NECK TIES!

THEY have parties as you well know, in the "way down in Dixie" country when the necktie is a great feature of the frolic. The tie referred to, is, of course not worn VOLUNTARILY, as the colorings and shape are not such as to appeal to the "artistic" in any human—

However, speaking of ties we want to tell you that our way of thinking the new spring styles that we are now receiving "put it all over" anything we have shown—

If the silk worms have been on a strike you would never know it when you view the nice qualities we are showing in the late Roman stripes, neat checks and plaids in such beautiful combinations of colors—

AN EASTER EGG HUNT

On Friday afternoon, April 14th, the third grade pupils of Miss Maurice Hardesty, with the kindergarten pupils of Mrs. Rambo, met about 2:30 at the school building. From there they marched to the home of Mrs. Dick Brownfield, where they enjoyed an easter egg hunt. Several of the high school girls, assisted by Mrs. Banks, had previously hidden the eggs in the orchard. Before hunting for the eggs, they were entertained with a short program by the kindergarten children. After a merry hunt for eggs they all came back together to see who had the most eggs. After counting the eggs it was found that Vernon Mitchell had found most and May Crowley came next. While the children played games, the mothers spread lunch for all and the children were soon enjoying a picnic lunch. There were several mothers present, also quite a few visitors. This was the occasion of the closing of the kindergarten for the summer months.—Contributed.

SINGING CONVENTION HAS GOOD SESSION AT UNION

Nearly one year after organization, Union was again permitted to entertain, the Terry County singing convention last Saturday night, Sunday and Sunday night. The crowd was a little better than a year ago and the singing much better as the several classes over the county are getting well under way, and are doing good practice. Singing is not only one way of praising our maker, but is good exercise mentally and physically, and we of Terry county as well as the entire nation should become a singing people. People who sing are the best satisfied people on earth. Union did not disappoint the crowd at luncheon time either, and the tired and hungry singers were treated to a fine spread in picnic style at the noon hour. We understand that the next convention goes to Meadow the 3rd Sunday in July. IF YOU WANT a loan on farm ranch, see C. R. Rambo.

DR. H. H. HUGHES HAS RETURNED FROM HOUSTON

Dr. H. H. Hughes returned recently from Houston, where he went to the government hospital to undergo operation for troubles received in the war. The Dr. says Uncle Sam is sure fixed up to take care of sick or crippled veterans at Camp Logan, and that would be worth anybody's time to go through this institution if they are in Houston. Of course, being a physician himself, he was allowed more freedom probably than the ordinary person to see what they really have there. He is well pleased with his trip. Card of Thanks We take this method of thanking everyone who so kindly administered to our needs during our recent illness. May the Heavenly Father smile upon your steps and bless them. Sincerely, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Smith. FOR SALE—A saddle in good condition. See Virgil Shaw.

WELL THE CIRCUS CAME TO TOWN O.K.

Friday was a quiet day in Brownfield. The blare of the brass band, and the call of the street auctioneer was as silent as a deserted tomb, but no one seemed to be sorry. Even the scent of moonshine whiskey had done and floated on with the next day's sand storm on over toward Tahoka, and all the world was serene. But just how the circus people felt is altogether another proposition, as they sped toward Floydada to skin their next victims. They carried at least $2,500 away from the town and trade territory, it is estimated, and left in its place just a dark brown taste in our mouths. As to the performances and the animals, four legged and otherwise, they were fully up to the expectations of what to expect in a town the size of Brownfield, but so far as being different, we can shut our eyes and look back thirty some odd years and see its exact counterpart in our little home town in Tennessee. All shows are just alike, only some are very small and some large. However, it is said that there were men here that day who were past fifty and saw their first elephant.

THREE SMALL BOYS ARRESTED HERE SHOW DAY

Sheriff Johnson ran down three small boys, one at least wearing knee pants, in a pasture west of town last Thursday night and brought them to town and locked them up, charged with horse theft here the same day. It seems that they started out from Breckinridge and are alleged to have stolen a car there, and it seems that when money began to get low, they would sell their car and bag another, until we understand that about five had been swiped by them by the time they reached Brownfield. We understand that they got wind some way that the officers were after them, and one wanted to seal another car, but the leader decided that they would try it horse back awhile as they could dodge through pastures, but when arrested they decided the auto route was the best. The Herald has never before felt like criticizing our officers, for they have been unusually diligent in the discharge of their duty in bringing criminal to justice, but right here we just pause to ask why these little boys were thrown in jail, and so far we understand that all the bootleggers arrested here have been allowed to go to the hotels with a guard of honor? To our notion one law breaker is just as bad as another, and from this on lets be impartial, and see that the next bootlegger caught in Brownfield goes in the "coop" or else let the rest go to the hotels and boarding houses.

BIBLE SCHOOL ATTENDANCE

While last Sunday was a much better day than the previous Sunday, the County Singing Convention was in full blast at Union and many of the usual pupils were out of place, but will be on hand next Sunday. However, a gain was made over the previous Sunday in both attendance and collection.

FARMER VICTIM OF MYSTERY SHOOTING

Ralls, April 15th.—L. G. Payne, a farmer living near here, was shot by mysterious assailants yesterday afternoon as he was working in his garden. Five shots entered his body and he was rushed to a sanitarium at Lubbock, where he is still alive. According to the generally accepted version here, three men in a closed automobile, from which all marks of identification had been removed, fired the shots. A similar attempt was made on Payne's life three weeks ago, it was thought by the same parties. Three men who live here, are under arrest in the Hale county jail at Plainview. The sheriff of Crosby county will make an attempt to identify them. When arrested the men had two shotguns, two pistols and a high-powered rifle in their possession. According to Terry, of Hale county, the men refused to make any statement other than to deny their guilt.

CRIPPLED "BUDDIES" TO GET OLD HOME PAPERS

Dallas, April 17.—Copies of the "home town" newspapers will soon be coming to all of the veterans of the world war who are confined to hospitals away from home for treatment of sickness or wounds incident to war service, if the plans of the American Legion are worked out. The Texas department of the Legion are now taking a complete census of all ex-service men hospitalized in Texas. When this has been completed it will be turned over to the National headquarters where they will be sorted and refiled according to the home localities of the patient. The local posts in the "hometown" will be supplied with the names of buddies ill in distant points and each post will arrange to see that this Buddy gets his home paper and at least one personal, newsy letter a week from some comrade that he knew at home. There are 11,000 local posts over the country combinding in this effort to administer medicine of thoughtful kindness and it is believed they will send the newspapers gratis.

PROSPERITY

What will bring prosperity to Terry County and put the farmers on top? Large bunch of chickens on the farm. Few good milk cows to sell cream from— Good work mares to raise good colts from— A fine garden and some good brood sows. Then some corn and cotton. This will put Terry County on TOP. Suppose you intend buying a piece of real estate. Suppose you are reasonably sure that the title is O. K. Suppose you have every reason to believe in the honesty and integrity of the other party. Suppose you have a personal knowledge of the history of that piece of ground running back a number of years. For real, honest-to-goodness wild

They were having a glorious time of Six hundred hogs were shipped

Yea, come to Terry, Lynn or Lumb-rock, come to the great South Plains where something is doing all the live long time. California is a very proud and boastful state, and are constantly reminding us of how many prunes they are shipping us, keep us full-but Terry county, Texas alone has supplied that State since new year more than 25 cars of hogs for their "hog and hominy." One population is about 3,000; the State of California has about 3,000,000, yet the whole danged state won't ship us 25 cars of prunes in 50 years.

The graduating class of the local high school brought the Herald a job this week after the other fellow away off yonder had made a mess of it and left the name of one of the graduates. The Herald could not have remedied the mistake a first but not afterward. Just the same we thank them for the compliment. We asked them why we were not offered the job in the first place, and they informed us that they did not know we could do that kind of work. What puzzles us is how come them to think of us when they wanted a mistake corrected. Also another puzzle is how was it that the Plains graduating class knew the Herald was in town and the Brownfield class did not?

An editor is expected to kill himself boosting for a bigger and better school, but if there is any printing to be down the pupils and faculty raise their sights so high that they see clear over every village between here and Chicago. Of course then when the reopening day comes, the editor is expected to appear on the scene and take a front seat if he can get one and then go back to the office and write a half column about what a splendid faculty the school has and that the outlook was never better for the school in the history of the town.
In the meantime, during the term the editor must pay dues to the T. P. A. and print its programs from week to week, and do various other boosting such as printing honor rolls and what not until commencement arrives. He then probably gets a qual order invitation from one of the students and rushes to town for a present for the sweet girl graduate, or the handsome boy graduate. He goes to the high school auditorium on the night set forth by the Chicago announcement and respectfully listens and cheers 'em to the echo. Once more at his desk, he goes into raptures over the great subjects so magnificently handled by the promising offsprings of the community, "many of which are to be our future congressmen or ever-president of the United States, and the girls, oh! they are perfect queens and—etc." No the Herald is not mad!
—not even insulted—but is just fed up on taking the little end of the horn. That's all.

MORE VOCIFEROUS THAN OTHERWISE

We are not a member of the Ku Klux Klan, but we are getting mighty ired of reading about where some two bit district judge has scored the owner in his charge to the grand jury, declaring it to be a menace to law and order, and then give some noted criminal or bootlegger his liberty on a frail technicality, and have the nerve to say he is upholding law and order. We say it with shame; the Ku Klux are a credit to the average courts of our land.

Justice is almost an unknown quality in our courts. In fact, no man, unless he has considerable means can go into our courts and obtain even the semblance of justice. God in Heaven knows that something must be done if our boasted civilization is to be maintained.
There isn't a man who has ever had anything to do with our courts or has any knowledge of their functioning, but what can point to instance after instance where justice and right have been trampled under foot, the incident have been made to suffer, and yet these two-by-four excuses called judges discharge a jury of Americans that this order is the greatest enemy civilization has to contend with.

There are thousands upon top of thousands of criminals running loose in society today through the so-called sentence routes, other thousands by the pardon route, and still other thousands through corrupt courts and crooked district judges and their high positions of influence to vomit their slanderous slime or an organization which has repeatedly stated that they stood for law and order. Only a few of these fellows have shown their hand, and we can give you their pedigree.

We are not at all in sympathy with some of the things certain Klan lodges have done, and if continued, we believe will ultimately destroy the or-American will, the things for which they stand. If, as declared, the Klan emphasizes the sanctity of the home, reverence for womanhood, cleaner morals, stronger loyalty to country white supremacy, unalloyed Americanism, allegiance to one land and one flag, demand for one language, that in which was written the Declaration of Independence—then we yield to no man in devotion to its ideals.—Stanton Reporter.

SYNOPSIS.
CHAPTER I.—Occupying a dilapidated shack in the silent city, a squatter named Old Marc, New York, Polly Hopkins lives with her father, small Jerry, and an old woman, Granny Hope. On an adjacent farm, Oscar Bennett, prosperous farmer, is a neighbor. He is secretly married to Evelyn Robertson, supposedly wealthy girl of the neighborhood. Polly alone knows their secret. Marcus Mac-Kenzie, who owns the ground the squatters occupy, is their determined enemy.
Polly overhears a conversation between MacKenzie and a stranger, in which the squatter's intention of driving the squatters from his land. The stranger sympathizes with the squatters, and earns Polly's gratitude.

CHAPTER II.—Evelyn Robertson discovers from her mother that she is not rich, as she supposed, but practically living on the bounty of Robert Percival, Evelyn's cousin.

CHAPTER III.—Polly learns from Evelyn that the sympathetic stranger is Robert Percival. Evelyn charges Polly with betraying her mother, telling her she can give him no more money, and urging him to be patient. She already has a betrothal to a young man, and marriage to the ignorant farmer.

CHAPTER IV.—Polly conveys her message, and Oscar makes threats. He insults Evelyn and tells her that if she has her father and Larry Bishop, a squatter who has suffered from the county MacKenzie, take an oath to do him no injury.

CHAPTER V.—Evelyn unsuccessfully tries to get money from her mother, which she refuses to give. She is really enamored of Robert Percival. At the arranged meeting with Oscar Bennett, Evelyn's exposure unless she procures money for him.

CHAPTER VI.—Polly meets Robert Percival and they are mutually attracted.
Polly's feeling being something like adoration.

CHAPTER VII.—Overhearing a conversation between Polly and Robert Percival, Bennett, really caring nothing for Evelyn and fancying himself loved by Polly, waylays the girl when she leaves Percival and abuses and threatens her.
Percival returns and threatens the farmer.
He asks Polly in what way he can aid her and she begs him to help the squatters. Percival is rich and influential, though lacking the power of MacKenzie, but agrees to do his best. MacKenzie visits the Hopkins shack with an offer to leave the vicinity, offering them a tripling sum of money. The offer is refused and MacKenzie threatens to burn their pitiful dwellings and leave them homeless.

CHAPTER VIII.—Polly visits Percival in the Robertson home in an effort to enlist his aid, and he is on the point of declining his love for her, when the girl in a panic, flees. MacKenzie asks Evelyn to be his wife. The girl agrees to marry him, after he has bought the Bennett farm and got rid of the squatters. Robert falls in an effort to secure the aid of Mrs. Robertson and Evelyn in a project to help the silent city people.

CHAPTER IX.—Knowing Bennett's intention for Polly, Evelyn tries to influence the girl to promise to marry Robert. Polly, however, is too true to her word to do so. She is, however, reluctantly, and she acknowledges a similar feeling for him. MacKenzie lays a trap for Hopkins and the latter is arrested.

CHAPTER X.—Polly goes to the Robertson home to enlist Percival's aid in rescuing her father. MacKenzie hears of her. He is also deaf to Robert's pleadings, and the latter, though assured Polly of all the help he can give her, feels himself powerless.

CHAPTER XI.—A week later Polly, alone during a heavy thunder storm with her little brother and Granny Hope, has a visit from Evelyn. She tells Polly nothing has struck her. The two women carry him from the road into the shack. He is insensible. Polly tries to get a doctor. She meets Percival, who accuses her of being the culprit. Evelyn tells Robert she is there on a "trial." Polly, who is in the hut, overhears that Bennett is Polly's sweetheart. Robert leaves her, since the girl, true to a promise to Evelyn, does not deny it. He condemns Evelyn from the hut, after bitterly denouncing Polly for her duplicity. Bennett dies and Evelyn is free.

CHAPTER XII
Midsummer was full upon them; and still Polly and Jerry held to their lonely tenure of the hut. A few heart-broken letters had reached the squatter girl from Auburn, and she had painstakingly answered them. Yet in spite of the daily predictions of the squatter folks that Old Marc would shortly begin again to harass them, Polly was happier. She could not have explained, if she had been asked, why the agony of doubt had given place to a warmer glow about her heart when she thought of Daddy Hopkins. Away off up there in the gloom of the prison, he had received a mother's benediction; Polly believed this with all her soul. Jerry and she too had come in for their share; and this new confidence lifted the shadow from her eyes a little and lessened the stinging burn in her side.

The thing that tormented her most was Jerry's constant mourning for his father. Day by day she had racked her brains for ways to amuse him, but as soon as the novelty of the play had worn off, the old-time cry would be again.

"Want to play horse with my Daddy Hopkins? Wee Jerry wif my Daddy Hopkins!"
She was looking at him one morning after one of his spells of weeping, and wistfully considering if there might be a way to hurry him off to Auburn for a day, when Evelyn Robertson suddenly appeared in the shanty door.

For a long time Evelyn's conscience had made her uncomfortable. Even though her days were exceedingly busy, the remembrance of the squatter girl's pale, pleading face tormented her, and she was fearful Polly might not keep the promise she had made, and Marcus MacKenzie would be lost forever.

So astounded was Polly Hopkins to see the girl that she neglected to ask her in. Overlooking this, Miss Robertson stepped into the room in embarrassment.

"Polly," she began, catching her breath, "I just had to speak to you.
I'm going to be married to Mr. McKenzie, and I came to talk to you about it and—and to bring the baby some candy."
Her expression gave with surprise Polly scrutinized her coldly.
"Jerry'd rather have his Daddy Hopkins than candy," she retorted frowning.
Miss Robertson drew back a little shaking her head.
"I couldn't manage that, I'm afraid," she said soberly, "but—" Polly shifted uneasily.

"Maybe you could get Old Marc to say I could take Jerry to Auburn then?" she ventured. "Jerry'd die if he don't see his daddy. He's getting thinner an' thinner every day. He's been yelling like mad all mornin'." Evelyn pondered on this instant.
"Yes, I could do that, I'm sure," she answered, smiling broadly. "I'd love to do it, too."
The frown deep at the corners of Polly's mouth disappeared.
"Maybe, if I could get something to wear—" she hesitated.
It had never occurred to Miss Robertson how Polly managed for clothing. She had of much herself, she was hated to another's need; but she still had come to demand a favor, then perhaps she had better offer such as she could.

"Polly," she ejaculated, "you've been awfully good to me, and you can have any one of my dresses you want, and I'll give you a new one. I'll give you a new one. I'll give you a new one." Polly felt her heart grow big. Then after all, she could take Wee Jerry to Auburn.

"I s'pose—I s'pose," she hesitated trembling, "you couldn't tell your cousin —?" Her throat caught in a sob but she cleared it, and went on, "just tell him Oscar wasn't my man?" Evelyn Robertson had often lived over the horror of the minutes when she had seen the secret of her marriage to Oscar Bennett was so nearly disclosed to Robert Percival. More than once had she congratulated herself upon the cleverness with which she had avoided that danger. To be sure her escape had been at the expense of Polly's reputation. She regretted the necessity but reasoned that a good name could not be much of a loss to a squatter.

"Of course I couldn't do that," she returned sharply. "Why—why should you want—?"
The squatter girl's gaze lifted to the speaker's face, and tears welled over the fringed lids. Then Evelyn read the truth; and her eyes glinted and narrowed.

"Merciful heavens, you're in love with my cousin?" she exclaimed. "Is that what you mean?"
The brown head fell forward, and a flushed face was hidden in the cheerless curtain.
"And he loves you, too," cried Evelyn, in disdain. "What a fool I was not to discover that before! How perfectly awful! That's what has been the matter with him for months." She snatched Polly's arm and shook her.

"It's absolutely mad of you to think of my cousin in that way," she continued, her voice hoarse with fear. "The least you could do is never tel-him about Oscar!"
Polly shook her head.
"I've never told nothing; I've said I wouldn't," she replied thickly, almost sullenly.

The Evelyn smiled. The dimples played hide and go seek at the corners of her lovely mouth. The steady-blue glint glared from her eyes, leaving them the color of heavenly tint.
She was certain her secret was as safe as the breast of Polly Hopkins as it was in the heart of the dead Oscar.
"You shall see your father," she said, dropping her hand, "and you can have any dress I have to wear. Come up tonight, at seven. The folks will be here, and I'll slip out and bring you in."

Then she went away, leaving Polly Hopkins alternately plunged into the depths of despair when she thought of Robert Percival and singing with the gladness of Polly Hopkins as it was Wee Jerry and Daddy Hopkins.
It was still broad day when Polly Hopkins left Wee Jerry playing by the water's edge with some squatter youngsters and started for the Robertson home. In the grape arbor, seven and hastily led her up the back stairs to her bedroom.

"There are the closets," she said,
"Take anything you like, Polly, but hurry. The folks are in the kitchen, and the other maids are busy. I'll go down for fear someone will come to find me.
There's the dinner gong."
Once alone in the beautiful room, Polly's gaze swept its broad dimensions. It did not occur to her to cover the least of these gorgeous surroundings. She only wanted something to wear to Auburn, something to celebrate her visit and to Daddy Hopkins proud. She swung open a closet door and peered in.

The sound of laughter somewhere in the house sent a wave of terror over her. She snatched at the first gown under her hand, rolled it into a bundle and fled down the stairs. Until she was in the lane again, she did not breathe easily.

Once back in the shanty, Polly hid the dress beneath her bed without even daring to look at it. How Evelyn was to arrange the visit to Auburn, she did not know, but of one thing she was sure, she had a beautiful dress to wear.

After she had put the child to bed, and the door was securely locked, Polly drew the curtains tightly over the small windows. Even the corners of the room lost their shadow; and "The Greatest Mother in the World" seemed to stand out more plainly than ever when the sun shone.

Polly placed her warm cheek against the picture and smiled. She earnestly believed this wonder-mother was helping her to go and see Daddy Hopkins. She turned and looked longingly at the sick little man, then upward to the woman's face.
"You've done so much for me as Jerry, ma'am," she whispered. "Mebbe sometime you'd make—him—smile just once at me."
Then she took the bundle from under her cot and spread out her treasure. It was a delicate shimmering silk, and in it was the color of the sun just before he sailed over the western hill on his journey around the earth. There could not be such a dainty dress in all the world, Polly thought. Then she slowly slipped from her own ragged dress and stopped a moment, contemplating Daddy Hopkins' big boots. Even to Polly's primitive mind they did not seem to be just the thing to wear with such a dress. So the boots, too, came off.

As if she had been handling eggs, she drew on the beautiful robe, her bare neck and forearms gleaming white in the candlelight.
Then back and forth she walked, entranced with its voluptuous loveliness.
But twist and turn as best she might,
I guess right!"
"Maybe I will," she told him, fingering the letter.
She liked Larry Bishop very much, but she was eaten up with curiosity to know the contents of the envelope in her hand. Perhaps, oh, might it be—"Where'd you get this, Larry?" she asked, holding it up.
"I was comin' down the lane," explained Bishop, "an' a feller asked me if I knew where the Hopkins kin was. He says, 'Yep, I'm goin' there now.' He says, 'Take this letter to the Hopkins girl, an' I says, 'Yep, an'
—an' I bring it up."
He paused, hoping she would open it in his presence. Being persuaded she did not intend to, he went out.
His footsteps and no sooner did they play off Polly's door than she opened it. Then she turned the letter over and over and looked at it. Her mind was on it so it must be meant for her to read. A thrill of pleasure ran over her. Perhaps Robert had sent her a word of forgiveness. He might have written that some day he would come again.
With sparkling anticipation she cut open the envelope and by the light of the candle scolded out its contents.
"Look Polly," she read. "I couldn't manage that trip to Auburn. So sorry."
"E."

Polly looked duly at the paper, the words running into black smudgy lines. Then she could not go to Daddy Hopkins after all; and Jerry might die! Old Marc had once more said his powerful hand upon her. Overcome with grief, she went a while. Then she took the dress from under the pillow, rolled it carefully in a clean cloth and put it away.
The shock of Evelyn's cold note brought back the shadows to Polly's brown eyes. As the days passed slowly by, and the rich girl did not come to the shack again, Polly lost all hope of seeing her father.
Her decision to go to Auburn in spite of old Marc followed a letter that she received from Daddy Hopkins. He was very lonely, he said. He was counting off each day as so many hours when the time when he could see his dear children. With the picture of Daddy's loneliness stamped in misery on her mind, and the thought that no one had the right to keep Jerry from his father.
From the time she conceived this idea, it never left her thoughts. She had often stolen rides on the Lehigh Valley train from Itasca to the Silent City and dropped off where the engine took a switch while the Buffalo Special dashed by. Why could she not steal a ride clear to Auburn?
While the squatter girl was making arrangements to carry out this nightly plan, preparations for the MacKenzie-Robertson wedding were going rapidly forward. Evelyn, happy in her new love, untroubled by sympathy for the dead Oscar, passed the days mostly at dressmakers and in the shops. Her contentment would have been complete if her cousin Robert had not looked so sad, or if she could have rid herself of the sense of responsibility for his unhappiness.
But hoping in her flippant way that all would come out well after she was married, she gave little heed to him and none at all to Polly Hopkins.
Early one morning Polly hurried quickly out of bed and after a hasty fast of bread and beans, began to dress Jerry in the best he had. He was very chilly, and a fine rain was over the lake.
Polly wrapped Granny's old shawl round the little boy's neck and tied a warm rag about his head.

the child, satisfied with his sister's assurance that he was going to see his father, sat on the cot wide-eyed, watching her in silence.

Polly combed her hair and washed her face and hands. Billy-goat Hopkins was in his place at the wood-box eating a handful of oats she had gleaned for him along the roadside. Polly wished that she might take him, too, but as long as she could not, Billy should have a better feed than usual.

After everything else was attended to, she unwrapped the silken dress and put it on. Her bare feet showed from under the hem, but she had decided she looked better without the boots, and as she stood gazing at herself up and down, she regretted that she had not asked Evelyn for a pair of shoes too. Being careful not to soil her skirt, she knelt and allowed Jerry to climb on her shoulders.

The moment she stood outside the shanty in the rain, she shivered. The damp air nipped at her uncovered arms and neck. To travel the long distance to the station, so illly covered, was out of the question, and the gown would be drenched through in a few minutes. She turned back into the shack and placed Jerry on the cot.

"Jerry wants to see Daddy Hopkins," the child whined. "Ain't he goin', Polly?"

FOR THE TEENS

It is not difficult to solve the problem of dress for little girls in these days of specializing. Resourceful designers devote their time to putting materials into styles that are appropriate for the little miss and pleasing to her as well. They craftily take their cues from the "grown-up" modes, modifying them to suit the younger generation, as in the case of the pretty "are-wrap" shown here.

This wrap for girls in their "teens" is a cape to which sleeves have been gracefully added. It is made of light-weight velours and has a full ripple back with a decoration of stitching in two rows around it. It has a large collar which is ingeniously arranged to draw up around the neck by means of a heavy silk cord that is threaded through large eyelets worked in silk like that of the stitching. The cord and eyelets are very decorative.

WANT BLACK FRONTS

These simple, elegant black frocks of silk crepe, for afternoon, have an aristocratic quality that endears them to women and they are found in all displays. One of them shown here is a straight-line model, trimmed at the waist, where roses made of the crepe are set on a girle also made of it. The sleeves of georgette are slashed from arm's-eye to cut and the edges finished with green and white silk braid.

PANELED CLOTH SKIRT

Spring presents its separate skirts of wool or silk or cotton and those for general wear are called "walking skirts" to distinguish them from sport skirts. Here is a pretty new model made of crepe. It is cut on straight lines and has a separate belt of the material. Around the bottom there are set-in panels trimmed with rows of narrow silk braid in a contrasting color.

SEAGRAVES SAYINGS

The students of the Seagraves High School went to Seminole April 8th, to the County Meet held at that place. The winners from Seagraves were: Miss Corine Lahman, senior girl's declamation; Miss Olyne Jones junior girl's declamation; J. Mack Bolton, junior boy's declamation; Seth Elder, 30 yards dash, also the 100 yds dash; Raymond Bachman 22 yards dash. These students all went to Lubbock April 14th and 15th to compete with the winners of the other counties of the district.

Miss Mimie Carlton of this place, and Mr. Morton League, of Knowles, N. M., were married at Seminole on April 10th. We wish them a long and happy life together.

Miss Bulah Dixon was on the sick list last Monday, and was not able to teach school that day.

Mr. J. V. Jones, a stock farmer of this place, had barn and car shed and about 4000 bundles of kaffir corn destroyed by fire last Saturday night. We heard he lost several hundred pounds of meat and 50 or 60 gallons of lard in the fire.

The Seagraves and Seminole baseball teams met in combat Saturday evening, the results being 13 to 1 in Seminole's favor. On Sunday evening the two teams met again and the result was 5 to 7 in Seminole's favor. Seagraves, we're still behind but we still hope you'll win out.

Several of the Seagraves people attended the circus at Brownfield last Thursday. Some of them did not return until Saturday on account of car trouble.

Seagraves is still booming. We are glad to announce that Mr. Elias Ivey is constructing a building in which he is going to install a new drug store.

The young people of Seagraves enjoyed a nice Easter egg hunt at Mr. A. B. Doddridge's last Sunday afternoon. Some time, did you say? Well, I'll say so.

NORMAL PEOPLE FIND LUMP-JAW REMEDY

Three cases of actinomycosis, commonly known as lump-jaw, were found in the Normal Dairy herd some few days ago. This disease has been considered by many farmers to be incurable, but the class in Live Stock Disease undertook the treatment of the disease, and secured complete cure in each instance.

Treatment used was Potassium Iodide in two dram doses, daily for a period of three weeks, followed by a rest of a few days and the treatment repeated. This treatment proves to be the best in such cases and can be secured at any local drug store.

The cows would certainly have died with this dreaded disease if the proper treatment had not been given to them. Some of the tumors were removed by surgical operation, but the disease in the system was destroyed by the medical treatment.

This class has done interesting work this year in the treatment of milk fever, caked udders, tuberculosis tests, castration, ruptures and other diseases. The purpose of the class is not to produce veterinarians, but to teach the farmer how to prevent and treat diseases common to farm animals.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Varuna Alexander, wife of Paul Alexander, was born Sept. 23rd, 1878, and died April 14th, 1922 at 6:30 a.m., a few miles northwest of town. She obeyed the gospel years ago and lived a devoted Christian life.

Elder C. B. Glasgow conducted the funeral at the Brownfield cemetery after which her remains were laid to rest at 4 o'clock p.m., April 15th. She is survived by her husband, one son aged 20, and two daughters, one 8 and the other 4, and a host of friends. The ladies had made letters of flowers, and layed them on the grave in such a way to form the word "Mother." Our sympathy goes out to the sorrowing ones, and especially to the two little girls who are left in the world without a mother. But our loss is heaven's gain.

"HOME SWEET HOME"

The following clipping has been going the rounds and deserves the earnest consideration and endorsement of all "home town folks."

"Mid pleasures and palaces through which I may wend, I find the home merchant a most valued friend. The mail order catalogues woo me in vain, for to pay without seeing gives me a pain. The home merchant credits until pay-day arrives, and he knows all the whims of his friends and their wives. His overall wears like buckskin of old, his buttons are not brass, if he tells you they're gold. Of every community he is a part, and even the kids know the path to his heart. He boosts for church—the 'odge and the school—'community uplift is ever his rule. And even the baseball and basketball teams look kindly to him in their athletic dreams. I'd rather have him at my elbow each day, than deal with a shark many miles away. Let's make the thing mutual and stand by our friend—there's no place like home for the money we spend.—Ex.

THE DEAR OLD SILVER DOLLAR

Oh! how dear to my heart is the old silver dollar, when some kind scriber presents it to view; the liberty head without necktie or collar, 'n all the strange things which to us seems so new—the wide spreading 'agle—'n arrows below it, the stars and the words with the strange thing they tell. The coin of our fathers, we're glad that we got it, fer some thing or other it will come in right well—the spread eagle dollar, the star spangled dollar, the old silver dollar we all love so well.—Mickie.

MEADOW BRIEFS

By Aesculapius

Our town continues to improve. A new store building is under construction, and will be occupied by a grocery concern.

The Cicero Smith Lumber Co. has added a new building to house their increasing stock of lumber, and are putting down a concrete floor for coal bins. This is badly needed as the high wind with drifting sand have transformed the piles of coal into sand hills, thus requiring another mining operation to get the coal.

The Methodist church is nearing completion, and when painted will be an ornament to the west side of the town.

The continued high winds are interfering with farm operations and is also drying the ground and farmers are getting impatient.

It is an ill wind that blows nobody good, so along with the high winds and drifting sand, two little girls put in appearance this week; one at the home of A. C. Luttrell and the other at Mr. Chesbir's.

The homes in this community will be redolent with catnip and the lightful odor of asafetida. From out the garret and furniture store, will be brought the cradle—the erstwhile kind, but the self-rocker and the upholstered crib. In the not very distant past the youngster was fortunate indeed, if he could be lulled to sleep in a goods box, or reclined on a sheep-skin thrown on the floor, and a sugar-teat given them—good old brown sugar.

In those good old days, before the stark announcements were in vogue, no one knew you were here but a few relatives and close neighbors, but now the State takes your name and your sex, and the locality in which you have decided to settle. Even your Uncle Samuel is looking for your advent; has appropriated money and appointed commissions of old maids and matrons, that will average one baby of their own to some six hundred, to look after your future. They will see to it that you are properly washed and disinfected, that your mother's milk has the proper balance; contains the required amounts of proteins, vitamins, salts, chlorides and other ideo. They may decide to trade your mother for a goat or a measly jersey cow and feed you with or through a rubber hose, or give you one of the many commercial fertilizers, labeled baby food, altered with barley water. Individualism has developed the best of which the race is capable, and for we are exchanging a collectivism and governmental control over the lives and acts of the people, that will make us as much alike as frizzled chickens and John Chinaman, and of about as much importance as an agency Indian. Laws!! Laws!! Laws!!!

BAILEY is here to stay and will pay top prices for hogs any time. Phone 146.

Will Alf Bell says when you are a'1 shaken up, it is probably flivver complaint.

Why Go Shopping?

When you want a pair of shoes or a fine hat or a suit of clothes why don't you order it over the phone? Just say send me a hat or a pair of shoes. No, that would be foolish, you would want to see what you were buying, and that is good business—but has it ever occurred to you that you should see the kind of oil and gas you are buying, for your car—the one you took so much pains to look over and try out before you said: "I'll take 'er." I treat this old tin Lizzie with respect; she needs a good oil and gas worse after she gets worn than when new.
