A GREAT SINGING CONVENTION—PROBABLY 2000 HERE

They came from every neck of the woods last Sunday to be the guests of Brownfield for the day. They were here from old Games, Youkum, Cochran, Hackley, Lubbock, Lynn and Dawson; all the good singers and many of the hearers, for they knew that Brownfield and Terry has a long standing reputation for entertaining her guests. They came from many and various counties and on to enjoy the day with us, and had a put over one of the best singing programs ever pulled off on the plains.

The ball opened Saturday afternoon when a nice little crowd gathered at the tabernacle and sang awhile. The dose was repeated with even more vim Saturday night.

After the Sunday Schools, in which many of the out of town guests joined, were over, all repaired to the big tabernacle, where hundreds were already waiting. After the welcome address by John S. Powell and the response by Mr. Couchman, the singing opened in earnest, and went merrily on till noon. And then dinner was spread under the dense courthouse park.

An such another dinner. But we never love to brag of our own affairs yet we ask you to ask anyone—they will all tell the same thing about this one. It seemed that every family in Terry county tried to see who could bring the largest basket. The mothers and daughters of old Terry are the proudest folks in the world—they have never made a flash on feeding a crowd, and if the men will only put the food in the pantry, it will be on the table and don't you forget it. If there is anything they hate to see, it is a hungry human, and they don't look hungry long after arriving in old Terry. Many remarked that they could not tell which was the best singing or the dinner, and it was a proposition.

After dinner, a program was arranged so that all the leaders could lead a few songs, and all did well, apparently, including Dr. Castleberry.

Some new officials were added, including Mrs. Castleberry as pianist and W. M. Parks, director. A hog contest was then waged between Gomez and Meadow for the next convention. Gomez winning, and the convention will be held there the 3rd Sunday in January.

To say the least, it was a great and glorious affair and everyone seemed to have a big time.

For State officers salary raise, 20 against 102.
For abolishing prison commission, 52 against 81.
For increased mileage and per diem for legislators, 12 against 113.

For excluding foreign vote and change in poll tax payments, 91 and against 42.
A very light vote polled.

WHAT ABOUT THE TABERNACLE FOLKS

There has been much discussion of late and on turning over the tabernacle to tourists for camping purposes, and we find the church-going people bitterly opposing it and the other element for it.

This is a subject for level headed discussion, and no words should be said on either side that might later be regretted. We believe that the vast majority will agree with the Herald when we state that the original idea was never to make camping grounds out of it, but a place where crowds of Brownfield and Terry could meet for religious purposes, social, political speaking, concerts, fairs, charactras and other moral and educational purposes, and it was so discussed as will be shown by the minutes of the first meeting of the citizens in the courthouse yard when funds were first solicited for the tabernacle. A board of trustees was also elected to take care of the property and to enforce these rules, and until these rules are changed, no legal camping can be carried on the tabernacle grounds any more than private stores, residences, churches or school buildings.

There are not many who do not believe that some place should be provided for campers, both auto and wagon folks, as no discrimination should be made, and while we are at it, let rooms be provided for those who has to come in by train. He too, is a tourist. But some say the auto tourists will knock the town if we do not provide these things and we will also probably knock as because we cannot furnish wood, electricity and an extra blanket cold nights.

New list of folks, let put our pet arguments aside and reason. He who will also probably knock as because we cannot furnish wood, electricity and an extra blanket cold nights.

Now list of folks, let put our pet arguments aside and reason. He who will also probably knock as because we cannot furnish wood, electricity and an extra blanket cold nights.

TERRY COUNTY BOYS LEAVE FOR TRAINING CAMP

When the United States entered the world war, it had few men capable of training the thousands of raw material that had to be finished before we could even think of giving Germany the thrashing she had needed for several decades. Therefore, the first thing to be done was to establish several officers' training camps in various parts of the country. As a consequence, Terry county never did have more than a petty officer, though no braver boys ever followed the flag. We hope never to have another war, but if we do, there will be a different story to write of Terry County's part in the conflict. It will have some commissioned officers, ready to train the army under their command.

The beginning of this ambition was realized last Saturday when three of our boys left for Camp Logan, near Denver, Col. They were Theo. Warr, son of J. T. Warr, and Andrew and Richard Castleberry, sons of Dr. H. A. Castleberry. These boys had determined that they would be represented in the next conflict with some trained material, capable of directing and leading raw recruits into another fighting machine such as we had in Nov. 1918.

ODD FELLOWS TO WORK THE CEMETERY.
The local lodge of Odd Fellows in their last meeting decided that it is time that the last resting places of our sacred dead be given some attention, and they have set apart the 11th Monday in this month, that being the 11 day for that purpose.

Now they not only want their own cemetery cleaned up, but they ask the public in general who are interested in dead all should be—come on that day, bring tools to work with and a basket of lunch, and dinner will be served on the ground at noon.
Don't forget the date Monday, Aug. 15th.

MARRIED
Mr. Raymond Simms and Mrs. Mahala Hunter, of the Gomez community, were married last Sunday night after services, Rev. J. W. Baughman officiating.

Raymond is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Simms, of Gomez, a farmer, and is one of the most moral young men in the county, and has successfully taught school for the past few years. Mrs. Hunter is the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Hunter, and there is no better or sweeter young lady in the county. She worked on the Herald for a number of years and we ought to know her.
Congratulations.

MEADOW BRIEFS

By Aesculapius

Your correspondent pleads not guilty to the charge of being asleep, and thereby missing the paper of last week. It was mailed promptly, Tuesday, and must have gotten lost in the spacious mail bag, and made the journey two or three times between this place and Brownfield.

A pleasant shower Sunday afternoon gladdened our hearts and increased our hopes for the future. Our people laid out their first cemetery a few days since. Our enterprising and philanthropic townsman, O. W. Watkins, donated the ground. The wife's child of Sam Branch, who was killed by a fall from a windmill tower, an extended tour through West Texas. Arrangements have been made whereby farmers can secure through their local communities in co-operation with the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, hogs or dairy cattle in carload lots at very low prices.

The purpose of the campaign is to encourage diversified farming in West Texas and to show the farmer not only the need of dairying but the profit there is in combining these three branches of farming.

Last year over thirty car loads of hogs were handled in this way for West Texas farmers, and from the interest that is being manifested in dairying, this year's campaign should greatly exceed all others in the increasing of live stock farming in this part of Texas.

There are rumors of another dwelling in the near future.
The singing school goes merrily on.

MUSICAL CONCERT

Box Supper, at Union School Building on Sat. Eve. Aug. 13, 1921. Program consists of several comic and sentimental songs.

Box supper at the close. All ladies who bring boxes admitted free. All who buy boxes will have their admittance fee returned. Everybody come and enjoy the great feast of song and good eats.

Admission fee 25c for adults and 15c for children.

J. H. Cleland, the optometrist will be here the 8th of August for the purpose of testing eyes and fixing frames. All work guaranteed to give satisfaction.

The Herald man was surprised and pleased last week to see a cousin for the first time, who was nearly 45 years old. He and family had been visiting his eldest son and wife out at El Paso, and on their return had somehow remembered they had a kinsman in Brownfield, and looked us up. Cris Howell and family live in Johnson county, and he is helping to build the $4,000,000 roads in that Co. He has been a dirt and railroad contractor ever since a young man, and has built both kinds all over the United States.

Meas. Jack Blankenship, Lewellyn and two other citizens of Youkum county, were in Tuesday.

ANNUAL LIVE STOCK CAMPAIGN IN WEST TEXAS

Plans for the annual live stock campaign in West Texas, by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, has been completed and include an increase in the activities of the organization in that dairy cattle and poultry as well as hogs. J. W. Ridgeway, Chairman of the Committee, and formerly head of the Dairy Department at the A. & M. College, C. C. French, of the Fort Worth Stockyards Company and a poultry expert from the A. & M. will handle these three departments in an extended tour through West Texas. Arrangements have been made whereby farmers can secure through their local communities in co-operation with the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, hogs or dairy cattle in carload lots at very low prices.

The purpose of the campaign is to encourage diversified farming in West Texas and to show the farmer not only the need of dairying but the profit there is in combining these three branches of farming.

LEGION MEMBERS TO TRAVEL IN STOCK CARS

Dallas, July 19th.—The delegates from John W. Low post of the American Legion at Dallas, are planning to make the next train to the convention to be held in El Paso in stock cars. Royall B. Watkins, the Post Commander at Dallas is now working with the railroads to this end. Mr. Watkins said today: "It will be just like a railroad trip in France some three years ago, only the cars will be a bit bigger, and we hope the train somewhat faster."

Along the way there will be Red Cross canteens and Salvation Army workers. We will ask the Legion Posts at the principal stops to properly label the "drinking water" that is safe for American troops. We will also ask them to dress the Red Cross workers in French costume and assemble them on the platform to shout "Vive les soldats Americains."

It may be possible for us to pick up other delegates from other Posts on the route to the convention.

Of course the cars will bear the familiar labels, "30 hommes, 8 chevaux," so every doughboy will know what we are and where we are going, and we will likely eat at most every stop, we at least will want to do this, and sincerely hope that arrangements will be made to carry out this the most important feature of the trip.

Meas. Jack Blankenship, Lewellyn and two other citizens of Youkum county, were in Tuesday.

HAVE YOU EVER FIGURED IT OUT THIS WAY?

The danger of buying goods away from home is more than the fact that they are not always as represented; there's sure to be a long delay, and possible dissatisfaction when the goods actually arrive. And, besides, your own home merchant can make you a better price on anything you buy than you can obtain elsewhere.

We note that our governor has at last taken the K. K. by the horns. Now the inevitable government better watch the visible government or something serious may happen.

Neighbor Seagraves is to start a good chautauqua, beginning Aug. 25. This is a very progressive step for that little city, and their people are sought to patronize it in order both to help them and to get some good out of the chautauqua.

We are pleased to note that the Lynn County News is installing a new cylinder press. Editor Haynes is giving the people of Tahoka and Lynn county the only real newspaper they ever had, and they in turn are showing their appreciation by increasing patronage.

The slow moving postoffice department has at last consented to let the Lynn County News go by the same name as the town, "Seagraves." The fact that they were different, though the same, has bothered, not only the people who lived there, but the general public as well.

A rate cutting drummer representing a medicine company was with us this week again and offered the Herald a nice line of advertising at just about half price, and claimed that he had landed contracts with many of the neighboring papers at these rates. When the Herald has any concessions, the home man will get them before anybody else.

Peoria, Illinois was probably the biggest distillery town in the United States, having had 13 distilleries and 3 breweries. Many were the solemn predictions that prohibition would ruin the town and throw thousands out of employment. But these plants are all running full time manufacturing something good and wholesome for mankind and the banks had increased clearing of $20,000,000 under prohibition, despite the financial conditions of the country. Prohibition has never killed anything but drunkenness, poverty and debauchery.

J. W. Hatton and family, of Lubbock were here Sunday for the singing convention and—DINNER.
The Cicero-Smith Lumber Co. are making some nice improvements in front of their yard by building curbs and crossing of concrete. Yes, they are ready for the paving.
T. A. Nowell says that advertising does pay, for he is getting work that he knows has come direct from his ads in the Herald.
The Brick Garage is specializing in Goodrich tire advertising for awhile. They are also doing some fine work in retopping cars.
Alvin Hicks left Saturday for his old home in Knox county. Alvin and family came here about a year ago with the hopes that the higher altitude would benefit his wife, but he is having to carry her to the sanatorium at Carshad, Texas. His father is here looking after his property interests and visiting L. K. Pounds and family.
Dr. W. H. Copeland was here from Lubbock this week visiting and having some dental work done.
John Hall made a trip to Big Spring Sunday, returning Tuesday. Otho Welch, barber of that city accompanied him home to visit his mother, Mrs. J. W. Welch and family.

CHAPTER I—Gram Norcross, railroad manager, and his secretary, Jimmie Dodds, were in the office at Brownfield, Texas, on a Monday morning. The office was a small one, but it was a special car carried off.

CHAPTER II—Norcross recognizes the car stolen as John Chadwick's, financial manager, when he was to make a trip to the city. He and Dodds rescue Chadwick. The latter dodges Dodds, leaving the ship of the Pioneer Short Line, which is in the hands of eastern speculators headed by Jeremiah Dutton, president of the line. Norcross, learning that Sheila Marrae is stopping at Hotel City, accepts it.

CHAPTER III—Dodds overhears conversation between Hatcher and Governor Henckel, Brownfield, Texas, in which they admit complicity in Chadwick's disappearance. Dodds learns that Chadwick had attended a meeting of speculators to organize the Pioneer Short Line, which would jeopardize their interests.

CHAPTER IV—To curb the monopoly controlled by Hatcher and Henckel, the Red Tower corporation, Brownfield, Texas, organizes the Citizens Storage and Warehouse company. Its object is to make the Red Tower a public utility. Dodds learns from her husband, Norcross, that he has been kidnapped and is believed to have resigned and gone east.

CHAPTER V—Hatch, aware that Dodds has knowledge of his kidnapping, offers him inducements to leave the office. He is knocked senseless. Recovering and escaping, Dodds learns that Norcross has disappeared and is believed to have resigned and gone east.

CHAPTER X—At the home of Sheila Marrae, Dodds is witness to the strange actions of a man he believes has dealings on the line of his friend and boss. He resolves to defend him.

CHAPTER XI—The sudden return of Sheila's uncle drives the intruder away. Later Dodds recognizes him as Howard Collingwood, nephew of Jeremiah Dutton of the Pioneer Short Line. A series of scenes on the line follow, which explain, cause alarm to the management.

CHAPTER XII—Durgin, night dispatcher, routes passenger and freight trains to meet on a Sunday. Durgin is narrowly averted. Durgin commits suicide, leaving evidence that he was bribed to bring about collision.

CHAPTER XIII—Evidence accumulates that Norcross' enemies are plotting his death, but against all advice he decides on a trip on a special train over the line. A pilot engine, traveling ahead, discovers a deranged rail worker who has hidden the special down a mountain side. Norcross leaves for the district where his wife is married. He refuses to believe it.

CHAPTER XIV
The Dead-Line
We found the three disappointed afternoon callers already on hand when we reached the headquarters. The boss said, "Good evening, gentlemen," as pleasant as a basket of chips, and invited the waiting bunch into the private office, snapping on the lights as he opened the door.

No introductions were needed. One of the pair Hatch had brought with him was a lawyer named Marrow, whose home town was Seelick; a sharp-nosed, ferret-eyed man who figured as one of the many "local counsel" for Red Tower. The other, Dedmon, was a political place-hunter who had once been sheriff of Arrowhead county.

"You've kept us cooling our heels in your waiting-room for just about the last time, Mr. Norcross," was the spiteful way in which Hatch opened fire. "We've come to talk straight business with you this trip, and it will be more to your interest than ours if you'll send your clerk away."

While they had been dragging up their chairs and sitting down, I had heard Fred May lock up his typewriter and go, and had been listening anxiously for some noise that would tell me Terrell was on deck. I thought I heard the door of the outer office open again just as Hatch spoke and it comforted me a whole lot.

The boss didn't pay any attention to Hatch's suggestion about sending me away; acted as if he hadn't heard it. Opening his desk he took a box of cigars from a drawer and passed it. With this concession to the small hospitalities the boss swung his chair to face the trio.

"My time is yours, gentlemen," he said.

Do you know you can roll 50 good cigarettes from one bag of you can't gamble any more with your stock. Well and good. You came here six months ago and set out to manufacture public sentiment in favor of the railroad. You ran up your public-be-pleased flag and beat the tom-tom and blew the hegwag until you got a lot of dots and chuckle-heads and easy marks to believe that you really meant it."

GENUINE "BULL" DURHAM TOBACCO

GENUINE "BULL" DURHAM TOBACCO

"Well, go on."

"With all this humbug and hulla-balloo you still couldn't be quite certain that you had made your point; that your measures would carry through the incoming legislature. After the primaries you counted noses among the candidates and found it was going to be a tight squeak—a d-tight squeak. Then you did what you railroad people always do; you slipped out quietly and bought a few men—just to be on the safe side."

So it was sprung at last. Hatch was accusing us of the one thing that we hadn't done; that the boss knew we hadn't done.

"I'm afraid you'll have to try again, Mr. Hatch," he said, with a sour little smile. Then he added: "Anybody can make charges, you know."

Hatch jumped at his feet and he was almost foaming at the mouth.

"Right there is where we've got you, Mr. Hatch," he said, "You want to put one of your own men in the field, so you sent outside for your brother. He was a stranger, and he had to have help in finding the right man to buy. Dedmon, here, was our man—thanks to you and your meddling—and the meddling state offered good pay. Do you want any more?"

The boss shook his head.

"It is a matter of complete indifference to me. I don't know in the least what you are talking about, and you'll pardon me, I hope, if I say that it doesn't greatly interest me."

"By heavens—I'll make it interest you. The easy-mark candidates were found and bought and paid for—and made the thing a done deal, and they won't. But that isn't the way. For a little more money—my money, this time—each of these men has made an affidavit to the fact that railroad money was offered him. They don't say whether or not they accepted it, mind you, and that doesn't count any figure. They have sworn that the money was tendered. That lets them out and lets you in. You don't believe it? I'll show you."

Hatch whipped a list of names from his pocket and slipped it upon the boss' desk. "Go to those men and ask them; if you want to carry it that far. They'll tell you."

I could see that the boss barely glanced at the list. The gift story of the bribery was like the bite of a slipping crane-kid—slow to take hold. So far as we were concerned, of course, the charge fell flat; and upon any other hypothesis it was blankly incredible, unbelievable absurd.

The affidavits themselves would be much more convincing. I heard the boss say, "though even then I should wish to have reasonable proof that they were genuine."

Hatch was sitting down again and his grin showed his teeth unpleasantly.

"Do you think for a minute that I'd bring the papers here and trust them in your hands?" he rapped out insultingly. "Not much! But we've got them all right, as you'll find out if you balk and force us to use them."

At this point I could see that something in the persistent assurance of the man was getting under the boss' skin and giving him a cold chill. What if it were not the colossal bluff it had looked like in the beginning? What if . . . Like a blaze of lightning out of a clear sky a possible explanation lit me under the fifth rib, and I guess it hit the boss at about the same instant. What if President Dutton and the New York stock-jobbers, hollering as they did that nothing but legislative favor would give them their trading capital in the depressed stock, had cut in and done this thing without consulting us?

The boss stared uneasily in his chair and picked up the paper-knife—a little unconscious trick of his when he wanted time to gather himself.

"Perhaps you would be willing to give me the name of this briber, Mr. Hatch," he said, after a little pause. "As if you didn't know it?" was the scoffing retort. "There were two of them; one who was hired to do the talking while the real wire-puller stood aside and held the coin bag. We'll skip the hired man. Then he turned to the ex-sheriff. "Write out the name of the bag-holder for him, Dedmon," he commanded, tearing a leaf from his pocket notebook and thrusting it, with a stubby pencil, into Dedmon's hands.

The man from Arrowhead county bent over his knee and wrote a name on the slip of paper, laying the slip on the drawn-out side of the boss' desk when he had finished the slow pencil. The effect of the thing was all that any plotter could have desired. I saw the boss' face go gray, saw him stare at the slip and heard him say, half to himself, "Howard Collingwood!"

Hatch followed up his advantage promptly. He was afoot and straggling into his overcoat when he said: "You've got what you were after, Norcross, and it has got your goat. We've known all along that you were only bluffing and sparring to gain time. We've nailed you to the cross. You let this deal with Marshall and his people stand as it's made, or we'll show you up for what you are. That's the plain English of it."

"You mean that you will go to the newspapers with this?" said the boss and it was no wonder that his voice was a bit husky.

"Just that. We'll give you plenty of time to think it over. The point deal with C. S. & W. goes into effect tomorrow, and it's up to you to sit tight in the boat and let us alone. If you don't—if you butt in with the ground-leaves or in any other way—the story will go to the newspapers and every sucker on the line of the P. & L. will know how you've been pulling the wool over his eyes with all this guff about 'justice first' and the public be pleased." You're no fool, Norcross. You know they won't lay it to Dutton and the New Yorkers. You've taken pains to advertise it far and wide that you are running this railroad on your own responsibility, and the people are going to take you at your word."

Dedmon, and the lawyer—who hadn't spoken a single word in all the talk—were edging toward the door. The boss didn't make any answer to Hatch's wind-up except to say, "Is that all?"

The other two were out, now, and Hatch turned to stick his ugly jaw out at the boss, and to say, just as if it hadn't been there to look on and hear him:

"No, by Jupiter—it isn't all! In the past six months you've made Gus Henckel and me lose a cold half-million, Norcross. For a less provocation than that, many a man in this neck of woods has been sent back east in the baggage-car, wearing a wooden overcoat. You climb down, and do it while you can stay alive!"

For some time after the three men went away the boss sat staring at the slip of paper on the desk aside. At last he got up, sort of tiredlike, I thought, and said to me: "Jimmie, you go down and see if you can find a taxi, and we'll drive out to Major Kendrick's. I promised him I'd go out to the house, you remember?"

When our taxi stopped at the major's gate, somebody was coming out just as we were getting ready to go in. The man had the visor of his big flat golf cap pulled down well over his eyes, but I knew him just the same. It was Collingwood!

This looked like more trouble. What was the president's nephew doing here? I wondered about that, and also, if the boss had recognized Collingwood. If he had, he made no sign, and a moment later I had pushed the bell-push and Malsie Ann was opening the door for us.

"Both of you? oh, how nice!" she said, with a smile for the boss and a queer little grimace for me. "Come in. This is our evening for callers. Cousin Basil is out, but he'll be back pretty soon, and he left word for you to wait if you got here before he did."

That message was for the boss, and I lagged behind in the dimly lighted hall while she was showing him into the back parlor. I had dropped down on the hall settee, in the end of it next to the coat-rack, and when Mrs. Sheila came down-stairs and went through the hall, she didn't see me. A second later I heard the boss jump up and say, "At last! It comes as if you had been gone a year rather than a fortnight," and then Malsie Ann came dodging out and glanced herself down on the settee beside me.

You needn't tell me that we had no right to sit there listening; I need it well enough. On the other hand, I was just shirky enough to shift the responsibility to Malsie Ann. She didn't make any move to shut, so I didn't.

"You came out to see Cousin Basil?" Mrs. Sheila was saying to the boss, and then: "He had a telephone call from the Bullard, and he asked me to tell you to wait." After that, I guess she sat down to help him wait, for pretty soon we heard her tell Cousin Basil has told me that I had pushed the bell-push and Malsie Ann was opening the door for us.

gravelly, and from that he went on to tell her about the Hatch visit and what had come of it; how the grafters had a new claw hook on him, now made possible by an unwarrantable piece of meddling on the part of the New York people in the political game.

It was while he was talking about this that Maude Ann grabbed me by the wrist and dragged me bodily into the darkened door parlor, the door to which was just on the other side of the coat rack. I thought she had come to her right senses, at last, and was making the shift to break off the conversation. That being the case I was doubly surprised when I found that she was merely trying to see that we could both see and hear. The sliding doors between the two parlors were cracked open about an inch, and I realized what she was doing when she had pulled the door on the floor beside her, right in front of that crack.

"If you move or make a noise, I'll scream and they'll come in here and find us both," she hissed in my ear, and because I didn't know what else to do with such a childish little terrapin, I sat still. It was darkly, I know, but what she was doing I saw. When the door should be telling her about the Hatch visit, Mrs. Sheila said: "You mean that Mr. Denton and his associates want somebody out here to influence the election?"

"Yes, that is it precisely. But how did you know?"

"You made the inference perfectly plain," she countered. "I have a reasoning mind, Graham; haven't you discovered it before this?"

"The boss dodged soberly. 'I have discovered a good many things about you during the past six months; one of them is that there was never another woman like you since the world began.'"

Knowing, as I did, that she had a husband alive and kicking around somewhere, it seemed as if I just couldn't stay there and listen to what a break of that kind on the boss' part was likely to lead up to. But Maude Ann gripped my wrist until she hurt.

"You must listen," she hissed in my ear. "You're taking care of him, and you've got to know."

As on many other earlier occasions, Mrs. Sheila slid away from the sentimental side of things just as easy as turning your hand over.

"You are the big man to be adored; don't you forget it now," she remarked calmly, going back to the business side. "You are really making a tremendous success. I have just spent two weeks in the capital, as you know and everybody is talking about you. They say you are in a fair way to solve the big problem—the problem of bridging the railroads and the people together in a penance and profitable partnership—which is as it should be."

"It can be done; and I would do it right here on the Pioneer Short Line if I didn't have to fight so many different kinds of devils at the same time," she said, leaning down at the fire in the grate. And then with a quiet jerk of his head to face her: "You sent the major a wire from the capital last night, telling him to persuade me not to go to Strasbourg. Why did you do it? And how did you know I was thinking of going?"

"For the first time in the whole six months I saw Mrs. Sheila get a little flustered, though she didn't show it much only a little more color in her cheeks.

"Some day, perhaps, I may tell you, but I can't now," she said sort of hurriedly. And then: "You mustn't ask me."

"But you did send the wire?"

"Yes."

"And you also sent another to Optus Van Britton?"

"I did."

Rival Colors.

If you feel that you are experiencing hard times, think of the woman who recently completed a comfortable rose cottage on the seashore, when the sea and waves washed up a dead whale in front of his house, and now he's decided that it will be cheaper to move the cottage than the whale—Boston Transcript.

First Use of Water Colors.

Water colors were first known in Europe until the eighteenth century, and they were used only as a vehicle in art. French painters were a natural outgrowth of their use. Water colors were employed by the artists in decorating many famous buildings. They took the place of oil colors.

Paradox.

Mathewson surprised his friends at the club one evening by rising to leave much earlier than usual. "Why this haste?" said one of his friends. "The night is still young." "I know," replied Mathewson; "but I promised my wife to be home by ten-thirty tonight and if I miss the last train I shall catch it."

Was San Made President.

Mrs. Ellen Garfield was the first woman who ever saw her son inaugurated president of the United States. Washington's mother was living in Fredericktown, Va., when the father of his country was inaugurated, but she did not witness the ceremony, which took place in New York.

COTTON PRICES SHOW GREAT RANGE IN QUARTER CENTURY

The price of cotton, recovered by farmers, has varied more widely since the end of the long period of very low prices about 25 years ago. The low price of December 1 in the records of the Bureau of Markets and Crop Estimates, United States Department of Agriculture, is 40 cents per pound for lint in 1894, and it was as low as 37 cents in 1895. The year of 1902 was notable in cotton price history, because the price rose to 85 cents, and remained substantially at this higher level, or above, for the first year of the World War, 1914, notwithstanding the "see-saw" of the cotton price of December 1, was 68 cents, but it rose to 83 cents the next year, to 86 in 1916, to 27 cents in 1917, and to 24 in 1918. The drop to 24 cents per pound in 1918, or a fall of 61 per cent in one year, cost the producers to the quick.

HOVILLE

By Duke Berts.

The words have gotten so high above the partridge that the Mall carrier had a good bit of trouble in getting it. Hank Potts says when he and his wife were married, she being very young, he endeavored to get her started off on the right track. He advised her to get an idea and stick to it and she would succeed. Right off the bat she got the idea she was a fool and stuck to it.

High brothers this week painted the front of his store with a new coat of various green paint. He put the usual "Fresh Paint" sign up, but so few people in Hoville can read that he kept most of the paint had been carried away on the backs of the attendants. This you ever notice that you are well educated, well regulated, communication these "fresh paint" signs are not noticed by more than one out of a hundred. It is well enough however, to continue to put them up where painting is being done so that each person is worth saving.

There are again many candidates

WORK THE ONLY CURE

After dictating for the Allies' most favorable terms, and receiving their final ultimatum, Germany has gone to work. By thrift and economy in operation, and keeping busy all the time, Germany is already giving evidence of her ability to recover her commercial and industrial supremacy. Germany is no longer bothering about political difficulties of her late enemies. Everybody is working, including father in the meantime. France, England and Italy are back in the old game of politics. Germany is expressing much concern about the political difficulties of her late enemies, while at the same time they fear that some other nation will get the advantage of them in the final adjustment of boundary lines or through the negotiation of commercial treaties. Hundreds of thousands of men or out of work because employer and employees can not come to an understanding regarding wages and working conditions. The world is more or less of a turmoil. It will remain in this condition until the people of various nations cease their efforts to win political victories and get down to work. Work is the only cure for the troubles of individuals and the only salvation of nations.—Exchange.

Don't stick with the prunes

BY DAD'S favorite man.
WAS THE one about.
THE OLD stomacher.
WHO WAS playing checkers.
IN THE back of the store.
AMONG THE coal of.
AND THE prunes.
WHEN THE sheriff.
WHO HAD just jumped his thing.
SAID "If there's a customer.
WAITIN' OUT' front."
AND he said "So-ho!"
IF YOU'LL keep quiet.
Mebbe he'll go away."
NOW HERE'S the big idea.
WHEN A good thing.
HAPPENS ALONG.
DON'T LEAVE IT TO George.
TO GRAB the gravy.
"PRINCEANCE IF."

YOU HEAR of a smoke.
OR READ about a smoke.
THAT REALLY does more.
THAN PLEASE the taste.
THERE ARE no looks on you.
THERE'S NO LAW against.
YOUR STEPPING UP.
WITH THE other live ones.
IN A loud, clear voice.
"GIMME A pack of.
THOSE CIGARETTES.
THAT SATISFY."

YOU'LL say you never tasted such flavor, such mild but full-bodied tobacco goodness. You're right, too, because they don't make other cigarettes like Chesterfields. The Chesterfield blend can't be copied.
