NECK TIES!

THEY have parties as you well know, in the "way down in Dixie" country when the necktie is a great feature of the frolic. The tie referred to, is, of course not worn VOLUNTARILY, as the colorings and shape are not such as to appeal to the "artistic" in any human—

However, speaking of ties we want to tell you that to our way of thinking the new spring styles that we are now receiving "put it all over" anything we have shown—

If the silk worms have been on a strike you would never know it when you view the nice qualities we are showing in the late Roman stripes, neat checks and plaids in such beautiful combinations of colors—

OLD NEW HAMPSHIRE HOME A GOOD 'UN

The Old New Hampshire Home is the first play put on here by local talent that has been considered as worthy of repetition in a long time, but the crowd on hand Tuesday night showed that many were anxious and willing to pay the price to see it once more at least.

We do not know who had charges of assigning the parts, but they do certainly know human nature, for a professional could hardly have given each the part of their special talent better than the stage manager of this play.

The Herald wishes to congratulate all the actors in this play, not only because they deserve it from a standpoint of art, but from the fact that they have given their time and talent to boosting the funds of the P.T.A.

FEAST OF THE RED CORN

Saturday night April 8th, a good sized crowd had gathered at the high school auditorium to be entertained by the Indian Girls with the play—"Feast of the Red Corn." The audience was not disappointed for the girls put on a play that was in keeping with the excellent entertainments that we have had this season. The stage was arranged in a most beautiful fashion, imitating an American camp, and for one and one-half hours the crowd was entertained with a two act play that was well worth the money.

Every actor, including "Wudgy" "Fudgy" and "Budgy" exemplified talent and careful preparation.

The Queen of the tribe, Theresa Lemmon was strictly the girl for the place, and the old squaw—Margaret Bell—could have hardly been excelled for her quaintness.—Contributed.

KU KLUX KLAN DID NOT PARADE AT LAREDO

The sheriff at Laredo sure knows how to stop the Ku Klux parades, and his plans should be copied by sheriffs of other counties where persons disguise in bed sheets and pillow cases try to show their contempt of the law, or order and decency by public parades. The Laredo sheriff gave warning that an advertised parade through the streets would not be permitted and in order to make sure his warning he placed a machine gun on the court house steps with a former soldier who had used machine guns against Germans in France, in charge; he also armed many citizens with rifles, and they stood guard until midnight, but not a Klansman showed up. A man who disguises himself to do an act is naturally cowardly, and is afraid to face hot lead. The sheriffs of several Panhandle counties would do well to go to Laredo and imitate some of the courage of the Laredo sheriff and maybe they would develop some backbone.—Painview News.

MARRIED

On April 6th, Mr. Frank Turner and Miss Florence Brown were united in the holy bonds of wedlock, Rev. H. H. Bowers, pastor of the Presbyterian church officiating.

Mr. Turner is one of our hustling business men, being proprietor of the Turner Barber Shop.

Mrs. Turner is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Brown, and has a host of friends and well wishers.

The Herald hopes for this young and happy couple a long and happy married life together.

TERRY COUNTY GRAIN CO. SHIPS 57 CARS CORN

K. W. Howell and J. C. Bond, composing the Terry County Grain Co., have purchased the bulk of the corn that has been shipped from this station this season. Mr. Howell dropped in Monday to give an account of the shipments to us.

Last year the bulk of the corn was shipped in the ear, but it has been the reverse of the order this season. The great bulk has been shelled.

This firm alone has shipped approximately 60,000 bushels or in other words exactly 3,369,725 pounds. Most of this corn has gone to Central Texas.

Mr. Howell remarked that the big end of the 1921 corn crop went out of the county on the last of this time on account of the low price. Mr. Roy Bailey, for instance, has fattened and shipped about 25 cars of hogs since Christmas, and has used several thousand bushels of corn, not to say anything about the tens of thousands and bushels used to fatten cattle for the market. For instance one local man, Dick Brownfield, alone used ten thousand bushels of corn in feeding out a pen of steers, not to say anything about many others all over the county.

Owing to the cheapness of the corn market, local bankers helped many to buy cattle to feed their corn to, and instead of 40¢ per bushel, as the price ran most of the season, these feeders got from 60 to 75¢ per bushel for their corn.

SENATOR CULBERSON HITS KU KLUX KLAN

United States Senator Charles A. Culberson writes from Washington, to a friend at Houston, as follows: Washington, March 30, 1922.

Dear Major:—Your recent letter asking my position with reference to the order known as the Ku Klux Klan which is now in operation in our State was duly received and I answer at the earliest opportunity.

I have no affiliation directly or indirectly with this organization, and I am unqualifiedly opposed to its operations. If not curbed, it will usurp the functions of the State and be destructive of government itself. It will indeed overthrow our Anglo-Saxon civilization in its relation to government.

Steps should be taken, therefore, at once to arrest its progress and finally to destroy it.

Appeal cannot be made to Federal Government for this purpose for it is without jurisdiction unless application is made by Texas to the United States in the manner provided by the Constitution for protection against domestic violence, and this is unthinkable.

Fortunately, however, the power of the State is ample, and if no law now exists adequate to the occasion, the Legislature may be called in extra session to supply this deficiency.

Truly your friend,
(Signed) C. A. Culberson

EDITOR SMITH MUSTA LAND-ED ON HIS COCOA

We notice through the press that Bishop Lynch, of the Catholic church has hit the people of Slaton a pretty heavy blow concerning the Rev. Keller. He claims that Keller is an excellent Christian gentleman, and that no Catholic had anything to do with the tar and feather party. He offers $2,500 for the conviction of any party or parties connected with it. Yet the most prominent people of Slaton, is stated by the papers, met in mass and passed these resolutions. Bishop Lynch, it will be remembered, was often quoted by the Antis during the prohibition election. We have no ill feeling for Catholic people; some of the best friends we ever had were Catholics. Mr. Keller's predecessor at Hermleigh, insulted the editor of this paper on a train from Roscoe to Hermleigh, and we didn't call any citizens' meeting to stop it. He never tried it any more.—Lamesa Reporter.

A DEBT OF HONOR

By Paul S. Jackson in the Hedley Informer.

After the Revolutionary War, Geo. Washington fought for adjusted compensation for his veterans, and that at a time when shipbuilders and munition workers did not get from $10 to $15 per day.

He was confronted with the same argument against such compensation that confronts the present Congress, viz: that it was putting a "price on patriotism." In reply, Washington said, "I may be allowed to say that it was the price of their blood and your independence. It was therefore more than a common debt. It is a debt of honor. It can never be considered a pension gratuity, nor can it be canceled until it is fairly discharged."

And yet the big business interests, which form the bulk of the opposition to the adjusted compensation act now under consideration, continue to cry, "a price on patriotism," totally disregarding the fact that during the war the man who made the bullet drew from ten dollars up per day, while the fellow that stopped the bullet got $1. per day and "deep sea son" three times a day.

PROSPERITY

What will bring prosperity to Terry County and put the farmers on top? Large bunch of chickens on the farm. Few good milk cows to sell cream from— Good work mares to raise good colts from—

A fine garden and some good brood sows. Then some corn and cotton. This will put Terry County on TOP.

Herald received the initial number of the Plains Monthly Magazine on Monday of this week, and we wish to say that it is a humdinger, and is well worth the price, $1.00 per year. This magazine more nearly represents the ideals of the South Plains farmer than anything in the way of an agricultural journal that has ever come to our desk, and we hope every farmer and stockman in the county will soon become a reader of it. The first issue contained 48 pages and it was well filled with good things for the farmer and stockman, and was liberally patronized by the Lubbock merchants. AID THE EDITOR

One of the most difficult tasks in a newspaper office is getting the facts relative to deaths, births and marriages of the community. Many people take it for granted that when a person dies the editor is familiar with every detail and his activities, when as a matter of fact, we know nothing about him and have to get our information from other sources. It is the same with regard to marriage and birth in the community. In almost every case the editor has to dig up the particulars as to satisfy himself and readers of the paper with a meagre, inaccurate account. The average editor of a country paper has something like a million and a half things to think about in a week and friends can hardly overestimate how much he will appreciate any effort they may make in furnishing him the facts for news items—Eagle Label Headlight.

CONVERTED

Throughout the nation manufacturers are having serious trouble in keeping their plants running. Up in Oklahoma yesterday, some manufacturers lost their plant. They were making a fancy grade of canned heat, the component parts of which were water, plug tobacco, tobacco sauce, chloral, brown sugar raisins and yeast. One drink of it would cause a man to hurriedly divest himself of clothes to keep from taking fire, while two drinks would convert a Presbyterian to belief in immersion. Unsympathetic federal prohibition sleuths seized the factory and ruthlessly slammed the owners in jail—Ex.

RELIABLE RATTLESNAKE BITE REMEDY

Continued reports of fatalities from snake bites in Texas calls forth protest from D. N. McCrea, the well known old time citizen of Lometa. He says these deaths are entirely unnecessary. After trying a very simple remedy for the past forty-two years in Lompasas county and seeing it bring positive relief out of every one of the forty of fifty cases, Mr. McCrea has every reason to believe the remedy is a positive one. He has seen it tried on persons on cattle, horses and dogs, and it always cured in a very short while. The simplicity of this remedy should appeal to every one. It is: When bitten, eat a piece of alum about the size of an ordinary English pea, and then rub some of the pulverized alum on the wound. That is all there is to it, but is evident that the poison is neutralized some way by the action through the stomach, and it never fails to work.

Mr. McCrea says he has not been without a chunk of alum in his pocket for forty years. He is entirely reliable and this remedy should be given wide publicity—Lometa Reporter.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Occupying a dilapidated shack in the Silent City, squatter settlement near Itasca, New York, Polly Hopkins lives with her father, small Jerry, and an old woman, Granny Hope. On an adjacent farm, Oscar Bennett, prosperous farmer, is a neighbor. He is secretly married to Evelyn Robertson, a wealthy girl of the neighborhood. Polly alone knows their secret. Marcus McKenzie, who owns the ground on which the squatters occupy, is their determined enemy. Polly overtures a conversation between McKenzie and a stranger, in which the former avows his intention of evicting the squatters from his land. The stranger sympathizes with the squatters, and earns Polly's gratitude.

CHAPTER II—Evelyn Robertson discovers from her mother that they are not rich, as she supposed, but practically living on the bounty of Robert Percival, Evelyn's cousin.

CHAPTER III—Polly learns from Evelyn that the sympathetic stranger in Robert Percival's employ is her father, small Jerry. She is really penniless, and is unable to pay her rent. She already bitterly regrets her infatuation with and marriage to the ignorant farmer.

CHAPTER IV—Polly conceals her message, and Oscar makes threats. He insists Evelyn meet him that night. Polly has her father and Larry Bishop, a squatter who has suffered from the enmity of McKenzie, take an oath to do him no injury.

CHAPTER V—Evelyn unsuccessfully tries to get money from her mother with which to buy off Bennett and to leave the country, giving her her freedom. She is really penniless, and is unable to pay her rent. She already bitterly regrets her infatuation with and marriage to the ignorant farmer.

CHAPTER VI—Polly meets Robert Percival, and they are mutually attracted. Polly's feeling being something like a sensation.

CHAPTER VII—Overhearing a conversation between Polly and Robert Percival, Bennett really catches himself in love with Polly, and is anxious to marry her. He asks Polly in what way he can aid her, and she begs him to help the squatters. Percival is rich and influential, though lacking the power of McKenzie, but agrees to do his best. He visits the Hopkins shack with an offer to the squatters, through Hopkins, to leave the vicinity, offering them a large sum of money. The offer is refused and McKenzie threatens to burn their shabby dwellings and leave them homeless.

CHAPTER VIII—Polly visits Percival in the Robertson home in an effort to entice him and to be on the point of declaring his love for her, when the girl, in a nameless fear, McKenzie takes Evelyn to be his wife. The girl agrees to marry him after he has bought the Bennett farm and got rid of the squatters. Robert falls in an effort to secure the aid of Mrs. Robertson and Evelyn in a project to help the Silent City people.

CHAPTER IX—Knowing Bennett's intention for Polly, Evelyn tries to induce the girl to promise marriage, but having agreed to release Evelyn to secure Polly, she is unable to do so. Meeting Robert next day, he tells her he loves her, and she acknowledges a similar feeling for him. McKenzie lays a trap for Hopkins and the latter is arrested.

CHAPTER X—Polly goes to the Robertson home to entreat Percival's aid in freeing her father. McKenzie is angry with her. He is also deaf to Robert's pleadings, and the latter, though assuring Polly of all the help he can give her, fails himself powerless.

Two strides brought him so close that Polly felt his hot breath against her cold face. She cried out in anguish and started to speak; but Evelyn broke in upon her in frantic haste. "Now listen to me, Bob," she insisted. "You are very unkind! What's happened here is none of your business nor mine! Every squatter woman has a man, and you can't expect Polly Hopkins to be an exception. All you can do is to get a doctor."

"All right," He replied gruffly.

Robert passed his hand over his face. He looked dazedly from Pollytop, so silent and pale, to the man so horribly still on the cot.

"All right," he replied gruffly. "Come on! This is no place—" He flung a glance at Polly Hopkins that struck her like a blow from a whip, and finished, "no place for a decent girl."

Stupefied by the flood of disasters that had overwhelmed her, Polly watched Robert Percival lead his cousin from the hut. After the first wild impulse to tell him the truth, she had made no further effort to clear herself.

Evelyn Robertson was going to hold her to the word she had made two years ago? Being innately honest herself, Pollytop could see no way to lighten her own dejection or to still Robert's fierce anger. Her little world was tumbling to pieces around her. No longer could she think of him as her own, though but a few short minutes before he had comforted her with kisses and promises. He had demanded that she should trust him, yet at the very first trial of his faith, he had flung away and left her alone.

Blinded by tears, she felt her way to the cot. Bennett lay in the same position, his wide-open eyes holding an expression of horror.

"She's got a big liver all right, Oscar," Polly hissed through her teeth. "Did you hear all that she said?"

Such is the power of habit over a nature like the squatter girl's that Robert faded from her mind, and Oscar Bennett, suffering and dying, absorbed her whole attention.

"Can't you hear anything, Oscar?" she questioned. "Listen, maybe you'll get well. If you do, take your old mammy an' get out quick. Eye ain't worth one of your toe nails. You've been a mean duffer, Oscar, but you're too—a good for her. God, but she were a wicked woman, wasn't she, huh?"

Not a move of the heavy head on the pillow gave evidence that she had been heard.

She was still standing by Bennett's side when, without knocking, Robert opened the door and came in, followed by the doctor. Polly recognized the stranger instantly as the medical man who lived a short distance down the boulevard. In anxious inquiry she glanced at Percival.

Observing that she had been weeping, his anger flared again. It never occurred to him that his own cruelty had drawn the tears from her eyes. There was the large farmer stretched out on the bed; and the squatter girl crouching beside him; she was moaning over the stricken man; Robert frowned; and helplessly, in silence, Polly moved aside to give the doctor the space she had occupied.

After a hasty examination of the patient, Doctor Bacon turned to Polly Hopkins.

"Something struck him," he said shortly. "You've been quarreling with him, eh, girl? What did you hit him with?"

Accusation rang against her not only in the speaker's tones but in Robert's inarticulate cry.

"Why did you strike him, Polly Hopkins?" he demanded harshly. "Did you?"

"That he should believe such things of her crushed her completely. Her head fell forward, but not until Robert spoke again harshly did she answer.

"None," she breathed. Her tongue felt as if it were covered with ashes. "None, I didn't hit him."

That was all she said. She looked up at him pleadingly through her thick lashes. Perhaps he did not really believe her guilt. Yes, he did! He was still fixing upon her that accusatory gaze.

"He'd better be moved out of this hole," observed the doctor, looking around. "But it's an awful night." He considered a moment and then added: "I'll telephone to Itasca for an ambulance."

Sternly he directed a look of disgust at Polly. He hated attending the squatters anyway, and never would have consented to enter the Silent City if Robert Percival had not come for him.

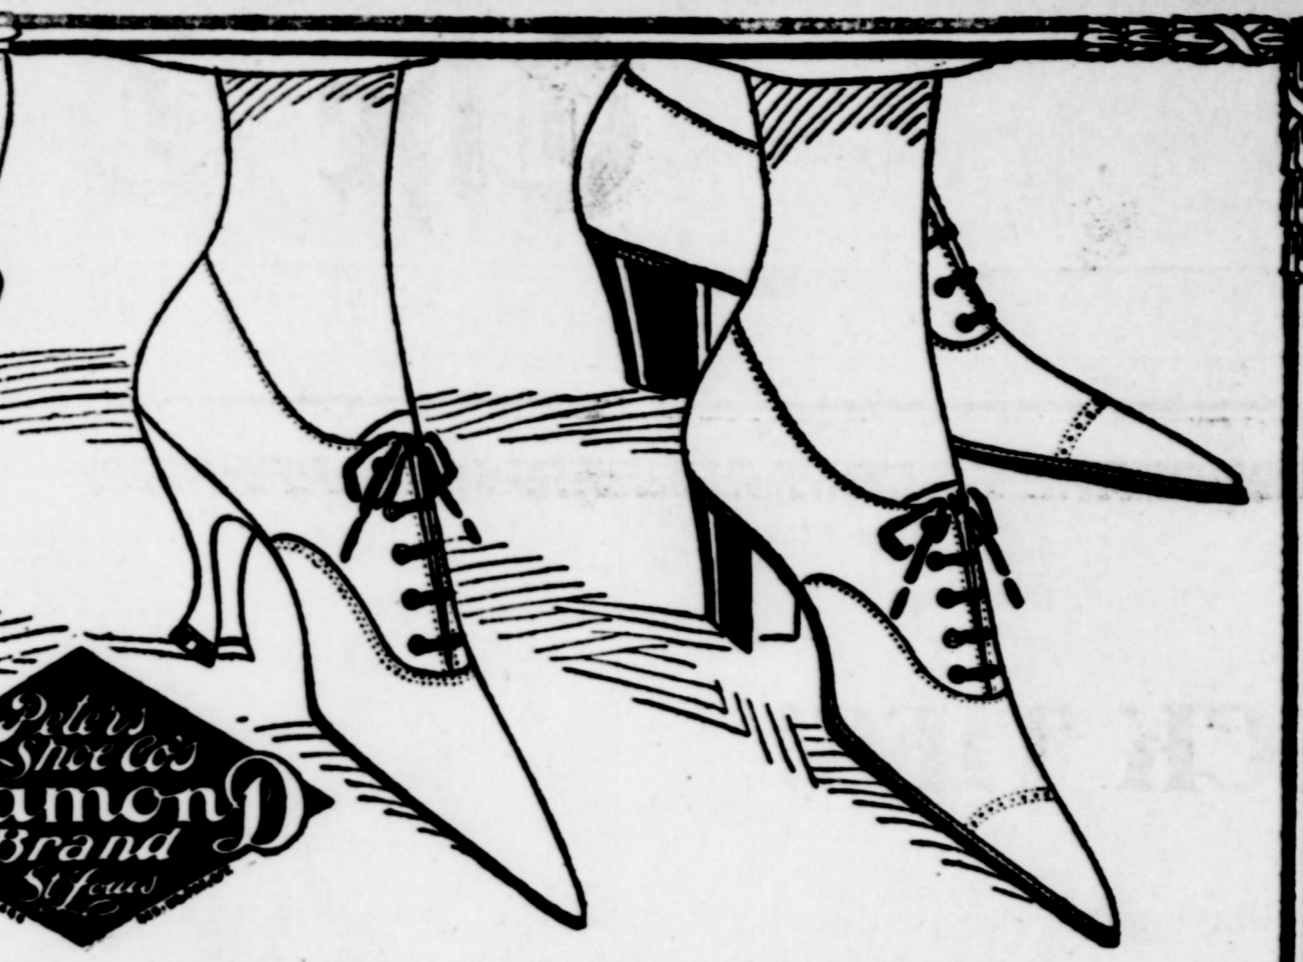

Aghast at the horror of the emergency, Pollytop seemed not to notice the physician's contempt.

"Is he going to die, mister?" she queried plaintively.

"I don't know," he replied in gruff indecision, as he prepared a draught. When everything within human power had been done for Oscar Bennett, Robert allowed the doctor to pass out of the hut before him. Then, like a shot, he turned back to Polly's side. His eyes blazed with jealousy; and quickly it struck her mind that he was going to strike her. Oh! How she wished he would die! How she wished all the cruel words he had hurled at her!

"When you said you loved me, you lied," he gritted savagely. "You knew all the time you had him. You let me kiss you! You said love was the greatest thing in the world!—Oh, God! How I wish I could hate you!"

Polly could not speak, neither could she move. Imprisoned tragically lay in the depths of her eyes. If he had been even a violent, she could have implored him to trust her.

tonight. It's the storm, I guess. Almost exhausted, Pollytop forced herself to stand up.

"You hadn't ought to be out of bed, Granny," she remonstrated. "Yep, I guess it's the rain what makes you ache."

Then Mrs. Hope noticed Bennett. His eyes gazed at her a moment and then moved back to Polly.

The old woman hobbled to the cot, and Polly came to her side silently.

"He's awful sick, I guess, ain't he?" observed Mrs. Hope, looking up into the girl's face.

"Yep!" The affirmative was but a breath.

"Goin' to die, huh?" whispered the other.

A deep sob rose to the girl's lips, brought almost to utterance by her intense suffering.

"Mebbe" was all she could say. "Poor man," the woman muttered, wrinking up her face. "Dyin's awful hard thing for some folks."

A startled expression, smoothing away some of the hard lines, spread over Oscar's face. In the presence of death, which every squatter held in superstitious awe, Polly dropped down upon her knees beside the bed. Her own hurt had been overcome by the desire to help him if she could. And there, while the rain dashed its

to the young man's darkening sensibilities and the ghost of a smile crept to his lips. Then slowly his eyes closed. The strained muscles relaxed from about his mouth, leaving it more boyish; and thus did the Storm country give back to Evelyn Robertson her freedom.

After that came dark days for Pollyop. Even the reproduction of The Greatest Mother in the World, which hung in its accustomed place on the shabby wall, failed to lift the heavy load that rested like a stone in her bosom. No more did she stand before it and dream—dream of a deep-toned voice telling her of love and a future dream of Robert's arms about her and her head pressed against him.

Up and down she went through the Silent City, unable to smile, well nigh unable to speak a word of greeting to those she met. So sympathetic were her squatter friends that many a fish and pan of baked beans found their way into the Hopkins hut.

Several times Pollyop had made an effort to see Evelyn, but the rich girl never appeared as the little trill sounded just after nightfall in the Robertson garden.

July came, rumors that Evelyn Robertson was to marry Marcus McKenzie; and that he had bought the Bennett farm of Oscar's heirs. Terrified whispers went from mouth to mouth in the settlement that he had bought her from the Silent City before the coming of Christmas.

One night the dark messenger to whom no home is closed slipped into the Hopkins shanty and summoned Granny Hope. Although the absence of the old withered woman made one less to feed, Pollytop missed the oft-repeated assurance that somehow, some time, love would make crooked things straight.

Late one day, she took Jerry and the billy goat and walked through the Silent City and on toward the Bad Man's Ravine. The picture she had grown to love in those long-ago spring days still gazed out at her from Marcus McKenzie's fence.

There, for a moment Polly halted and solemnly contemplated the beautiful face. When she had been happy, and that was ages past, she had not realized what the call in the mother-plea meant. But as one after another, her loved ones had dwindled away, and none but Jerry was left, a clearer understanding took possession of her. The same cruel force had attacked her and the woman there. They were living in a warring world, trying by night and main to cling to their own, Pollyop and this giant mother. The woman asked aid for her vast army of sick sons; and Polly's sorrow, touched by her broad compassion, lightened a little.

Behind her she heard footsteps. Slowly she turned her head; and almost at the same instant the person stopped. Pollyop could not move or force a word of greeting from her tongue, for Robert Percival was looking at her, his serious white face holding no bit of smile or welcome. For a long minute they stared at each other; then the young man swung about swiftly and strode away.

Crushed almost into insensibility, Pollyop sank lower and lower until Jerry slid away from her shoulders to the ground. Her beloved had not spoken, nor had the pulsed lines about his mouth softened even a little bit.

Afternoon shadows began to stretch long over the lake and crowd down upon the Silent City; and the squatter girl knelt and wept in sorrow and loneliness with her head near but the large-eyed, smiling child, leaning across the thin

MEADOW BRIEFS

By Asculapias

Our Tradesday passed off quietly, in fact a little too quiet. The only thing to break the monotony was the delightful southwest wind with admixtures of sand, loaded with ozone. It is still moving this morning (Monday) and very much cooler.

Our boys and the club at Ropesville crossed bats Saturday evening, and the Ropesville boys returned much wiser. Score 26 to 6.

The Minstrels passed through Saturday evening on their way to Ropes where they gave an entertainment at night. A number of our people attended and reported an enjoyable time. It is said that they roasted our doctor and toasted our banker to the great amusement of the crowd. Lay on McDuff!

There was regular services at the Baptist church Saturday and Sunday. At night the pastor paid his respects to the K.K.K. and other organizations, that usurp the functions of the courts and pretend to administer punishment to the violators of the law.

We do not need the services of the "Invisible Empire" with its Grand Wizards and Genii, its Realms and Cyclops, its Demons and Ghouls, its Provinces and Grand Giants, Grand Titans, Furies and Goblins. The old order of the Ku Klux Klan was organized in 1867, during the days of reconstruction and was an answer and a protest against the Loyal Leagues and Lincoln Brotherhoods organized by scalawags and Carpet Baggers of the north among the ignorant hordes or negroes recently freed and turned loose among the homes of the South. It answered its purpose in suppressing the negro and driving out those who aided him. It did not stop there however.

From frightening the ignorant and superstitious negro it rapidly became an instrument of oppression to the whites as well, and murder and other crimes were committed in its name. The Federal Government was finally forced to suppress it, which it effectually did in 1871.

In adopting the name of the old Ku Klux Klan and retaining the titles of officers and most of its paraphernalia, it was undoubtedly their intention to impress on the people that it is the same old aggregation of murderers and thugs that the government had found it necessary to suppress fifty-one years ago.

Our people should get out of their heads the idea that there are any good men in the order, in spite of the fact that they have given a few pauper suns to preachers and placed small suns at the disposal of widows and orphans. Let us remember the admonition: "Beware of Greeks bearing gifts."

Its claim of 100 per cent American is veriest hush and subterfuge. If the order continues to exist it will create a "vendetta" as dangerous and enduring as any existing among the Italians past or present. The Jew and the foreigners, who have become naturalized and reared his family in our midst, is quite as much an American as any of the prominent names that grace the roster of these nocturnal marauders. The Catholic nor the Jew have never shown much disposition to become members of secret organizations other than their own, and it has been excepted from the list of citizens that can become members. As to the foreign born, it is highly probable that we would not trace the genealogy of some of these country very far without finding some parent or grand parent that had left his country for his country's good. Away with these Knights of the White Camellia; we do not need their services, nor that of any other national organization of cut-throats and high binders.

Let each of us publicly pledge ourselves to assist the officers regularly elected to enforce the laws we have. As jurors let us go into the box and do our sworn duty and in other ways conduct ourselves as Christian men and women, and there will be less crime in the land.

LOST:—Horse weighing 1,200 lbs., dark bay, leather legged. Last heard of north of Lamesa. Notify Ralph Smart at Lamesa Hardware Co., or Lee Billingsly and receive $25.00 reward.

Why Go Shopping?

When you want a pair of shoes or a fine hat or a suit of clothes why don't you order it over the phone? Just say send me a hat or a pair of shoes. No, that would be foolish, you would want to see what you were buying, and that is good business—but has it ever occurred to you that you should see the kind of oil and gas you are buying, for your car—the one you took so much pains to look over and try out before you said: "I'll take 'er."
