Organizers expect to feed a turkey Christmas dinner to over 400 people in this traditional celebration.

"We have a driver to deliver food to the Ronald McDonald House in Amarillo," said organizer, Sudie Cochran, "but we still need one to deliver to Lubbock. We also expect to take 60 plates to Lockney and we need a driver to deliver there.'

The Dec. 25th dinner was first started to serve Floydada residents who were home alone on Christmas day. It has now expanded to serve the Lockney community, Ralls, Matador, Quitaque, Flomot and those staying Lubbock and Amarillo.

Monetary donations for food can be made at the West Texas National Bank in Floydada.

Organizers are also in need of names of people who will benefit from the project, such as shut-ins and the elderly.

To volunteer, or for more information, call Fred Thayer at 983-3121, or Sudie Cochran, at 983-3814.

One of the first columns I ever wrote concerned Sandhill Cranes and their aversion to flying over the highway when a car is passing underneath them.

I had made this observation while driving back and forth to work and I thought everyone must have surely noticed this before me.

After I wrote about it I had several people say that they had never noticed that before. (I guess they kept their eyes on the road more than I did).

I still like to watch the cranes go into a holding pattern if they think they won't be able to get across the highway in front of you. I guess instinct keeps them from flying directly over what they perceive to be danger-

Anyway, I noticed something else about the cranes this week--O.K. I admit it--my mind wanders when I

Today I watched a large group of cranes, flying in their traditional V shape, start to reshape their V. Maybe the lead bird got tired and another one was moving up to take over--I'm not sure. But what I witnessed was very interesting to watch.

As the group re-formed a battle broke out in the air over who was going to be in front. There was a lot of flapping of wings and quite a pileup. The front part squabbled and the rest of the V went into a holding pattern and waited to see who was going to take over.

Dear Editor,

The battle waged on and the pileup continued. After awhile those in the rear got tired of waiting and moved over to form another V. It didn't take long for another bird in the new group to assume the lead and the group forged out ahead.

Since they didn't want to be left behind by the ones making progress, the bickering birds assumed their places at the back and followed the lead of the birds that they had been leading just moments before.

There seemed to be a big moral to the whole scenario, so I thought I would pass it along.

I goofed last week and forgot to make any mention of the Lockney Boy Scout Food Drive.

If you noticed a plastic Lowe's grocery sack on your front door on Saturday it is for the Food Drive. If you didn't get a sack it probably blew away in the wind.

Please fill the sack (or any other bag or box) and put them on your porch for next Saturday. The Boy Scouts will come and get them next Saturday around 9:30 a.m.

FLOYDADA - The Whirlwind Varsity boy's team traveled to Lorenzo on December 3, and came out on the short end of a 77-54 score. Vernon Cooper's 13 points led the Floydada attack. The only other Whirlwind in double figures was Mario Nunez with 11. Michael Black came close with 9 points, Daryl Henderson added 6, and Angel Aleman and Omar Eguia each had 4.

Coach Knight said, "It was a very disappointing loss, but Lorenzo is an excellent team - perhaps one of the best teams they've ever had. We didn't handle their full-court pressure very well, and they shot around 60% from the floor."

FLOYDADA - The Whirlwinds capped the very successful Floydada Classic basketball tournament with a thrilling 75-73 double overtime victory over Lorenzo in the championship finale on December 7. Floydada's Vernon Cooper was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player, and teammates Tomas Barrientos and Omar Eguia were selected to the All-Tournament Team.

Also named to the honor team were Silas McCaddon and Kane Swetnam, Lorenzo; Derrick Johnson, Hale Center; Adrain Castillo, Ralls; Roy Williams, Clarendon; Jack Cherry, Silverton; Joe Jimenez, Smyer; and Michael Valerio, Spur.

In first round action against Ralls on Thursday, the Whirlwinds overcame an 18-14 first-quarter deficit to go up by 5 at intermission. Floydada went on a 19-2 run in the third period to coast to a 72-42 victory. Coach Jim Knight said, "We struggled to get back in sync after the big loss at Lorenzo on Tuesday. Our defense was excellent in the second half, and we blew open the game down the stretch."

Vernon Cooper's 18 points led all scorers on the floor. Barrientos was close behind with 17 and Michael Palacios also hit double figures with 10. Michael Black had four field goals for 8 and Eguia and Angel Aleman points, and at the end of regulation play the score was knotted at 62-all. The Whirlwinds missed a shot off an inbounds play with 3 seconds remaining in the first overtime period. In the second overtime Floydada went up by two and spread the floor in the final minute. Fouls brought the 'Winds to the free-throw line in the last minute of the overtime period. The 'Winds were able to convert the key charity shots necessary to pull out the well deserved victory. Coach Knight said, "This was one of the best ball games I have ever been part of in my 10 years of coaching. We were very passive against their press in the early going, and were trailing by 14 at halftime. We could have thrown in the towel, but our kids are fighters. They came out in the second half and played as hard and intense as I've ever seen a team play. Our kids didn't feel that Lorenzo was 28 points better (the margin of victory by the Hornets over the 'Winds on December 3." The Whirlwinds proved the point with the overtime

The Whirlwinds once again displayed their overall team concept offense with five hitting in double figures. Cooper led the team with 17 points, followed by Black's 16. Eguia and Barrientos each had 11 and Henderson hit 5 field goals for 10. Harper had 6, and Palacios and Aleman had 3 and 2, respectively.

victory for the championship trophy.

Five of the Hornets hit double figures. Billy Dominguez paced Lorenzo with 18 points, followed by Silas McCaddon's 17. Kane Swetnam had a double-double with 11 rebounds and 13 points. Gary Wall and Erasmo Garcia had 12 and 11 points, respectively. The Hornets compiled a 25-8 record in 1995-96, enroute to a district championship, and should be considered as one of the favorites to reach the Class A Region 1 tournament next spring.

Coach Burns said, "This was the White team's first game. They showed the same intensity as the other 7th grade team. They moved the ball well on offense and played good defense. These five kids took on twenty others and played a whole game aggressively without getting into foul trouble."

Zack McNew's 16 points led the 8th Grade Breezers to a 43-21 victory over Roosevelt's 8th graders. Other scorers were Brad Cruz 9, Ruben Castillo 7, and Ty Fuller 4. Jim Perales and Eric Gomez each had 2 points.

Coach Burns said, "This was the team's first win of the season. They finally got everything together and played together. We pressed from the outset and got some quick buckets to give us a good start. Zack McNew poured in 16 points and they never looked back.

Sean Holster and Juan Gonzales dominated the post position as they scored 20 and 12 points, respectively. Aaron Hernandez added 8 and Scott Nixon knocked in 6 as the Breezers held a 40-11 halftime lead.

The 8th Grade Breezers dropped their district opener to Littlefield 50-29. However, it was a good team effort as everyone on the squad put points on the board. Trey Holmes and Zack McNew tied for team scoring honors with 6 apiece. Joe Cuba and Ruben Castillo each had 4, and a quartet of players (Brad Cruz, J.D. Chaparro, Tyrel Fuller and Eric Gomez) each had one field goal. Jessie Delgado was 1-for-2 at the freethrow line.

Coach Jim Burns said, "These kids are playing hard. We just can't seem to find a rhythm to get us going. They will keep working and it will come around to them.'

The 8th Grade Breezers lost to Crosbyton 37-34 in the first game of the All Saints Tournament in Lubbock on December 2. Joe Cuba tossed in 14 points to lead Floydada's scoring. Zack McNew scored 8, Ruben Castillo and Jim Perales each had 4, and Brad Cruz and Jesse Delgado had 2 apiece.

LHS Varsity boys begin season in Pioneer Classic

By Coach Rodney Dowell

LOCKNEY--The Varsity Boys Basketball team played it's first game of the year in Plainview as they participated in the Pioneer Classic. The tournament ran Thursday through FLOYDADA - After an opening Saturday and the Longhorns played all three days.

The Horns opened the tournament to the season because of their highly successful football team which played until last Friday night. This short start left the Longhorn cagers with only basketball workouts before playing Plainview. The second game saw some improvement as the Horns lost to Canyon by the score 67 to 36. The third game on Saturday showed the sneak preview to come as the Horns with the host team and the Bulldogs began to JELL, but still came up short won 86 to 40. Lockney got a late start to Hereford by a score of 87 to 65.

Whirlwind freshmen team opens district with victory

By Bill Gray FLOYDADA - Dusty Anderson scored a season-high 19 points to lead Floydada's 9th Grade Whirlwinds to a 63-38 victory in their District 2-3A opener over Littlefield. Justin McGuire hit 17 and David Lightfoot scored 15 to help Floydada avenge a 66-48 loss to the same Wildcat squad two weeks ago.

Floydada jumped out to a 36-21 halftime lead, and carried the momentum into the third period by outscoring the Wildcats 19-7 after intermission. Coach Randall Lightfoot stated, "It was easily our best defensive game of the year. Andy Williams was especially tough on defense. Led by Anderson, McGuire and Lightfoot, we completely dominated on offense.

Coach's Comments

By Coach Rodney Dowell

I can't say enough about these young men. To come off an emotional football season that ended way too short (in our eyes) and play like they did in this tournament says a lot about

We had some really good bright spots in this tournament as a team and am very proud of all our young men. I feel that with a few games under our belt before district we will be ready to compete.

The big bright spots of this tournament was the leadership pf Corbin Kellison, Adam Cummings and the emergence of the Longhorn Aerial Assault Weapon J.R. Walker. Walker was honored to be selected to the All-Tournament team and I think he deserved every vote.

We had a lot of young boys step up and contribute postively. Bradley Veal, Willie Luna, Thad Lusk, and David Hernandez will all help us in the near future. I want to thank all the fans who came to watch us play and I want to say hand on "It Does Get Better". We will play hard all this week. So come see these youngsters "Get After It!"

Taxes and subsidies may increase problems

By Edwin Feulner

As any economist can tell you, when you subsidize something, you get more of it. Give welfare checks to people who don't work, for example, and the number of people who don't work increases.

The flip side is equally clear: If you tax something, you get less of it. For example, a few years back the government slapped a "luxury" tax on cabin cruisers and yachts costing more than $100,000. The result: Boat buyers decided not to buy new boats, and several U.S. boat builders went belly up— throwing their workers into the unemployment line.

Which brings me to the point: Just as taxes on new boats kill demand for new boats, taxes on savings lead Americans to save less. Go ahead, try to squirrel away a few dollars for a rainy day (or a sunny day in Florida or Arizona when you retire). The government will thwart you at every turn, taxing your savings more heavily than just about anything else in the economy.

Think about it: Assume you take $1,000 and put it in a certificate of deposit earning 5 percent. After one year, you've earned $50. Now, you already paid steep federal income taxes on that original $1,000 (between 15 percent and 39 percent) when you earned it. But that's not enough. The government taxes your modest $50 gain too, leaving only $30.50 in your pocket if you're in the highest tax bracket.

Welcome to the tax code: You're taxed when you work for your money, and you're taxed again when your money works for you. It's one of the worst features of our tax system, taxing people twice on money they're trying to save.

About the only way to get some relief from this double tax burden is through Individual Retirement Accounts (IRAs), which let you sock away a few dollars and have the money earn interest tax-free.

But IRAs have their limits, the worst being that the government only

By Bob Welch

It happened two years ago this month. I was out of town when I got the phone call from my wife, her voice choked with pain. Earlier in the day, our 16-year-old nephew, Paul Scandrett, had been hiking with his 17-year-old brother, Brad, above the canyon-flanked Skokomish River southwest of Seattle. Paul had slipped and fallen some 40 feet into turbulent, icy water.

"They...they...think...he's...dead," my wife sobbed. "They haven't found his body."

I hung up the phone and, oblivious to others in the hotel lobby, buried my face in my hands and cried.

This isn't how life is supposed to go, I remember thinking later. A 90year-old great-grandmother in constant pain dies, but not a 16-year-old kid who, a week earlier, was upstairs with my oldest son, Ryan, having a "burp-off."

A street kid with a needle-pocked arm dies, but not the son of my wife's sister, Linda, and her husband, Greg Scandrett, a small-town Baptist minister.

A man who smoked for 35 years dies of lung cancer, but not my healthy nephew and all-star soccer player, the kid who had just played an impish shepherd boy in our family's traditional Christmas play.

Death, I quickly learned, is ugly. Death is seeing your 44-year-old, unshaven brother-in-law for the first time after he has lost his son, almost too weak to stand, looking as if he has aged 10 years in 10 days.

Death is a house full of relatives and friends talking in library-soft voices.

Death is a table in the church lobby with childhood photographs and a model airplane and a soccer ball that no one will ever kick again.

"I always wanted to play on the same soccer team with you," his brother, Brad, wrote for someone else to read at the memorial service. "Do they play soccer in heaven? I hope

And from Traci, Paul's 20-year old sister who had announced her engagement just a week before her brother's death: "Paul, your personality is everything I wish I could be like. Funny, relaxed, happy and confident in yourself. The thing that sticks in my mind is you sitting at the dinner table, trying your hardest to bug me by chewing like a cow."

The service continued. We cried. We laughed. I shared that, as the director of the family Christmas play, I almost always asked Paul to play a shepherd boy, and he never once complained.

lets you contribute $2,000 per year. The government also slaps you with a steep penalty if you withdraw the money before Uncle Sam says you can (currently age 59-and-a-half), so forget about using the money to buy a home or cope with a financial emergency. And don't think you can pass the money in your IRA on to your children without going another few rounds with the tax man. The government forces you to start withdrawing the money at age 70-and-a-half so it can collect income taxes again. Then when you die, the money falls prey to estate taxes and, when your children finally receive what's leftover, inheritance taxes.

Alas, that's Washington: It takes a good idea like saving money-which provides the capital to grow the economy and create jobs-and piles on so many regulations, penalties, and layers of taxation that saving hardly becomes worth the effort. If there's so little reward for thriftiness, why not spend, spend, spend?

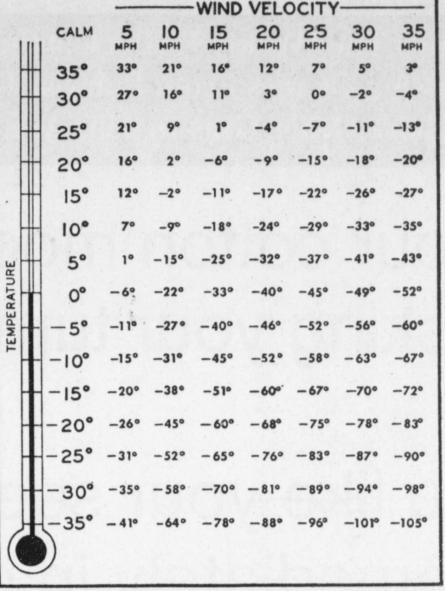

There's a better way. A proposal by Tom Kelly, president of the Savers & Investors League of Villanova, Pa., would eliminate the red tape and double taxation that makes saving so hard. IRAs? In Kelly's view, they're at best a good start. He proposes Individual Investment Accounts, a more muscular savings tool that would let you deposit as much of your money as you want tax free (no $2,000 limit), withdraw it for any purpose (hello new house), withdraw it at any age (early retirement anyone?), and let you pass it on to your children with no inheritance or estate taxes (sorry Uncle Sam, my kids come first).

It's not a hard concept to grasp: If you want people to save more, you have to tax their savings less. So no more preaching from politicians about our low national savings rate until they do for savers what they've already done for yacht buyers.

False self-esteem can mean education fails

By George Roche, President, Hillsdale College

For over three decades, education's "self-esteemers" have run the show, distorting education's mission from one of teaching basic skills to one of hiding incompetence while "feeling good" about oneself. Authentic selfesteem, based on genuine learning, remains central to educational growth. But for thirty years, we have gutted rigorous, traditional educational subjects and practices in favor of making students "feel good," regardless of actual accomplishments.

Matthew Robinson of Investor's Business Daily reported on three decades of artificially "feeling good," and what he found was very disturbing. Robinson quotes Martin Covington, an author and educator who studied a number of programs and found a "generally low magnitude of association between self-esteem and achievement." An examination of over 200 studies on self-esteem by psychologists Roy F. Baumeister and Joseph Boden of Case Western Reserve University and Laura Smart of the University of Virginia offered an even more frightening and ominous conclusion: "... people turn aggressive when they receive feedback that contradicts their favorable views (of themselves)" and "... it is mainly the people who refuse to lower their selfappraisals who become violent."

Remember that the counterfeit "self-esteem" crowd has been crowing for decades that low self-esteem can be blamed for everything from poor grades to violent crime. Studies now show that exactly the opposite may be true. Deliberately inflated levels of bogus self-esteem, levels not supported by any objective acquisition of skills, may in fact be the cause of a considerable amount of violent behavior. Remember that these conclusions came not from the result of one study, but from a survey of over 200 studies.

Robinson reports that fourth-grade California math teachers are told "not to judge the rightness or wrongness of each student's answer. Let those determinations come from the class.... Avoid showing any verbal or nonverbal signs of approval and ask, 'Does everybody agree?"

You can easily establish one important objective measurement of the effects of spending thirty years and untold billions of dollars trying to raise unauthentic "self-esteem" levels. In math alone, a study involving 12 nations revealed some truly disturbing results. By every objective measuring criterion, American students ranked last in math. Dead last. But guess which students ranked first in how they felt about their math skills? Right. The Americans, who finished last in the actual demonstration of skills, ranked first in their opinions of themselves and their math abilities. Conversely, the South Koreans ranked their own sense of self-esteem nearly at the bottom of the list, but came in first in the objective tests. If you're looking for the legacy of the California math book that advises the teacher not to comment on whether students have gotten the right or wrong answer, you just found it.

When times change rapidly, the last thing we need is a herd of educatorlemmings telling us that competition and assessing knowledge by using objective tests should be eliminated in favor of "feeling good." The real enemy for those promoting fraudulent self-esteem is competition in any form, and they know it. They just won't admit it. Those misguided teachers and theorists who lack the courage to take a stand and teach what students really need to learn can find the cause for their students' failure and dangerous "self-esteem" very easily. All they have to do is look in the mirror.

After a month off, Greg eased back into his position as a senior pastor at First Baptist Church of Shelton in Washington. Four weeks later, Linda returned to her job as a teacher.

The Delete Key

Though we had never written to each other before, Greg and I began exchanging e-mail. A couple of months after Paul's death, we visited his family. Greg and I sat alone in his living room. "I was at the computer, cleaning out programs," he said, "when I came upon some stuff of Paul's. The computer asked me, 'Are you sure you want to delete?"

He stopped, unable to talk. "I wanted to scream - No!!! I don't want to delete. I didn't want it to be so...so final."

We drove to the spot where Paul fell, and we stood on a bridge, far above the icy waters that pounded through the Olympic Mountains. Greg lamented that so many young people today regard life as cheap. "What hurts is that Paul loved life," he said. "Why did it have to be someone who loved life so much?"

Why? Why? Why? A million whys. In early May, Greg wrote that Linda and Traci had picked out a wedding dress (Traci and her fiance, Brandon, would be married in December) and "I didn't faint at the price tag." It was the first time in five months that Greg had said or written anything that was remotely funny.

Greg found solace and wisdom in a pastor from Arizona who had also lost a son. This man said that since his son's death he realized how trivial some things now seemed - like workplace squabbles. He no longer wasted his energy on such insignificance.

But for every touch of enlightenment, the family endured weeks of darkness. "Progress is slow," Greg wrote to me in late May. "I want to quit everything and just sit and cry. Linda says she feels 'boxed in.' She can't cry at school, and she can't cry at home because it makes me sad.

"I really miss Paul. And the predominant emotion for me is anger. Anger at God. It is so intense sometimes that I fear I will not be able to

The spring rains subsided, dropping the river's level. In June, Paul's body was found 15 miles downstream from where he had fallen.

"That has made it harder again somehow," Greg wrote.

Summer became fall. Paul's birthday came. The family came together, the emotions continuing to pulsate and pound like the Skokomish itself.

In early December, preparing to move to a new log home outside of town, the family loaded the U-Haul. 'I packed Paul's room on Tuesday," Linda wrote. "It was very hard."

Exchange of Vows

In the same church where we had said good-bye to Paul, the entire family watched as Traci and Brandon prepared to say their wedding vows. It was the week before Christmas 1995. nearly a year since Paul's death.

One of the bridesmaids walked down the aisle without an escort, symbolizing Paul's absence.

When the minister asked, "Who gives this woman to this man?" Greg took the microphone and turned to the hundreds of guests. He said he would answer that question in a moment; first he needed to say something to the bride and groom.

He talked of meeting Brandon. "You have brought laughter into our house during what has otherwise been a sad time. We needed another son, and God has again been gracious."

He talked of the love described in 1 Corinthians, then answered the question about who was giving away the bride: "Her mother, her brothers and I do."

Not brother. Brothers.

The Play Continues On Christmas Eve, the cast and crew of our family theater troupe dedicated their 1995 performance and every Christmas Eve performance from then on - to Paul. He would have loved our production; in a play about Traci and Brandon, we poked endless fun at the sister he so fiendishly loved to tease. During the living room production, Brad hammed it up while playing the part of the minister. Linda and Greg laughed with gusto, as did Traci and Brandon, the newlywed victims of our three-act parody.

A year had come and gone in this family's cycle, a cycle thousands of families face each year. We had lost someone to death. We had gained someone through marriage.

Greg preached with a fervor he'd never had before, referring in one sermon to Isaiah 50:10: "Who among you fears the Lord and obeys the word of his servant? Let him who walks in the dark, who has no light, trust in the name of the Lord and rely on his God."

ily during the play, I sensed a healing. We were closer, more vulnerable to each other. We communicated more,

In other state issues, voting delegates called for the Texas Legislature to repeal the 1993 law establishing the Edwards Aquifer Authority. If that law is not repealed, then delegates said that Texas Farm Bureau should work for change in the Edwards Aquifer law to better reflect the needs of agriculture.

Delegates also addressed a hot issue in the agricultural community, calling for continued support for the Boll Weevil Eradication Program. Noting that the program is critical to the future of the Texas cotton industry, they said Texas Farm Bureau should work with other agricultural organizations to make sure the program is successful in every region.

Also on the state level, delegates: *Supported legislative revisions to the Texas Agricultural Finance Authority's Young Farmer Loan Guarantee Program to broaden the programs usefulness to both borrow-

"FOCUS ON THE FAMILY" with Dr. James Dobson

QUESTION: My 12-year-old is embarrassed about the size of her nose. But what I can't understand is that she keeps talking about it to her friends. Should I call this to her attention and advise her not to mention this problem?

Dr. Dobson: One of the most obvious characteristics of a person who feels inferior is that he talks about his deficiencies to anyone who will lis-

An overweight person feels compelled to apologize to his companions for ordering a hot fudge sundae. He echoes what he imagines they're thinking: "I'm already fat enough without eating this," he says, scooping up the cherry and syrup with his spoon. Likewise, a woman who think's she's unintelligent will admit freely, "I am really bad at math, I can hardly add two and two." This kind of self-denigration is not as uncommon as one might think.

While there is no virtue in becoming an image-conscious phony, trying to be something we're not, I believe it is also a mistake to go to the other extreme. While the person is blabbing about all of his ridiculous inadequacies, the listener is formulating a lasting impression of him.

So I do recommend that you teach a "no-knock" policy to your daughter. She should learn that constant self-criticism can become a bad habit, and it accomplishes nothing.

There is a big difference between accepting blame when it is valid and in simply chattering about one's inferiority. Your daughter should know that her friends are probably thinking more about their own flaws, anyway.

QUESTION: I tend to feel depressed after every holiday, but I don't know why. These special days are very happy ones for my family. Why do I find myself "blue" after such enjoyable occasions?

Dr. Dobson: It will be helpful to understand the nature of emotional rhythm in human beings. Anything that produces an extreme "high" will set the stage for a later "low," and vice

This elation lasted for several days, during which time I discussed the experience with Shirley. I mentioned that we had been very high and that our excitement would not continue indefinitely. Emotions don't operate at maximum velocity for very long.

More important, it was likely that our mental set would drop below sea level within a short period of time. As expected, we both experienced a vague letdown into mild depression about three days later. The house didn't seem so wonderful, and there wasn't anything worth much enthusiasm. However, having anticipated the "downer," we recognized and accepted its temporary fluctuation when Depression, therefore, should be understood as a relatively predictable occurrence. It is likely to appear, as in your case, following a busy holiday or after the birth of a baby, a job promotion, or even after a restful va-

The cause for this phenomenon is partly physical in nature. Elation consumes greater quantities of body energy, since all systems are operating at an accelerated rate. The necessary consequence of this pace is fatigue and exhaustion, bringing with it a more depressed state. Thus, highs must be followed by lows. The system is governed by a psychological law. You can depend on it But in the healthy individual, fortunately, lows eventually give way to highs, too.

Dr. James Dobson is a psychologist, author and president of Focus on the Family, a nonprofit organization dedicated to the preservation of the home. Correspondence to Dr. Dobson should be addressed to: Focus on the Family, P.O. Box 444, Colorado Springs, CO 80903.
