AMERICAN LEGION MEETING IN BROWNFIELD, TEXAS

The American Legion Post No. 289 of Brownfield, Texas, was called to meeting on Monday night, May 30th, by the Post Commander, Morgan L. Copeland. There was a large number of ex-service men present, including soldiers, sailors and marines.

After various business transactions were completed, the Post Commander called for the election of officers for the Post, with the following results: Post Commander, H. R. Winston; Vice-Commander, Arnett Bynum; Post Adjutant, Jim Miller; Chaplain, Rev. J. E. Anderson; Sergeant-at-Arms, Riley Spivey; Treasurer, Fletcher Stewart.

An extension department was added with Morgan L. Copeland in charge.

Arrangements were completed for a military funeral in honor of the body of Mr. M. A. Demas' son, that is soon to arrive from France. Program committee was appointed and announcements will appear later.

SANITARIUM ITEMS

Last week's Herald stated that Dr. Baugh of Lubbock, was called down Monday to see a patient in the local sanitarium. This is an error. Dr. Baugh was called to Slaughter's ranch near Lamesa, and on his way back stopped at Brownfield to see a friend who is sick in the sanitarium.

Don, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Burkett, of near Lamesa, who was kicked by a horse, is improving.

Mr. D. A. Lane, of near Seminole, is ill with blood poison in his arm.

Miss Collins, of Priddy, was able to return home, Sunday.

We are glad to report that Mrs. Young, of Plains, is out of danger.

T. I. Brown, who had his hand broken at the ball game, was treated at the sanitarium.

CANDIES of all kinds at Brothers & Brothers, and they are fresh too.

Sheriff Keller, Messrs. Will Earliest, Murphy Luna, and Mr. Black, of Plains, had business in this city, Wednesday.

BABY RUN OVER BY CAR

On last Sunday, Will Trammell started to town in his car and the baby, 2 1/2 years old, got on the running board of the car to ride a short distance with the father, who was then going to stop and let him off, but instead, the little man thought he could get off while the car was running and fell under the back wheel. The father in his excitement then kicked the car over him. His arm was broken, but otherwise the little fellow is getting on alright.—Lamesa Reporter.

DON BURKETT KICKED

Don Burkett was kicked by a horse last Thursday evening in the stomach and at first his injuries were considered serious, but at present Dr. Warnick reports him doing fairly well.—Lamesa Reporter.

WHAT ABOUT A HOME CHAUTAUQUA FOLKS

The Brownfield Chautauqua is over and we believe that the citizens generally were well satisfied with the programs rendered here, but some were misled somewhat about other matters connected therewith, and the superintendent left without a contract with our people, though one may be signed later.

Some of the towns in West Texas staged their own chautauques this year that were not only successful, but left the money in the town. Now an out of town chautauqua takes any where from $500 to $1,000 out of the towns they visit, and with half the expense, given to home people, it can in a measure be duplicated.

The town still stands indebted for the tabernacle, and this money, less expenses, will lift the debt. And the people who are holding the sack want their money just the same as you want yours.

Now, for instance, the Choral Club could entertain one night. Duck Pox could be delegated to get up a musical for one night. An old fashioned fiddlers contest, and an old time square dance, if necessary at the same time. Some of the old timers would be glad to perform. An opera could be staged one night, and as for speakers, there are talented men within easy reach, who would come for their expenses, but to mention other talent.

Let's hear from others.

THE NIMRODS RETURN

The Brownfield party consisting of M. B. Sawyer, A. M. Brownfield, Fred Smith, Tom May, B.W. Stinson, Shag Bynum, and families have returned from the big fishing trip to the Devil River and Rio Grande, and they tell it just like all other fishermen that go on an expedition, that they merely got the minnows and the whole got away. Two channel cat weighing 50 pounds each, several 25 pounds and a whole army of lesser fry finished up the rest. The one that got away probably weighed in the neighborhood of 100,000,000 pounds and the biggest cuss in the crowd was— "T. T. T." etc.

There was lots of grouse, hills and mountains. These things abound in Texas. Mountain lion, but no blind tigers were encountered. They never so much as get a whiff of hunch on the Rio Grande—but some of the adventures got snags bit luckily.

They started back with a lot of fish they caught, but for weather and no one wanted to spoil. They proposed to show us a lot of fish heads, but there are all kinds of fish markets between here and the Rio Grande.

SINGING CONVENTION A GRAND SUCCESS

If there is a human in the county that attended the singing convention at Union last Sunday that doubted this thriving young community could play hostess to a big thing like this, their doubts are now all dispelled and they are praising and complimenting Union and her almost incomparable citizens all over the county this week and will be for weeks to come yet. If anyone did not get the glad hand of welcome, and the best dinner ever—they must have been hid out over in the slumery, somewhere. They surely did not put in appearance. Mere applause and praise can not tell it, for even the casual observer could not help but see that Union was not trying to make a hit, but their hospitality is marvellous assured.

A view of their $15,000 brick school building will at once present them to you as people that let no expense or trouble keep them separated from the best of the necessities of this life, for good schools are not luxuries as a few people seem to think, but an absolute necessity, and as soon as these good people get shade trees started in their five acre play grounds, they are going to be even prouder of their imposing school building and their nice teachers home. Union, we will explain, is an independent school district carved out of the old Groves and several other districts, and two Ford trucks make the pounds each day of the nine months school term to collect the kids and lassies.

But to go back to the singing convention, will say that there were 122 automobiles there at noon, eight wagons, three buggies and twenty saddle horses, making easily 500 people in attendance at the noon hour.

Most of the morning was devoted to preliminaries, but there was some congregational singing, some by the several classes represented, solos, duets, quartettes, etc., and all were fine but we want to especially compliment the two little lassies of the Union community on their duet. The duo was probably seven years old—but she has had training.

Good talks along the line were then made by H. H. Copeland and Rev. J. E. Anderson, and then—DINNER.

Mr. J. M. Green, to whom probably is due more than any other individual in the county, the present, perfect Terry County Singing Convention, kept his word to the letter, and filled the editor up to the tongue on the stands the good ladies had prepared. Yes, noodles for everybody, and from the way it looked to us, lots of grub was carried home, and so the people of Union will not suffer this week as we predicted. It was too much for that big crowd.

After dinner, when the men had picked the beef and speck chicken out of their teeth, and smoked and "chawed" to their hearts content, the crowd again went to the big cool arched dingium again, where the Terry Co.

OH! YE OLD SWIMMING HOLE

The Big Plunge is what the proprietor, John Dumas calls it, but to the barefooted boy of the eighties it was the "Old Swimming Hole."

We, of course are speaking of the Brownfield Natatorium, to use the modern part of speech, which is now nearing completion, and visitors are applauding the people of Brownfield and the proprietor of the Big Plunge in general for this place of amusement, health and recreation.

Another thing, it is right in town, and no citizen of the town will have to go to the expense of conveyance to and from it. Mr. Dumas hopes to have it in readiness by the middle of the last of this month at the outside.

The pool is 30x100 feet and will run all the way from 1 to 9 feet deep.

Both houses will be erected around the tanks.

A well has been sunk carrying a 2 or 4 inch pump, and a large gasoline engine to run it. Mr. Dumas figures that it will take three days to fill in the first time as the concrete will no doubt take up lots of water.

BANKS CONSOLIDATE

We understand that by mutual arrangement between the management of the First State Bank of Plains, and the Stockmen Exchange Bank, same city, the latter has gone into voluntary liquidation and has paid all its depositors in full, and will liquidate its assets through the First State Bank.

We believe this a good arrangement both for the banking people and the people, for while Plains is a splendid little city, surrounded by people of means, there are not enough of them to support two banks.

All the Sheriffs of Texas in their new broad trimmed hats and with their most determined look are to meet in Amarillo in July. Sheriff Burton Roush is already planning for their entertainment. We claim the Star-Telegram was some baby Sunday. The Sunday edition was in celebration of the formal opening of their million plant in the city of Fort Worth. The edition contained 216 pages, and we don't know how many sections, and was probably the largest paper ever issued in the State. The Herald was offered a stool at this house warming, but he could not make it. Any way, the Star-Telegram is always there with the dope.

Fire at Tahoka one night last week destroyed the old W. O. W. hall on the east side of the square. There was a stock of furniture on the bottom floor. This was a total loss with the Woodmen and Odd Fellow regalia up stairs. Some insurance.

THE OLD STILL

The old still stands still, on the side of the hill. The ghost of the vanished past. The river laughs back, as it goes on to the mill. To see it "a dead one" at last. No smoke screens the hill. From the old still, still. The corn fields are waving adieu. The grain that we grow. For the old mill below. Will never again grow for you. A lady and a hatchet started the racket.

That finished you and your brew. You loudly proclaim her a meddling fanatic. But you've learned what fanatics can do. You linked with the devil for everything evil; Your touch was a curse and a blight. The American nation endorsed Carry Nation. And shoved you into a heluva plight. Now the old grist mill is grinding still. But the old still stands still on the side of the hill—John Moore in the Canadian Record.

Three of the children of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Lewis, have been visiting with them lately. They were Mr. and Mrs. McGuire, of Gilliland, Texas, Mr. and Mrs. Myrie Lewis, of Galloupe, N. M., and Mr. and Mrs. Reid of Gaines county. Mr. McGuire reports the wheat and oat crop short in his part of the country, but that the row crops were looking very well. Myrie says everything in Western New M. is as good as could be expected during generally short times.

Mrs. M. E. Kile, mother of Mrs. Milton Goode, left Monday for Sweet water where she will visit relatives for a few weeks.

The family of F. E. Walters are visiting in Tahoka at present.

Miss Nola Jackson, who has been here visiting friends for the past ten days, left Monday for her home in Lubbock. Miss Stella will visit here awhile longer. Miss Nola informed the editor that they would move back here before the opening of school to their farm southwest of town, which will be good news to their many acquaintances and friends here.

Miss Lizzie Watkins, artist and also teacher, of Dallas, was here recently visiting with her friend, Miss Dora Daugherty. She was called out from Dallas to do some painting for John R. Ralls, of Ralls, Texas, and came on down here. She was also formerly teacher of Mr. Roy Collier.

Enos Humphrey and wife, also his sister, Miss Vera, of Lubbock, were here last week visiting their sister, Mrs. C. P. Young, of Plains, who is ill at the local sanitarium.

Bert French was in one day recently and reported that he had finished planting. He informed us that he just planted what cotton he can gather himself this year.

You have often heard it said that a school teacher was fit for nothing but the school room, but if one will just take the time to examine the premises of H. C. Zorns, superintendent of the Union school they will at once change their mind. Prof. and Mrs. Zorns marketed more than $400 worth of turkeys last year, and they are preparing to put 200 birds on the market this fall. About 100 are now in sight with 100 eggs in the incubator. Chickens are also just as numerous, and he has all the range he wants, and the turkeys practically make their own way. He also has the best and furthest advanced garden he has ever seen this year.

G. N. Turner, who has recently closed out a mercantile business in Plains, was over this week on business and informed us that he was putting in a new grocery in the city of Seagraves.

WHY HE BLUSHED

An article that is going the rounds taken from State Press of the Dallas News, about flour sack lingerie, reminds us of one that is told on Sam Baswell of the Clarendon News. It happened several years ago, while Sam was working for a small town newspaper out in West Texas. He was out in the country one day and ran into a camp meeting under a bush arbor by the side of the cross-roads school house. The seats were made of rough pine boards with the numerous splinters protruding. Sam took a seat behind the prettiest girl there, being at that time what one might call "young and foolish." Everything was lovely until the preacher asked the congregation to kneel while a good brother prayed. The young lady merely slid off the bench on her knees and her skirt hung on a splinter, exposing to view some of her "dainty" flour sack undergarments, and Sam was horrified to see the glaring inscription, which one laundering had failed to obliterate: "Pride of the West"—Richardson Echo.

CHAPTER I—Graham Norcross, railroad manager, and his secretary, Jimmie Dodds, are married at Seagraves, Texas, with a young lady, Sheila Macrae, and her maid, and her mother, who will bring a special car is carried off.

CHAPTER II—Norcross recognizes the car stolen as John Chadwick's, financial manager, whom he was to meet at Portial City. He and Dodds rescue Chadwick. The latter offers Norcross the management of the Pioneer Short Line, which is in the hands of eastern speculators, headed by Breckenridge Dunton, president of the line. Norcross, learning that Sheila Macrae is stopping at Portial City, accepts.

I heard what he was saying, but I didn't really sense it because my head was so full of a thing that was so pitiful that it had kept me swallowing hard all the way back from Major Kendrick's. It was this way. When I had flagged the bell out at the house it was Maizie Ann who let me in and took the box of flowers and the boss note. We sat in the dimly lighted hall and talked for a few minutes. One thing she told me was that Mrs. Sheila had company and the name of it was Mr. Van Britt. That wasn't strictly news because I had known that Mr. Van Britt was dividing the pretty evenly with the boss in the Major Kendrick house visits. That wasn't anything to be scared up about. But my chunky little girl didn't stop at that.

"I think we can let Mr. Van Britt take care of himself," she said. "He has known Cousin Sheila for a long time, and I guess they are only his good friends. But there is something you ought to know, Jimmie—for Mr. Norcross's sake. He has been sending lots of flowers and things, and Cousin Sheila has been taking them because—well, I guess it's just because she doesn't know how not to take them."

"Go on," I said, but my mouth had suddenly grown dry. "Such things—flowers, you know—don't mean anything in New York, where we've been living. Men send them to their women friends just as they pass their cigar-cases around among their male friends. But I'm afraid it's different with Mr. Norcross."

"It is different," I said. Then she told me the thing that made me swell up and want to burst. "It mustn't be different, Jimmie. Consider, you've married, you know."

"I know she has been married," I corrected; and then she gave me the sure-enough knock-out.

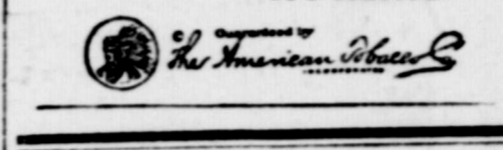

"She is married now, and her husband is still living!" For a little while I couldn't do anything but gape like a chicken with the pin. It was simply fierce! I knew as well as I knew anything, that the boss was gone on Mrs. Sheila; that he had fallen in love, first with the back of her neck and then with her pretty face and then with all of her; and that the one big reason why he had let Mr. Chadwick persuade him to stay in Portial City was the fact that he had wanted to be near her and to show her how he could make a perfectly good sport out of the speller horn of the Pioneer Short Line.

When I began to get my grip back a little I was right warm under the collar.

When I began to get my grip back a little I was right warm under the collar.

"She oughtn't to be going around telling people she is a widow!" I blurted out.

"She doesn't," was the calm reply. "They've separated, you know—years ago—and Cousin Sheila has taken her mother's maiden name, Macrae. If we were going to live here always it would be different. But we are only visiting Cousin Basil, or I suppose we are, though we've been here now for nearly a year."

There wasn't much more to be said, and pretty soon I had staggered off with my load and gone back to the office. And this was why I couldn't get very deep into the Hatch business with Mr. Norcross when he told me what he had been obliged to do about the Sand Creek hold-up.

If he had been like other men it wouldn't have been so hard. But I had a feeling that he had gone into this love business just as he did into everything—neck or nothing—burning his bridges behind him, and having no notion of ever turning back. The boss had never been beaten. What was it going to do to him when he learned the truth about Mrs. Sheila?

On top of this came the still harder kernel I saw that it was up to me to tell him. I remembered all the stories I'd ever heard about how the most cold-blooded surgeon that ever lived wouldn't trust himself to stick a knife into a member of his own family, and I knew now just how the surgeon felt about it.

While I was still sweating under the big load Maizie Ann had dimpled upon me, the night dispatcher's boy came in with a message. It was from Mr. Chadwick, and I read it with my eyes bulging out. This is what it said: "To G. Norcross, G. M., Portial City."

"P. S. L. Common dropped to thirty-four today, and banks leading on short time notes for betterment fund are getting nervous. Wire from New York says bondholders are stirring and talking receivership. General opinion is financial circles leans to idea that new policy is foregone failure. Are you still sure you can make it win?

Right on the heels of this, and before I could get my breath, in came the boy again with another telegram. It was a hot wire from President Dunton, one of a series that he had been shooting in ever since Mr. Norcross had taken hold and begun firing the cousins and nephews.

"To G. Norcross, G. M., Portial City. RUSH."

"See stock quotations for today. Your policy is a failure. Am advised you are now fighting Red Tower. Stop it immediately and assure Mr. Hatch that we are friendly, as we have always been. If something cannot be done to lift securities to better figure, your resignation will be in order."

"Dunton."

They say that misfortunes never come singly. Here were two new griefs hurling themselves in over the wires all in the same quarter-hour, besides the one I had up my sleeve. But there was no use dallying. It was up to me to find the boss as quickly as I could and have the three-cornered surgical operation over with. I knew the telegrams wouldn't kill him—or I thought they wouldn't. I thought they'd probably make him take a fresh strangle hold on things and be fired—if he had to be fired—fighting it out grimly on his own line. But I wasn't so sure about the Mrs. Sheila business. That was a horse of another color.

I had just reached for my hat and was getting ready to snap the electric off when I heard footsteps in the outer office. When I looked up, a stocky, hard-faced man in a derby hat and a short overcoat was standing in the doorway and scowling across at me.

It was Mr. Rufus Hatch, and I had a notion that the hot end of his black cigar glared at me like a baleful red eye when he came in and sat down.

CHAPTER V

And Satan Came Also

"I saw your office lights from the street," was the way the Red Tower president began on me, and his voice took me straight back to the Oregon woods and a lumber camp where the saw-millers were at work. "Where is Mr. Norcross?"

I told him that Mr. Norcross was up-town, and that I didn't suppose he would come back to the office again that night, now that it was so late.

"My name is Hatch, of the Red Tower company," he graded, after a minute or two. "You're the one they call Dodds, aren't you?"

I admitted it, and he went on. "Norcross brought you here with him from the West, didn't he? What pay are you getting here?"

It was on the tip of my tongue to cuss him out right there and then and tell him it was none of his business. But the second thought (which isn't always as good as it's said to be) (Continued on page 3.)

whispered to me to lead him on and see how far he would go. So I told him the figures of my pay check. "I'm needing another shorthand man, and I can afford to pay a good bit more than that," he growled. "They tell me you are well up at the top in your trade. Are you open to an offer?"

"I let him have it straight then. 'Not from you,' I said. 'And why not from me?'"

Here was where I made my first bad break. All of a sudden I got so angry at the thought that he was actually trying to buy me that I couldn't see anything but red, and I blurted out, "Because I don't hire out to work for any strong-arm outfit—not if I know it!"

For a little while he sat blinking at me from under his bushy eyebrows, and his hand moved as if he were holding a straight line with a measuring tape. A wrinkle coming and going at the corners of his eyes.

When he got ready to speak again he said, "You're only a boy. You want to get on in the world, don't you? I'm offering you a good chance: the best you ever had. You don't owe Norcross anything more than your job, do you?"

"Maybe not." "That's better. Put on your hat and come along with me. I want to show you what I can do for you in a better field than railroad work, or ever will be. 'I'll pay you—' and he named a figure that very nearly made me fall dead out of my chair."

Of course, it was all plain enough. The boss had him on the hip with that kidnaping business, with me for a witness, and he was trying to fix the witness.

"I guess we needn't beat about the bushes any longer, Mr. Hatch," I said, bracing up to him. "I haven't told the sheriff, or anybody but Mr. Norcross, what I know about a certain little hold-up that happened a few weeks ago down at Stryceona and arranged to have him held up on the way back."

"Mr. Chadwick didn't take it as a joke!" I retorted.

"I know he didn't; and that's why we're all anxious now to dig a hole and bury the thing decently. Perhaps we had all been taking a drop too much at the club dinner that night."

At that I swelled up man-size and kicked the whole kettle of fat into the fire.

"Of course, it was a joke!" I ripped out. "And your coming here tonight to try to hire me away from Mr. Norcross is another. The woods are full of good shorthand men, Mr. Hatch, but for the present I think I shall stay right where I am—where a court subpoena can find me when I'm wanted."

"That's all nonsense, and you know it—if you're not too much of a kid to know anything," he snapped, shooting out his heavy jaw at me. "I merely wanted to give you a chance to get rid of the railroad collar, if you felt like it. I like a fighting man; and you've got nerve. Take a night and sleep on it. Maybe you'll think differently in the morning."

Here was another chance for me to get off with a whole skin, but by this time I was completely lost to any other weighing and measuring of the possible consequences. Leaning across the desk and I gave him a final shot, just as he was getting up to go.

"Listen, Mr. Hatch," I said. "You haven't fooled me for a single minute. Your guess is right: I heard every word that passed between you and Mr. Henckel that Monday morning in the Bullard lobby. As I said, I haven't told anybody yet but Mr. Norcross; but if you go to making trouble for him and the railroad company, I'll go into court and swear to what I know."

He was half-way out of the door when I got through, and he never made any sign that he heard what I said. After he was gone I began to sense, just a little, how big a fool I had made of myself. But I was still mad clear through at the idea that he had taken me for the other kind of when I got through, and he never made any sign that he heard what I said.

was meant to be nurse too, only it was fitted and cooked to a fare-you-well.

"You poor, poor boy!" she cooed, putting my pillow just like my grandmother used to when I was a little kid and had the mumps or the measles. "Are you still roaming around in the Oregon woods?"

"That brought my dream or one of them, back; the one about wandering around in a forest of Douglas fir and having to jump and dodge to keep the big trees from falling on me and smothering me."

"No more woods for mine," I said, sort of feebly. And then: "Where am I?"

"You are in bed in the spare room at Cousin Basil's. They wanted to take you to the railroad hospital that night, but when they telephoned up here to try to find Mr. Norcross, Cousin Basil went right down and brought you home with him in the ambulance."

"That night, you say?" I parroted. "It was last night that the door fell on me, wasn't it?"

"I don't know anything about a door, but the night that they found you all burnt and crippled, lying at the foot of your office stairs, was three days ago. You have been out of your head nearly all the time ever since."

"Burnt and crippled? What happened to me, Maizie Ann?"

"Nobody knows, not even the doctors. We've been hoping that some day you'd be able to tell us. Can't you tell me now, Jimmie?"

I told her all there was to tell, numbing around among the words the best I could. Then she told me how the headquarters watchman had found me about midnight with my right hand scorching black and the rest of me apparently dead and ready to be buried. The ambulance surgeon had insisted, and was still insisting, that I had been handling a live wire; but there were no wires at all in the lower hall, and nothing stronger than an incandescent light current in the entire office building.

"And you say I've been here hanging on by my eyelashes for three days? What has been going on in all that time, Maizie Ann? Hasn't anybody been here to see me?"

She gave a little nod. "Everybody, nearly. Mr. Van Brit has been up every day, and sometimes twice a day. He has been awfully anxious for you to come alive."

"But Mr. Norcross?" I queried. "Hasn't he been up?"

She shook her head and turned her face away, and she was looking straight out of the window at the setting sun when she asked, "When was the last time you saw Mr. Norcross, Jimmie?"

"I sat little over a big scare that seemed to rush up out of the bed-clothes to another me. But I made out to answer her question, telling her how Mr. Norcross had left the office maybe half an hour or so before I did, that night, going up-town with Mr. Hays. Then I asked her why she wanted to know."

"Because nobody has seen him since a little letter that came night," she said, saying it very softly and without turning her head. And then: "Mr. Van Brit found a letter from Mr. Norcross on his desk the next morning. It was just a little typewritten note on a Hotel Bullard letter sheet, saying that he had made up his mind that the Pioneer Short Line wasn't worth fighting for, and that he was resigning and taking the midnight train for the East."

I sat straight up in bed; I should have had to do it if both arms had been burnt to a crisp clear to the shoulders.

"Resigned?—gave up and ran away? I don't believe that for a single minute, Maizie Ann. I burst out."

She was shaking her head again, still without turning her face so that I could see it.

"I'm afraid it's all true, Jimmie. There were two telegrams that came to Mr. Norcross the night he went away; one from Mr. Chadwick and the other from Mr. Dunton. I heard Mr. Van Brit telling Cousin Sheila what the messages were. He'd seen the copies of them that they keep in the telegraph office."

"No; I don't think anything of the sort. I know what it was, and you know what it was," and at that she turned around and pushed me gently down among the pillows.

"What was it?" I whispered, more than half afraid that I was going to hear a continuation of my own breath-taking conviction. And I heard it, all right.

"It was what I was telling you about, that same evening, you remember—down in the hall when you brought the flowers for Cousin Sheila. You told him what I told you, didn't you?"

"No; I didn't have a chance—not any real chance."

"Then somebody else told him, Jimmie; and that is the reason he has resigned and gone away. Mr. Van Brit thinks it was on account of the two messages from Mr. Chadwick and Mr. Dunton, and that is why he wants to talk to you about it. But you know, and I know, Jimmie, dear; and for Cousin Sheila's sake and Mr. Norcross's, we must never slip it to a human soul. A new general manager has been appointed, and he is on his way out here from New York. Everything has gone to pieces on the railroad, and all of Mr. Norcross's friends are getting ready to resign. Isn't it perfectly heart-breaking?"

It was; it was so heart-breaking that I just gasped once or twice and went off the books again with Maizie Ann's frightened little shriek ringing in my ears as she tried to hold me back from slipping over the edge.

We wish to call the readers' attention to the art display in the show windows of the Lewis Brothers store. If you have not already seen it be sure that you do before it is moved. This is samples of the art work that the class of juveniles under the direction of Mrs. T. R. Prudeaux are turning out, and it does not seem to the editor that it has been but a few short weeks since Mrs. Prudeaux began instructing these little men and women toward art are so situated that they have a good art teacher in their midst.

The editor and wife received invitation to attend the graduating exercises of the Magdalena, (N. M.) High School through the courtesy of our little friend—no, we don't expect that she is so very little now, but was when we last saw her—Miss Bessie Maree (Dall) Snodgrass, the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Will Snodgrass, former citizens of old Terry, she being one of the sweet girl graduates. This was indeed a surprise, but good to be remembered by the "little girl" that used to make our home week visits and merry with childish prattle. It does not seem at all true that she can be graduating.

MEADOW BRIEFS

By J. D. Moorehead.

Our city is just now cleaning up, having ignored the proclamation of the governor some time since. The cat-claw and mesquite are being removed from the townsite. Old cans, waste paper and boxes are being burned and when completed will add much to the cleanly appearance of the city.

Visitors from other sections of the State are quite numerous. T. E. Longy and family, of Hollis, Oklahoma, and Byck Howard and wife of Petersburg, Texas, visited at the home of J. A. Longley the past week. L. Y. Dabney, wife and little son; E. E. Dabney, wife and daughter, all of De Leon, Texas, are visiting at the home of E. H. Jones and Willis White.

W. R. Carruth and wife and son, with the two Miss Nettles, of Stephenville, Texas, are also in our midst. However, we could hardly call Dick a visitor, as he owns a ranch nearby and has relly come home.

J. J. Nettles has moved into his new home, and Sunday there was a reunion; that is, the boys all came in to get a square meal. There is quite a number of them. After counting some eight or ten of them, we gave up.

There was a reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Keese, Wednesday the 25th, in honor of the arrival of their youngest son. He is apparently well pleased with the country and will perhaps remain permanently.

There was singing at the school house Sunday evening, and an enjoyable time had by all.

SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT FOR SEMINOLE

G. L. Farrar, who for the past two terms has been superintendent of the Brownfield Public School, was here the later part of last week and has been secured to superintend the Seminole school for the coming term.

Mr. Farrar expects to move his family here as soon as he can secure a residence.

TOKIO TALKINGS

By Grasshopper.

Quite a crowd of the Tokio people attended the Fifth Sunday Singing at Union.

Mr. Homer Johnson and Miss Cecil Lewis, drove over to Brownfield last Thursday and were married. Rev. Rutledge officiating. Mr. Johnson is a prominent farmer of this place, the son of Mrs. S. Johnson of Grassland. Mrs. Johnson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis of this community, and has many friends and well wishers.

Mr. Bob Loevlace and family, and nephews, Weaver and Eldon, are visiting Norman Lovelace and family, this week.

Mr. Scudday got his windmill torn up Saturday. He is having it repaired this week.

Mrs. Mangum and children visited her daughter, Mrs. Ed Spear, Thursday.

Mr. John Scudday, Sr., returned Sunday from Dallas. He reports this country in better shape than any he has seen.

Floyd Rutledge and wife moved on the former place last week. Welcome.

PIONEER EDITOR DEAD

The funeral of Colonel Charles W. Geers, veteran editor and founder of the old Denton Monitor, was held Friday afternoon at the First Christian Church, Denton. Burial followed at the I. O. O. F. cemetery. He was 81 years old and widely known thru the State. He had been a candidate for several Texas state offices. Col. Geers was found dead in his office of the Mill Creek, (Okla.) Herald, of which he had been publisher for six years. He was born in Lexington, Ky., served in Morgan's cavalry during the Civil war and was active in U. C. V. work. He was a pioneer editor in Denton where he was editor and proprietor of the Monitor forty years. At the time of his death he was proprietor and editor of the Mill Creek Herald. He is survived by two sons and six daughters—Lewisville Enterprise.

Col. Geers was the father of Mrs. J. W. Peeler, of Meadow, this county.

BALL GAMES

Since the last report Brownfield has lost two games and another was called with the opposing team in the lead. In fact, Brownfield has just one victory over Meadow to its credit this year, but the boys got organized and started practicing late, and in the season. They are already showing better speed and less errors as time goes on, and we hope with the proper encouragement to have a good ball team yet. However, baseball is just a game after all, and there is no disgrace in defeat with a true sportsman.

The boys went to O'Donnell the early part of last week and were defeated by a narrow margin. Littlefield came here Wednesday and put it over the locals by a score of 6 to 7. And in a game here Friday between the home team and Tahoka, the game was called before it was finished on account of a squabble between the home boys and the Tahoka umpire over a home run, the local boys contending that the hit scored by Ervin Clambo was a fair ball and the umpire claiming it a foul. We are sorry that any misunderstanding like this should come up on the home diamonds.

WESTERN POSTMASTERS INSULTED

The postoffice staff of Silver City has been insulted, from Col. Brumback down to the postoffice department in Washington. They would probably all have tendered their resignation, but fortunately cooler counsel prevailed. The idea of offering real westerners automatic pistols to stop mail bandits. Any man who has carried a long 44 for the most of his life and can hit a gnat's eyeball at 500 feet, can't be persuaded that an automatic is needed anywhere, much less to stand off mail robbers.—Fort Sumner (N.M.)
