playa lakes.

According to Ross, "By the end of December 1993, 85 Center Pivots had been installed in Floyd County. Between January and March, 86 more were installed and even more have been installed since March."

"SCS states that there would be at least a 10% increase in water use efficiency when a producer converts from furrow irrigation to a properly designed pivot system. In areas where soils are heavier and water is stronger, converting a furrow irrigation system without underground pipelines to an underground pipeline system would increase the water efficiency by approximately 15%."

Jon J. LaBaume, District Conservationist for Floyd County, and Larry

Benjamin, technician, have been testing wells for irrigation efficiency since 1980.

The irrigation efficiency can be improved 20-25% by testing the well and, if necessary, replacing or repairing the pumps and pumping plant engine.

"It is very important that land owners and operators know the amount of water available to them in order to accurately design their pivot sprinkler systems and/or their underground pipeline," said LaBaume.

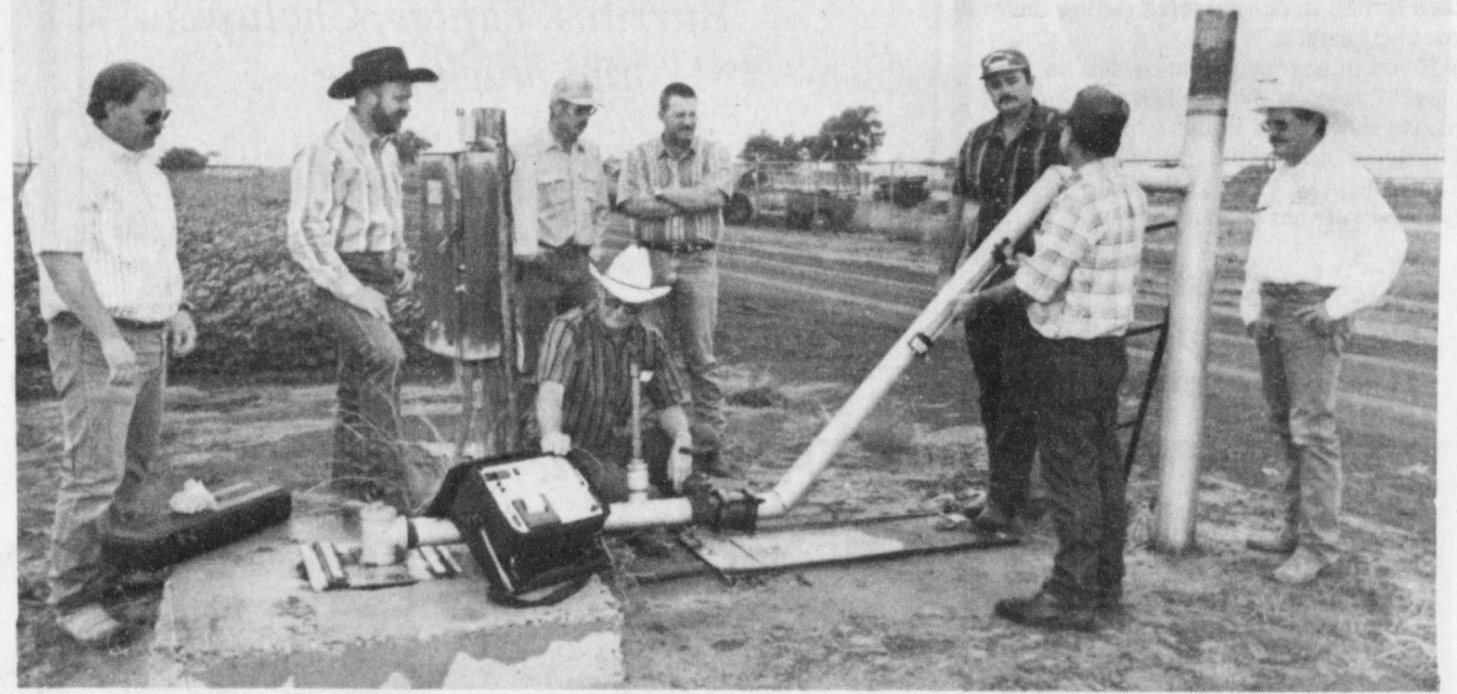

The Polysonics flow meter will benefit the SCS personnel greatly by allowing quick and accurate metering of water well output and allowing for the most efficient design of a sprinkler system.

The SCS and the District have been working on this project for at least five years, but LaBaume stated because of the high cost of the meter the local funds could not be raised. LaBaume praised the district for working toward obtaining the flow meter and for the businesses who donated the local funds.

SCS considers the Polysonic Flowmeter more time efficient than the old flow meter used for the district. The new flowmeter will not only measure the well output for center pivots but it will also measure any other type of pipeline as long as there is water flowing through it.

"The flowmeter is simply strapped to the pipe," said Ross. "The farmer does not have to shut off any wells or disconnect any pipes. It should only take about 15 minutes."

Anyone interested in having his wells checked should call the SCS office at 983-2352, for an appointment.

A NEW WAY TO CHECK YOUR WELLS--Jon LaBaume (kneeling) and Larry Benjamin (with gauge) demonstrate the new Polysonic Flowmeter which has been purchased by SCS to measure well output. The money used to buy the new time efficient machine was given to SCS through a grant and with funds raised by area businesses. Some of these contributors and SCS board members were on hand to get a look at the flowmeter checking this well. They are: (left-right, standing) Jeff Johnson, Adams Well Service; Eddie Rhoderick, Rhoderick Irrigation; J.O. Dawdy, board member; Jeff Payne, Payne Irrigation; Lindan Morris, Irrigators Inc., and SCS Board Member; and Gary Martin, Rhoderick Irrigation. Staff Photo

There are plenty of weeks that come up where I have absolutely nothing to put in this column (I'm sure you can tell).

There are also some weeks that come up where we don't have much news to put in the paper (or so I've heard).

Ya'll may think this is just an affliction of little weekly newspapers but I can prove that is not the case.

The AJ had an AP story in their "Nation/briefly" column in Monday's edition. The lead "story" was about Pres. Clinton stumbling during a jog.

The lead paragraph told us how Clinton had tripped while jogging, but his spokesman told us "he'll be all right". White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Meyers was asked about it and told the press, "He missed his step."

To add more paragraphs the reporter then described the fall.

"Clinton's red cap flew off his head as he tripped during the morning run before leaving for Missouri to promote his health care plan.

"He continued running into Rock Creek Park, where his motorcade stopped. Meyers said a Secret Service agent gave him a napkin to hold over the scrape." (I assume the "him" in that sentence referred to Clinton—not Meyers.)

Well I can beat that story by a mile.

Floyd County—Floydada Mayor Hulon Carthel, tripped and fell on Wednesday while out running in the countryside with Lockney Mayor Kenneth Wofford. Unnamed city officials said "Carthel was not seriously injured, however Wofford cracked his rib laughing too hard."

Sources told reporters that the two frequently run together to discuss inter-city cooperation. The running sites are

Turkey artist featured at First National in Floydada

FLOYDADA — Otho Stubbs of Turkey is one of two exhibitors at the monthly display for the First National Bank of Floydada. The two western artists are presenting a variety of media from paintings to bronze sculptures throughout the month of August. Everyone is invited to stop by the bank during regular business hours and see these proud depictions of western heritage.

Stubbs, an accomplished artist who prides himself on the historical accuracy of his art work, is displaying eight paintings at the bank. The featured painting of the exhibit is his "Battle of Blanco Canyon". This intricate depiction of the panorama of Blanco Canyon during a fiercely fought battle between Indians and the cavalry is representative of the research that goes into his work.

"That painting is documented from a book called "On the Border with Mackenzie" by a writer named Carter who served as an adjutant for Mackenzie. It is an accurate daily account of life in the cavalry and that part of Mackenzie's career in particular," says Stubbs.

His home in Turkey is a tribute to both his vocation as an artist and his avocation as a historian. Stubbs has an extensive collection of artifacts from the stone age to the present. Each piece of pottery, flint or tool has been researched to discover its intended use and place in the history of the area. He is the last living researcher who participated in the documentation and research of a famous Comanchero raid site.

Stubbs paints entirely from memory, using his past experiences and present knowledge to aid him in telling the story he sees in his mind. He works in pen and ink, watercolor, and oils striving to show an accurate picture of the turn of the century cowboy and the daily life they lead. His art also documents the lives of many southwestern Indian tribes.

A resident of the foothills and canyons of the Caprock since 1910, he worked on three famed west Texas ranches as a young man, the Matador, the Milliron and the Shoebar.

He has been drawing since childhood and developed his own unique style through his experience battling tuberculosis, serving on the front lines near Normandy during World War II, and a few odd jobs during his 87 years of life.

Stubbs received his only formal training at the Hill and Canyon School of Fine Art in Santa Fe following his return from Europe after his military service. He also later studied with Emil Briston, a noted California artist.

His works have been on display at the High Plains Galleries in Amarillo, the Santa Fe Museum and museums in Taos and Tucumcari, New Mexico, and galleries in Eugene, Oregon, Los Angeles, California, and Tulsa, Oklahoma. He was judged fortieth among a showing of 500 American artists and has provided sketches for a book of verse and art as well as accumulating and documenting a series of stories now on display at the Floyd County Historical Museum.

always out of Floydada or Lockney city limits to keep any jealousy or rivalry to a minimum.

Lockney City Secretary Charlotte Hooten and Floydada City Manager Gary Brown, who were following closely to take notes, both agreed that Carthel "simply lost his balance". "It's not true what the media said—Wofford did not push him!"

Carthel did tear the knee of his jogging pants in the fall. (Both Carthel and Wofford have taken to wearing jogging pants instead of shorts in an effort to lessen cat-calls and to help Floyd County Deputies keep the traffic moving).

A passing motorist who witnessed the tumble placed a 911 call and Floydada and Lockney EMS were dispatched to the scene. According to anonymous sources a mild scuffle ensued among the EMS volunteers over who would officially bandage Carthel's knee.

A compromise was worked out and Paramedic Paul McIntosh volunteered to run alongside Carthel and hold a napkin to the bloody knee. Lockney EMS followed closely behind in case of further accidents.

Reporters were not able to verify the accounts because they were all out of breath after the first twenty yards and unable to keep up with the mayors.

(None of the above is true but I was still able to get more paragraphs out of a jogging story than the AP did.)

A View From The Lamplighter

incumbents come back home and fight out the issues before the electorate. Let the electorate decide who's right, and who's wrong about those health care plans being discussed. Let the electorate voice its opinion on whether we ought to risk American lives to reinstate a left-wing, defrocked priest as "President" of Haiti. Let the folks in Washington get a feel for what the folks at home think, rather than what the PACs think. Wait until after the elections to make those monumental decisions. The country just might benefit. At any rate we shouldn't be hurt too much by the recess. When they're not up there voting, they're not hurting anybody.

In passing, we would note that Jordan and Israel have stated publicly that they intend to try to fashion a peace treaty between the two countries. How long that will take is anybody's guess, but it's a start. Hopefully, it's a good start.

Will it save the American taxpayer any money? Not on your life. Will it cost the American taxpayer any more money? You can bet on it.

Our government has already announced, as a result of the agreement, it will "forgive" over $700 million in debts Jordan owes the U.S. And tiny Israel will get its usual $3 billion in "grants" (which is another word for "gifts") this year, plus other billions in "guaranteed" loans. And our government also announced it will spend $200 million for housing in the Gaza strip. This should provide shelter evidently destroyed during the turmoil brought on by Israeli occupation of that area.

The government also announced it will spend over $500 million (for starters) to ship relief supplies to Rwandan refugees who crossed the border into next door Zaire. These are folks who have fled the fighting between Rwandan Hutus and Rwandan Tutsis (who used to be called Watusi, if memory serves).

We hasten to say we are not the ultimate authority on what is now called Rwanda. It is one of those countries we were fortunate enough to avoid during those years we had to knock around Africa, and other places, for our government. So we've never been able to figure out exactly what the two tribes are fighting about, other than the fact that the Tutsi are taller than the Hutu, which causes unhappiness among the Hutus. The Hutu, although smaller, are much more prolific, more numerous. The two tribes have quarrelled and fought for years, but up until 20 or so years ago the Tutsi ran things. Then the Hutu rose up, slaughtering Tutsi by the hundreds of thousands, and took over. Now it appears that Tutsi will be in charge again. At least for a while.

And the government of Zaire is charging the government of the U.S. a $2,000 landing fee for each and every relief plane that touches the ground. So we are not only paying for the relief supplies, we are paying for the privilege of delivering those supplies to starving, sick, innocent people. The new world order marches right along.

McCormick and Elliott pledge nuptials

Anita Renee McCormick and Sammy John Elliott were united in marriage on Saturday, July 30, 1994, at 3:00 p.m. at the First Baptist Church in Floydada. Dr. Steve Vernon, minister of the First Baptist Church in Levelland, officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Delmas McCormick of Floydada. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Elliott of Levelland and the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. O.C. Rankin of Levelland and Evelyn Elliott of Snyder.

The altar area was highlighted with a rainbow arch candelabrum with white candles. Double heart shaped candelabra with white bows and entwined with salal leaves flanked each side of the arch candelabrum. White satin bow pew markers completed the sanctuary decorations.

Wilma Turner, Levelland, pianist for the wedding ceremony, played "There Is Love", "Clair de Lune", and other selections. She also accompanied Jeff O'Loughlin on the French horn as he played "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" for the prelude music. Mrs. Turner played "Trumpet Voluntaire" for the processional, "Bridal Chorus" as the bride was escorted down the aisle, and "The Bridal March" as the recessional. She accompanied all vocals and instruments throughout the ceremony.

Ruby Moultrie and Kyle Kuehler sang "Only God Could Love You More" while the candles were being lit followed by "Surely the Presence of the Lord Is in This Place" by Jeff O'Loughlin on the French Horn.

While the parents were being seated, Kyle Kuehler sang "Somewhere in the World Today" followed by Ruby Moultrie singing "In This Very Room."

Escorted down the aisle by her father, the bride wore a gown of regal white satin featuring a scalloped V neckline with bishop sleeves. The bodice was encrusted with pearls and jewels with an elongated waistline and the skirt was slim sheath style. The back of her gown showed a runner of pearl buttons and plunged to a low back, centered with a designer bow. The full length cathedral train was satin accented with European lace cut-outs and decorated at the hemline with double borders of European lace.

To complete her attire, the bride wore a pearl headband, accented with lace flowers and lily of the valley sprays, and highlighted with a pouf and single layer fingertip veil.

She carried a silk cascading spray of white roses, baby's breath, stephanotis and English ivy interspersed with seed pearl sprays and tulle.

For something old, the bride carried a white handkerchief that had belonged to her maternal grandmother, Artie Ward. Something new was her gown, something borrowed, her veil, belonging to De Lyn Wolcott, and something blue was her garter.

Before the bride was given in marriage by her father, the groom played "You Light Up My Life" on the alto saxophone. Preceding the marriage vows, Ruby Moultrie sang "The Lord's Prayer." The bride and groom lighted the unity candle as Ruby Moultrie and Kyle Kuehler sang "Together."

Amy McCormick, Floydada, twin sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Jill Dyer, El Paso, and Terri Rogers, Pearland. They were attired in royal blue moire taffeta dresses

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Hicks, the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Quisenberry, all of Floydada. Grandmothers are Betty Fuller of Floydada and Billie Quisenberry of Wichita Falls.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a white satin dress with a fitted bodice and embroidered alencon lace. The dress featured hand-sewn pearls accenting the scalloped V-neck and deep V-back. The long tapered sleeves also featured accents of alencon lace and hand-sewn pearls. The back of the gown was highlighted with a bow and chapel length train embellished with pearls and encrusted beads.

The bride carried a floral cascade of ivory calla lilies. Included in the bouquet were a traditional bride's dozen snow white roses accented with stephanotis. Satin ribbon and pearl accessories complemented the silk keepsake bouquet.

Following tradition, for something old the bride carried a handkerchief belonging to her great-grandmother. Something new was her wedding attire, something borrowed was her veil, and something blue was her garter.

The bride also wore pennies minted in the years of the birth of the bride and groom in her shoes.

Traditional processional and recessional music was played by organist Roberta Hardin and pianist Sue Crow. As Jennifer Crow sang "I Will Be There," T.J. and Tyrel Fuller lit the candles at the altar. The mothers of the bride and groom were then escorted in and together, they lit the unity candles.

As Jennifer Crow and Scott Crader sang "Only God Could Love You More," the groom and groomsmen, and the bridesmaids entered the church.

Serving as matron of honor was the bride's sister, Brenda Heflin. Bridesmaids were her sisters-in-law, Karen Hicks and Melissa Hicks, and Jennifer Crow and Catherine Davis. They were attired in formal black and white. The double breasted jacket featured a fitted waist with a halter back, a white roll collar, and a black, straight, fitted skirt. The bridesmaids carried long stem calla lilies entwined with garden green ivy and completed with a fluffy tulle bow.

All floral bouquets were designed and created by Holly Lee of Floydada.

Serving as best man was Grant Stovall. Groomsmen were Michael Hicks, Shane Orman, Ty Stovall and Monte Quisenberry. Along with the groom, they were attired in black tuxedos with a black bow tie and cummerbund. Serving as ushers were Dean Smith, Mark Thompson, Jerel Beatty, and Steve Anderson.

After the reading of the vows and exchanging of the rings, the bride and groom lit the unity candle while Jennifer and Scott sang "To Me."

Presiding at the register table was Trish McWilliams. A framed cross-stitch replica of the wedding invitation, a gift from the bride's aunt, Mildred Dillard of Oklahoma City, Okla., along with a crystal bride and groom, adorned the table.

RECEPTION

A reception hosted by the bride's parents was held in Wall Street Parlor.

The three-tiered wedding cake was accented by crystal columns and stacked crystal votive candles of varying heights. Serving at the bride's table was Adrian Lyde, Amber Mayo and Lauren Karriker.

The groom's table was centered by a floral arrangement of silk flowers. Following tradition a chocolate cake was served. The cake was topped by a Precious Moments bride and groom. A watermelon fruit basket and cheese and crackers was also served by Melissa Watts and Becca Henley.

The groom's family hosted a rehearsal dinner Friday night at the Floydada Country Club. Gary and Charlene Brown catered a meal of barbeque and all the trimmings.

The couple was feted with a shower in the home of Mrs. Darlene Stovall, a lingerie shower in the home of Brenda Heflin, a fiesta party at the Floydada Country Club and a backyard cookout at the home of Joe and Anne Jones.

The bride and groom are both graduates of Floydada High School. Chad graduated from Texas Tech University and is employed as a coach in Devine, Texas. Kalli will be attending the University of Texas in San Antonio.

Griffin and Davis exchange wedding vows

Emily Annette Griffin and Walter Newton Davis Jr. were united in marriage at 7:00 p.m. on July 29, 1994 at the First Baptist Church of Crosbyton.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Lester Griffin of Crosbyton. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Davis of Floydada are the parents of the groom.

A selection of Wally's and Emily's favorite hymns along with traditional selections were played by Tom Brian on the organ as guests arrived. Elaine Robinson played "Jessica's Theme" on the piano as Naomi Reeder, cousin of the bride, set the stage for the ceremony with candlelight.

Guests were registered by Dawn Binder of Ralls and Katharine Davis, sister of the groom, of Floydada.

Grandmother of the groom, Mrs. Elna Davis of Haskell, and grandparents of the bride, Mrs. Joe Griffin of Round Rock and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Brooke of Littlefield, were seated as Nathan Griffin, brother of the bride, played "Meditation from Thias" on saxophone.

The parents of the bride and groom entered as Sheldon Sue of Floydada sang "Parent's Prayer."

Dr. Joe R. Griffin of Round Rock, grandfather of the bride, officiated during the opening portion of the ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by her father who then led in the remainder of the ceremony. Mike Holster of Floydada directed the congregation in singing "Sweet, Sweet Spirit." Suzanne and

Michael Cole of Fort Worth sang "Household of Faith" preceding the vows. As the bride and groom knelt for prayer after lighting the unity candle, Mike Holster sang "Commitment Song."

The bride wore a wedding gown of candlelight satin richly appliqued with Venice lace. The bodice had a wedding band collar with an illusion insert above the sweetheart neckline. The back bodice had a heart-shaped keyhole with criss-crossing pearl ropes.

Sections of windowpane smocking, heavily outlined with pearls and flower sequins, adorned the bishop sleeves, the bodice, the front of the bouffant skirt and the back of the train. A double bow trimmed with lace, a satin rose, and draping pearls sat at the back waistline which flowed into the scalloped cathedral train edged with a wide row of schiffli lace. The headpiece of three satin roses was attached to a veil of illusion.

Emily's wedding bouquet of mixed flowers included a linen handkerchief which belonged to her great-grandmother, Bettie Fleming, and was carried by the bride's mother for her own wedding. Also in the bouquet was a cameo brooch which her great-great-aunt, Marchel Barcroft, wore on her wedding day in 1909.

Renee Denny of Waco attended the bride as Maid of Honor. Suzanne Cole of Fort Worth and Jennifer Hayden of Pleasanton were bridesmaids. They wore floor-length straight dresses of cranberry damask with an extended pep-lum attached with a bow at the back waist. They carried mixed flower bouquets with a background of crocheted lace.

Nathan Davis of Floydada was his brother's best man. Groomsmen were Bo Watson of Portland and Mark Appling of Crosbyton.

Ushers for the evening were Michael Cole of Fort Worth, Dan Penney of Houston, Kevin Key of Fort Worth, and Gilbert Schwertner of Floydada.

Following the recessional of the wedding party to "Proclaim the Glory of the Lord," a reception was held at the Fellowship Center. Members of the houseparty were Cindee Appling, sister of the groom; Amy Sharp, Lisa St. John, Amie Stone and Kristin Morris.

Where We Still Believe In Making House Calls

'There's a house whose rooms I know by heart.'

Where I tended the garden and read my books.

Where dreams were dreamt and memories made.

Where children grew up and I grew old.

There's a house where life was lived.

A house where I belong.

Floyd County Library News

The final session of the 1994 Summer Reading Club was held on July 27 at the Floyd County Library. Sponsored by the Texas State Library, and Floydada Dairy Queen, and the Floyd County 4-H, the club is an incentive program to encourage children to spend time reading during the summer months.

Children received a coupon for a free treat from the Dairy Queen for each 5 hours spent reading, and reading club certificates were awarded to those who read at least 10 hours. This year there were fourteen participants who received certificates, representing a total of 236 hours of reading.

The top five readers this year were Erika Miller, Laura Miller, Rachel Miller, Jesalyn Bradley and Ruth Vasquez, who each received a reading club poster.

Programs were offered for both preschool and elementary age children each Wednesday morning during the month of July. Club members were treated to a variety of activities led by Floyd County 4-H members Kaci Mathis, Lindsey Mathis, Garrett Mathis, Laura Lotz, Matt McPherson, Tyler Phillips, Madison Becker, Cienna Carthel, Cynthia Martin, Sarah Martin, Mandi Yeary, Charla Yeary, Randi Duke, Mandy Hunter, and Abby Sanders. Sorghum growers fight to keep granular carbofuran pesticide Sorghum growers are fighting to keep granular carbofuran in the lineup of pesticides that can be used on sorghum and now they've got strong legislative support behind them, reports Inside EPA.

When the Environmental Protection Agency decided to ban the pesticide, citing potential risk to birds, National Grain Sorghum Producers, which represents the nation's sorghum growers, decided to act. The group took their side of the story to Washington and legislators listened. In the July 1 edition of Inside EPA, Congressional sources are quoted as blasting EPA's decision to ban the use of the pesticide, saying that the decision virtually ignores risk and runs counter to the agency's attempts to reduce the use of pesticides.

The article goes on to say that sorghum growers have made a significant impact on legislators in Washington when they "ardently complained that the agency's data did not support the ban. While the agency cannot point to one confirmed bird kill that is related to carbofuran's use on sorghum, they have argued that it is likely that the pesticide is responsible for many unconfirmed kills."

Inside EPA says that "congressional sources say that the carbofuran case 'perfectly illustrated' the inherent flaws in EPA's pesticide policy. 'The sorghum growers have raised some damn good questions,' says a congressional source who believes that there is growing congressional sympathy for the growers. This source says that in this case, the agency was determined to ban the pesticide and 'may be cooking the data to reach that goal.'

Another source says EPA's decision runs counter to its stated desire to reduce the use of pesticides. This source explains that substitutes must be applied in greater volume than carbofuran, may be slightly more toxic, and could potentially present a worker exposure risk. This source says that the sorghum growers have made a compelling case which has been brought to the attention of several important congressional agriculture members.

"House Agriculture Committee Chairman Kika de la Garza (D-Tx) is 'very interested' in this issue, a congressional source says. Another source says that the issue is likely to surface when Congress takes up Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act reauthorization. A congressional source says that 'FIFRA is a cost-benefit statute. If (EPA) is tilting it in a certain abnormal way, it will be addressed' in either FIFRA reauthorization or through congressional oversight. Although further examination is required, this source says that if the carbofuran case represents standard methodology EPA is likely to draw the scrutiny of congressional agriculture committees."

SIDERS' SIDELINES

By Kerry Siders, CEA-Ag

Economic infestations of bollworms have not been documented by myself or David Kostroun, Pest Management Agent. However, some spraying has occurred in the southeastern portion of the county. This concerns me though, because it is very possible to get hot spots on an individual field by field basis. But wholesale-wash day spraying is not feasible at this time of the year, this year, or at any time. That is why you, a family member, a trained hand, or particularly a qualified consultant physically scouting those individual fields each week will pay/return more than most any other input cost.

How is the bollworm threshold determined? A single bollworm will destroy 1-2 bolls. At this time we would consider a conservative threshold of 7,000 small worms per acre. The percent bollworm control achieved by the insecticide application is also important. As an example, with 80% control, an insecticide application against 7,000 worms per acre could save (7,000 x 80% control x 1.5 bolls eaten =) 8,400 bolls.

If we assume 375 bolls equal one pound of lint and if cotton is worth $0.60 lb; then 8,400 bolls + 375 equals 22.4 pounds lint saved or $13.40/acre. If an insecticide costs $10/acre the net return would be $3.40 per acre. This is the logic behind the bollworm threshold. There are many unknowns and assumptions in this calculation. Use your own numbers to see when it pays to spray for bollworms. Remember, crop protection chemicals do not increase yields, they limit loss. Following thresholds and treating when necessary can make the difference of paying the stripping cost or not.

To calculate bollworms per acre first figure plant populations. Count the number of plants in 13'1" row feet for 40" rows and 17'5" row feet for 30" rows from random locations for a good average, then multiply by 1,000. Examine 24 to 36 plants across the field for eggs and larvae, and tally these up. Then using the formula below, estimate the

$$\frac{\text{no. of eggs (worms) per acre}}{\frac{\text{no. of eggs (worms) counted}}{\text{no. of plants}} \times \frac{\text{no. of plants}}{\text{per acre}}}$$

For example, you counted 10 small worms and 20 eggs on 36 plants and we have a plant population of 45,000 plants per acre. The calculation would be:

$$\frac{10 \text{ sm worms}}{36 \text{ plants}} \times \frac{45,000 \text{ plants/acre}}{1} = 12,500 \text{ sm worms/acre}$$

$$\frac{20 \text{ eggs}}{36 \text{ plants}} \times \frac{45,000 \text{ plants/acre}}{1} = 25,000 \text{ eggs/acre}$$

Remember beneficials, hot temperatures, and an egg lay behind worms are also very important factors when considering spraying. Good Luck! Call if I can help.

New music boosts cotton sales

In an attempt to persuade fashion designers to use cotton fabrics in their new collections, Cotton Incorporated has taken advantage of a unique opportunity to bridge fashion with music. The event, billed as the New Music Seminar, was held on July 19th, in Manhattan's Webster Hall.

According to Bill Daddi, director of public relations for Cotton Incorporated, "There is a tremendous opportunity for the fashion industry to merchandise itself by capitalizing on the visibility of musicians and the popularity of their music."

New creations from fifteen designers were showcased. The fashion show featured two bands and was presented under the banner "Be Real" - Cotton Incorporated's marketing tag for the 15-to-25 year-old generation.
