WEIGHT AND MEASURE INSPECTOR VISITS HERE

State Weight and Measure inspector, G. R. Scott, with headquarters in Lubbock, was here recently trying out the scales and filling stations of local dealers.

Mr. Scott, when he had finished his job here said he found both the scales and filling stations in fine condition, and that we might say that the people who trade at Brownfield are getting full weight and measure. He said the condition here averaged above any small town he had inspected, and said our merchants are entitled to all the bouquets we feel like handing them.

Mr. Scott for several years was the editor and proprietor of the Hale Center Record, and we met him at the State Convention two years ago at Dallas, and of course the Herald was the first joint he inspected, but we imagine more to get a whiff of printer's ink than anything else.
Come again Scott.

TOM MAY GETS HAND BADLY CRUSHED

While helping to load out a freighter with a truck of oil and gas at the Magnolia Oil Station last Friday, the manager of the concern in Brownfield, Tom May was painfully hurt.

It seems that the loading was finished and the truck man started up, and ran into a piece of piping, which turned and he could not pass over. Tom thinking he would reverse the truck, put his hand under the pipe to remove it when he did, but instead the driver put all power on forward and rolled the pipe with the weight of the truck over on Tom's hand.

Tom was hurried to a local physician who dressed the hand, and he is getting along as well as could be expected now.

AMERICAN LEGION FRIENDLY TO ORGANIZED LABOR

Dallas, May 20.—The A. Legion and organized labor are friendly was one of the things emphasized today at the National Convention of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, Freight and Express Handlers and Station Employees, by Wayne Davis, Department Commander of the American Legion.

Mr. Davis who came from Goliad, Texas, at the request of the Brotherhood appeared on the Convention program and was given a warm welcome. His friendly words and heartfelt sentiment cemented more deeply the friendly feeling between the two organizations.

"The ideals and purposes of the Legion," said Mr. Davis, "are quite similar with those of organized labor. In labor disputes our position is always one of neutrality, and where local posts have manifested a tendency to interfere with local labor disputes in a way unfriendly to labor they have in several instances been disfranchised by our National Commander."

Over 80 per cent of the fighting men of 1918 were laboring men, hence a large percentage of Legion members are also members of organizations similar to yours. So long as any organization works harmoniously and honestly for the upbuilding of its trade or profession or profession and stands for 100 per cent Americanism, it is bound to bring honor to itself and fulfill a civic usefulness.

The Legion, as an organization welcomes you to Texas, and throughout the nation stands ready to join you in defense of the principles and ideals for which our members fought and sacrificed.

IF THE SHOE FITS— YOU OUGHT TO WEAR IT

A town that never has community meetings or anything to do in the publicity way, it is on its way to the cemetery. Those of its citizens who will do nothing for the good of the town are helping the town to dig its grave. Those who knock and cuss the town furnish the coffin. Those who are so selfish as to have no time to give to community affairs are making the shroud. The business men who will not advertise are driving the hearse. Those who trade away from home are pallbearers. Those who are always pulling back from every public enterprise are throwing bouquets on the grave. Those who are so stingy as to be always howling hard times preach the funeral and sing the doxology. And thus the town lies buried from all sorrow and turmoil of the world.—Sweetwater Reporter.

NEAR SERIOUS AUTO ACCIDENT SUNDAY NIGHT

Arnet Bynum and wife were on their way to the Methodist church last Sunday night about dark, and were pushing their baby in the perambulator in front of them when they met a car driven by one of the Jeter boys who live south of town, and the light from the car so blinded Arnet that he was unable to see which way to go. The car knocked Arnet and the perambulator out of the way, and wrecked one wheel of the baby buggy, and threw the baby out. No one was seriously hurt as luck would have it.

People should be very careful how they drive on crowded streets, and it'll not hurt anything if the city government would enforce the dinner law if they have such a law, or we are going to have a serious accident one of these days.

OPTIMISTIC COTTON REPORTS MIGHT BE HURTFUL

We believe it will be to the advantage of the West Texas cotton producers if the different points in West Texas will refrain from sending out optimistic cotton reports at this time.

There is a tendency in the cotton centers to overestimate the cotton situation in West Texas. While it is true that the cotton situation looks exceedingly good from a moisture standpoint at this time, still those of us who have lived in West Texas a number of years know that many things can happen between now and October. We think it is fine to tell about the fine season we have and the good prospects, but what do you say that all of us refrain from boosting the cotton end of the situation any more than is necessary just now?

After the Government begins to make its forecasts of the 1922 crop, etc. based on existing conditions at that time, we may of course find it judicious to tone our attitude to the exigencies of the hour. But we do not want to let the bears and brokers use West Texas as the basis for bearing the cotton market.—Exchange.

Thrifty

The rainy days always come! The "eat, drink, be merry" idea is alright if you have something laid away for the tomorrows; if you are saving a generous portion of your income.

The "rainy days" inevitably drench those who fail to save in the days of prosperity. Time passes swiftly—on the streets and park benches of every town are striking examples of those who failed to note its passing.

One of the fundamental purposes of this bank is to encourage saving of your funds and then protect them with the solidity of the Depositors Guaranty Fund of Texas in order that your accumulations may always be at your service for any "rainy day."

Your account will be welcome and protected—

FIRST CALL FOR 1922 FAIR ASSOCIATION MEETING

All farmers and business men are urged to attend this meeting at 2:30 in the afternoon on that date.

SENATOR NEW'S DEFEAT REPUBLICAN REPUTATION

Washington, May 22.—The defeat of United States Senator, Harry S. New, for renomination by former Senator Albert J. Beveridge in the Indiana Republican primary by a large majority has thrown the other Republican administration candidates for election, both Senators and Representatives into a panic. With Copley of Illinois, the multi-millionaire member of the Ways and Means Committee and veteran reactionary leader and champion of the Harding administration, hurried under a majority of 5,000, and Harry New, the administration net, crushed by the weight of 20,000, they are asking who will be the next victim to fall beneath the righteous wrath of an outraged constituency.

Senator New's defeat is the most overwhelming repudiation and powerful rebuke yet administered to the Harding administration and the Do Nothing Congress. Senator New is the close personal friend and adviser of President Harding. He speaks for the administration upon the floor of the Senate. Although the President spoke no public words in his behalf, he was the silent ally, and all of the leaders of the administration were for him. The press of both parties for weeks made it plain the Senator New's candidacy was to be the test of the Harding administration, and Senator New himself made that the issue of his campaign. Administration organs were claiming his election when all the returns showed Beveridge far in the lead.

It is clear that the Beveridge majority is a vote of protest within the party rather than an endorsement of an affirmative principle of policies. A vote for Beveridge was the only way the Hoosier folks could show their disgust with the present Congress and the only way they could answer the appeal to endorse the reactionary Republican administration, and therefore New was defeated and Beveridge won.

The Ward County News is getting desperate. It says: "Warm weather has actually arrived, and we've got to get some new b. v. d. p. q. Have you paid your subscription?"

The Herald doesn't want to seem impatient or impertinent, but it piled its trash up both at the residence and office some two months ago, according to directions of the Maids & Matrons Club, and "nary" can be had moved except by wind as yet?

The County Board in whose hands the Brownfield School Board recently put the business of the district, say they have no jurisdiction in the matter. Miss Annie Webb Blanton, State Supt., recently phoned them that they could not all resign in a body. We are sure that both the old and new trustees will have a statement in the Herald next week.

County Lines on the South Plains are fast being removed, and the West Texas Chamber of Commerce is having a great deal to do with it. The people of the south plains are getting too big to let an imaginary line stop their forward movement; they are too broad to live in their own small backwash alone. To illustrate, in the recent issue of the Plains Agricultural Journal, published at Lubbock, the Lubbock and Plainview Chambers of Commerce carried a page ad jointly. Come to the South Plains.

Some have expressed the opinion that in the recent resignation of the School Board that they showed a spirit of rule or ruin. This expression has been heard from both those who voted for and against the increased taxes. We believe the board had no such intention, but after expressing their belief that more funds were needed to run the school and a majority of the people by their vote said they did not know what they were talking about, they then decided that it was for the best interest of the school to step down and out, and let those whose ideas more nearly conform to the results of the election be masters of the situation. But the Herald will bet you a dime that no set of men or women will stand behind the new trustees better than the old board. Want to bet?

IF YOU WANT a loan on farm or ranch, see C. R. Rambo.

Mrs. Arthur Sawyer and little daughter, accompanied by Mrs. Stricklin paid the Herald a pleasant call Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Sawyer remarked that the Herald had certainly added lots of modern machinery since she used to work for us on the Herald ten years ago.

THE WEST TEXAS SPIRIT

Probably nothing so well represents the spirit of West Texas as the big convention that will be held at Plainview next Monday and Tuesday. In its rapid growth, its vigor, its unceasing activity in the advancement of the cause of "right against might," the West Texas Chamber of Commerce typifies with rare fidelity, the spirit of this great Western empire as exemplified in the lives of our hardy pioneers and their descendants. It has become a unifying bond among the communities of this territory in which and through which the people work for things that are essential for the proper development of this vast region.

Like its prototype, the West Texas Chamber of Commerce is the largest body of its kind in the world. That it has been such a success is due, in part, to the loyalty and co-operation of the section in whose interests it was formed but a very considerable proportion of its unprecedented success is attributable to the unselfish energy and enthusiasm of Porter A. Whaley. Does any town want to start a commercial organization? It sends for Porter Whaley; does it want to put on a campaign for some object of public good? It sends for Whaley; has it a grievance concerning rates or cars or discriminatory legislation? It tells it to Whaley and his host personal efforts as well as the influence of the organization which he represents, are used until start for the accomplishment of the object sought. The people of the Panhandle and West Texas feel that their representative body has been most fortunate in the selection of a man of characteristic breadth and vision to direct the work of its chamber.

Next week the West Texas Chamber of Commerce will hold its fourth annual convention. There is not a community in the territory that has not been benefited by reason of the work and influence of the organization. Naturally, these communities which use the resources and followed the development programs suggested by the Chamber, profited most. The desire for progress must originate with the people to be served.

The perpetuation of the organization, is of course, a forerun conclusion. It has long since ceased to be an experiment and has become a most essential factor in the destiny of this region. Its importance and its possibilities are being more generally recognized by West Texas citizens, each year, and by reason of the 1922 convention being held at Plainview, the North Plains people will have the best opportunity yet offered for getting in direct touch with the organization. Plainview has sent out a most hospitable and urgent invitation to all the Panhandle towns to be her guests for these two gala days. Let's all go and become more thoroughly than ever imbued with the irresistible spirit of the West.—(Amarillo) Southwest Plainsman.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Occupying a dilapidated shack in the Silent City, a squatter settlement near Itasca, New York, Polly Hopkins lives with her father, small Jerry, and an old woman, Granny Hope. On an adjacent farm, Oscar Bennett, squatter farmer, is a neighbor. He is secretly married to Evelyn Robertson, daughter of a wealthy girl of the neighborhood. Polly alone knows their secret. Marcus McKenzie, who owns the ground the squatters occupy, is their determined enemy. Polly overtures conversation to McKenzie and a stranger, in which the former avows his intention of buying the squatters from his land. The stranger sympathizes with the squatters, and carries Polly's gratitude.

CHAPTER II.—Evelyn Robertson discovers from her mother that she is not rich, as she supposed, but practically living on the bounty of Robert Percival, Evelyn's cousin.

CHAPTER III.—Polly learns from Evelyn that the sympathetic stranger is Robert Percival. Evelyn changes her message to Bennett, telling him she can give him no more money, and urging him to be patient. She also indirectly regrets her infatuation with and marriage to the ignorant farmer.

CHAPTER IV.—Polly conveys her message, and Oscar Bennett is incensed. Evelyn meets him that night. Polly has her father and Jerry discuss a squatter who has suffered from the enmity of McKenzie, take an oath to do him no injury.

CHAPTER V.—Evelyn unsuccessfully tries to get money from her mother with which to buy on Bennett and induce him to leave the country, saving her freedom. She is really enamored of Marcus McKenzie. At the arranged meeting that night Bennett threatens Evelyn with exposure unless she procures money for him.

CHAPTER VI.—Polly meets Robert Percival, and they are mutually attracted. Polly's feeling being something like admiration.

CHAPTER VII.—Overhearing a conversation between Polly and Robert Percival, Bennett, really caring nothing for Evelyn and fancying himself in love with Polly, waylays the girl when she leaves Percival and abuses and threatens the farmer. He asks Polly in what way he can aid her and she begs him to help the squatters. Percival is rich and influential, however lacking the power of McKenzie, but agrees to do his best. McKenzie visits the Hopkins shack with an offer to the squatters, through Hopkins, to leave the vicinity, offering them the sum of money. The offer is refused and McKenzie threatens to burn their dilapidated dwellings and leave them homeless.

CHAPTER VIII.—Polly visits Percival in the Robertson home in an effort to enlist his aid, and he is on the point of declaring his love for her, when she faints in a panic. She asks McKenzie to be his wife. He is glad to carry her home, but she begs him to carry her to get a doctor. She meets Percival, who accompanies her back to the shack. Evelyn tells Robert she is there on a visit to small Jerry. She intimates that Bennett is Polly's sweetheart. Robert believes, since the girl, true to a promise to Evelyn, does not deny it. He consents Evelyn from the hut, after bitterly denouncing Polly for her duplicity. Bennett dies and Evelyn is free.

CHAPTER IX.—Knowing Bennett's infatuation for Polly, Evelyn tries to induce the girl to promise to marry him, but having agreed to marry the latter, she secures Polly. In love with Percival, though scarcely realizing it, the girl refuses. Meeting Robert next day, he tells her he loves her, and she acknowledges a similar feeling for him. McKenzie lays a trap for Hopkins and the latter is arrested.

CHAPTER X.—Polly goes to the Robertson home to enquire for her father, freeing her father. McKenzie jeers at her. He is also deaf to Robert's pleadings, and the latter, through assuring Polly of all the help he can give her, feels himself powerless.

CHAPTER XI.—A week later Polly, alone during a heavy thunder storm, with her little brother and Granny Hope, has a visit from Evelyn. She tells Polly something has "struck" Oscar. The two women carry him from the road into the shack. He is insensible. Polly sets out to get a doctor. She meets Percival, who accompanies her back to the hut. Evelyn tells Robert she is there on a visit to small Jerry. She intimates that Bennett is Polly's sweetheart. Robert believes, since the girl, true to a promise to Evelyn, does not deny it. He consents Evelyn from the hut, after bitterly denouncing Polly for her duplicity. Bennett dies and Evelyn is free.

CHAPTER XII.—Polly borrows a dress from Evelyn and with Jerry tries to head her way on a train to Auburn prison to visit her daddy. She is discovered by them and taken to the jail. Evelyn is with them and denies having given a dress to Polly, who is accused of stealing it. Percival takes her home, disgraced.

CHAPTER XIII.—Evelyn and McKenzie are married. Determined to oust the squatters, McKenzie takes Baby Jerry from Polly, intending to place him in an institution. Polly's heart is broken. She swears to have revenge.

CHAPTER XIV.—With Larry Bishop and Eve Braeger, Polly arranges to kidnap Mrs. McKenzie. The woman is taken to the Hopkins shack, where Polly intends to kill her. McKenzie, seeking his wife, comes to the shack, but she is successfully hidden.

CHAPTER XVII

In the meanwhile a covered carriage containing two men and a little boy was making slow progress along the drifted boulevard. About two miles from Itasca a double cutter, with sleigh bells ringing, dashed by them, the little light on the back of it glowing like a steady red eye until a sharp curve in the road blotted it from sight. "Somebody else out, if it's a bad night," commented the older man, who held the boy.

"They went awfully fast, too, Daddy Hopkins," murmured the child. "Didn't you, darlin'?"

"Yep, son," was the reply. "Sleighs go over the snow better'n wagons." The words hardly penetrated the younger man's reverie. His thoughts were busy with a squatter girl who would have a real Thanksgiving the next day. Her joy he could picture, but he could not join it. All his thoughts of her were marred by another vision that poisoned his every moment. Never since he had found her Bennett dying in Polly's bed had he known a peaceful instant.

When the vehicle came to the corner where McKenzie's magnificent turnout had swung into the lane leading to the row of squatter shacks at the lakeside, Robert Percival opened the carriage door and thrust his head out.

"This is where we turn," he shouted to the driver. "Go slow!" The drifts are deep all the way down."

When he settled again into his seat he remarked: "It's a bad night, Hopkins. Perhaps it would have been better to have waited until morning, after all."

The other man bent over the boy's head and laid his face against it. "You'd had to be something more'n a snowstorm to keep me if Itasca all night," he returned. "Where my pretty brat is, I want to be."

"Of course, of course," sighed Robert.

But he did not utter aloud the thought which flung to his lips that he was tortured by the same wish, too. What he did say was:

"Your daughter will be asleep, I've no doubt."

"Mebbe," Hopkins answered. "But Pollyop'll be glad to hop out of bed for her daddy an' Jerry bab'?"

Then he coughed as if trying to add something else.

"I been wantin' to tell you all day, Mr. Percival," he said awkwardly, "how grateful I be to you. It's kinda hard to say it in words."

"There's no need, I assure you," returned Robert. "The only thing I regret is that you should have been compelled to stay in prison so long."

"But we're home now," was the happy answer. "An' I'm thankin' you for me an' my brats too."

Pollyop's squatter, the child, wriggling. "Daddy, Wee Jerry wants Pollyop."

"Hush, Jerry," soothed his father. "We're a-comin' near home now—There! Here we be."

As they descended from the carriage, the boy hid his face in his big father's shoulder.

The snow was still falling quietly into the dark lake, and the squatter, with a throb at his heart, caught the gleam of light at the edge of the window blind of his home. Then his Pollyop was still up.

"Cover your horses and wait here," directed Percival to the driver. Then to Hopkins he said: "As I told you, sir, your daughter's suffered frightfully. Poor girl, I am afraid, if you appeared without warning, the shock would be too much for her. Do as we agreed in town, and go to Bishop's shack until I come for you. I'll tell her you and the boy are home."

A long sigh he heaved from the squatter's lips. He decided to rush in and hold his girl-brat to his overwrought heart. He had heard with suppressed emotion Robert's tale of his Pollyop's trials, and now as he recollected them, he could scarcely restrain himself. Yet he realized the young man was right, so, pulling the child's bowed legs around his neck, he faded stolidly into the falling snow.

Aside the hut Polly Hopkins was seated, tensely silent, her slender fingers clasped together about her knees. Suddenly she heard voices other than the low hum of McKenzie's questions and Evelyn's sobbing answers in the coop-hole.

She arose slowly, ready to spring at Larry Bishop or Lye Braeger if they appeared at the door. To send them away instantly was the decision that she made as she saw the latch lift and the door slowly swung in. A figure she recognized stepped across the threshold; she sat down, but was up again before he spoke.

The man she had so longed to see had come again. But now he was here, she did not dare let him stay a moment. Marcus McKenzie might come out of the coop-hole even before she could send the newcomer away. While he was pressing his great coat collar down over his shoulders, she tipped her chin up and with uplifted hand whispered:

"Hush! Go away! Go away quick!" Making a backward gesture, she added: "There's some one in the coop-hole I don't want you to see."

His eyes having completely left his mind, Robert, after a moment of startled inspection, stopped stiffly by the door. The resentment and jealousy he had nursed so long flared into active life and licked him like flames. Clothes such as she wore had never been paid for by squatter money!

She was beautiful! So much his eyes told him, but he knew she was not honest!

She had said there was some one in the coop-hole!

He fixed her with stern eyes and then showed her aside.

"I'm going to see who he is," he snapped.

Polly's fingers caught him as he tried to pass her.

"No, you can't go in there," she cried. "Please don't do it."

The sound of their voices brought Marcus McKenzie into the kitchen in one stride. He halted at the sight of the squatter girl hanging desperately to Robert's arm. An exclamation broke from his mouth as he saw the squatter was free and was at him.

"So it's you!" he said in a tone that told Polly Hopkins what was in his mind. "Damn you, you hypocrite!"

His voice broke off, and he brushed his eyes across with shaking fingers. There behind Marcus in the coop-hole doorway was his pale cousin.

"Evelyn!" he gasped thickly. "God, what's this all about? Every one of you look as if—as if—"

Disregarding and overcome, he could not finish his sentence.

Marcus had caught Evelyn to him; and Pollyop, tearlessly ashamed, had sunk into the big chair to hide the fiery which she knew had brought the hurt into Robert's eyes. She wished she was clothed in daddy's boots and her own calico dress!

"Open the door, Bob," Marcus ordered as calmly as he could.

Mechanically Robert did as he was bidden. When he turned again, Marcus was seated, with Evelyn clinging to him, and Pollyop's face was covered by one arm.

Evelyn began to cry weakly. "Bob, dear," she broke out, looking up at her cousin with streaming eyes. "Pollyop's been so good to me."

"That sounded to Polly as if some one else were to be punished for the night's work," she protested, lifting her head. "I was awful bad! I were the only one to blame. I hated every one of you. Let me tell all of you about it."

She began at the beginning and repeated how she had concocted the plan to steal Mrs. McKenzie. She spoke of Larry and Lye as her two friends but did not mention their names.

"I thought I could kill 'er, sir," she admitted, raising streaming eyes, "but when daddy's coat fell down, an' the big mammy an' Granny Hope smiled at me, I quit hatin' you an' wantin' to kill your woman."

She struggled up and moving to the wall, leaned against "The Greatest Mother in the World" as if she, too, would add herself to the vast family of hurt ones.

Every one of her words was directed to McKenzie.

"Then I'm to understand," he asked slowly, "that you deliberately took my wife away to kill her?"

"That she didn't, Marc," interjected Evelyn.

Storm Country Polly

By GRACE MILLER WHITE

Illustrated by R. H. Livingston

(Copyright by Little, Brown & Company)

"Oh, Daddy Hopkins, I got to go—to jail. I been—a wicked—had—"

She was straining so to finish that Robert Percival was no longer able to keep quiet. He stepped forward so that Polly saw him over Daddy's shoulder. She glared at him wildly.

"Tell 'em—oh—tell 'em," she shrieked. The tears in his eyes softened her expression.

"It's like you to feel sorry for me, sir!" She winced. "An' gettin' Daddy an' Wee Jerry back is like you, too. Every day I'm in jail I'll be prayin' you'll be happy."

She strangled at the memory of Old Marc's words, "I'll get you next, huzzy!"

Then Robert, stung with remorse at his disbelieve in her, picked her out of her father's arms. When he had placed her in a chair, he said:

"Polly, darling, we've heard the whole story from—from—"

He looked toward Larry Bishop, stumbling as if he did not remember his name.

"And we've forgotten it, too," MacKenzie boomed in. "Yesterday it wouldn't have been any great loss if my whole family had been sunk in the lake. We were all more wicked than any one in the Silent City. But tonight it's different!"

Polly straightened up, her eyes brilliant with questioning.

"Daddy," she asked, "does he mean—I ain't goin' to jail for my life-long? Oh, Daddy—"

She was in the big squatter's outstretched arms in a twinkling, weeping against his breast.

"This night's work," said MacKenzie, moved almost beyond speech, "won't pass outside the few who know it. And Polly—look up, child. I want to tell you something."

In silence she dared a timid glance at him.

"While you were—asleep—just now, Mr. Percival and I made arrangements with your father to give him work," MacKenzie told her. "Does that please you?"

"Awful much," she sighed; then she turned and looked at Bishop, standing against the wall.

"What about Larry?" she murmured softly. "Poor, poor Larry."

"I'll help him, too," Marcena agreed eagerly.

Polly cogitated one small moment. "There's Lye Braeger," she sighed again. "He ain't got many friends, Lye ain't!"

MacKenzie's laugh sent a sense of relief over the gloomy group.

"Then Lye Braeger, too," he exclaimed, "and any other squatter who wants to work."

Polly, overwhelmed with this generosity, stood up before him, curling her lovely, eager face.

"I guess mebbe you were an angel all the time, like Granny Hope said once," she said shyly. "I'm thankin' you, sir, an' I'm hopin' the little one God's sendin' in the summer'll look just like—like—a smile touched her lips—"

"Just like Jerry," she said. Because she was so simply natural, MacKenzie replied solemnly:

"If my child looks as much like me as Jerry looks like his father, I'll be satisfied."

Then he hurried his wife away, offering to carry Robert home with them.

"No, sir," said that young man stoutly. "I've got to talk to Polly Hopkins."

"I'm goin' now, too," grunted Larry Bishop. "Got to go an' see Lye Braeger."

"The horses are well covered, Polly," answered Robert. "I'll make it worth the driver's while to wait a bit."

Then unable to bear the strain any longer, he burst out:

"Darling, can you ever forgive me?" She gave him one melting glance and like a fluttering bird sped into his arms and stayed there. And thus the two young things, with nothing between them and long stretches of happiness, clung to each other until the tinkle-tinkle of the Mackenzie sleigh bells was lost in the night.

Then the squatter girl, disengaging herself from her sweetheart's arms, went to her father.

"Daddy," she breathed, bending over him, "ever since I mended the roof that day—the same day Old Marc came home, I've been lovin'—"

She reached back her hand, and Robert clasped it, "I've been lovin'—"

Choking, she could get no farther in that important explanation.

Robert stepped beside her, and rested his hand on the down-bent head. He knew now that though she was a squatter, one of the despised of the earth, he loved her better than the whole world.

"It's just like Granny Hope said, Daddy," Pollyop went on, the velvet brown softening the misty eyes. "She said, Granny Hope did, that love's bigger an' better'n hate any day. An' it's true, ain't it?"

"Yep," nodded Hopkins, smoothing her face with one great hand. "I guess so, brat!"

"It sure is," added Robert in her ear.

Then he looked at Jeremiah.

"May I have her some day, sir?" he asked in reverent tones. "I'll make her so happy you won't regret it."

Jeremiah's big frame shook, and Pollyop, ever devoted to him, kissed him tenderly.

"I'll never leave you, Daddy darlin', precious old Daddy," she cried. "Mebbe—"

She looked up at the tall man standing by her. "Mebbe," she repeated, "you'd take Jerry an' Daddy too, huh? They're awfully good an' never get in anybody's way."

"And Jerry and your father too, an' your little girl, Mr. Hopkins, can't I?"

"Yep," whispered Jeremiah, sighing heavily.

Then while Robert was bidding Polly good-night, Jeremiah, with a faraway look upon his face, gathered the bow-legged child closer to him and rocked him gently to and fro.

[THE END.]

INTERESTING ARTICLE ON POPULAR SINGING

Those unfortunate enough to miss getting listening room in the Club House at Slaton last Sunday missed another great song feast. President Dyess and his Lorenzo class failed to attend on account of the threatening weather, but classes from Lubbock, Possey, Woodrow and Slaton joined in rendering God's praises in song with more zest and spirituality than is generally heard in our modern church services.

The fact that nine-tenths of our people, most of them Christians, and the most enlightened citizens on the earth, will go further to a singing-like we have at conventions than they will to church services prove there is something lacking about our church services that should be improved. If the churches would spend as much pains in promoting singing schools for their young folks as they do the B. Y. P. U.'s and Leagues and Endeavors, they would gain a much stronger hold on the people by reason of their better singing. The drift of our church music, especially in our towns, toward the operatic or classical is chilling to the common people who form the church's foundation.

The report comes from some of the best singers in the county failed to come to Slaton because they had gotten a statement that the Slaton people would not appreciate their kind of singing. I wish to assure them and all the other singers that if such a statement had gone out it is false, as proven by the crowds of Slaton people who attended the convention rallies and enjoyed them. There may be here as in most other towns, an exclusive few, mostly among musical instrument artists and their friends, who frown down on the kind of singing we have at conventions and in modern singing schools as being "tacky."

The prevalence of that idea in the church is what is driving the people to where they can enjoy the singing that appeals to them, in which they can join with heart and voice in sweet accord.

Let the Slaton community singing be continued at the club house at least every two weeks—W. P. Florence in Slatonite.

Gold In Adobe Walls.

The Mexican city of Guajuaju, built near the richest of adobe walls in the country, was originally constructed of adobe made of the refuse of these mines. As the early processes of extraction were very imperfect, the walls and floors of these buildings were thus full of gold. Things would have continued thus for an indefinite time, and the inhabitants would have been living yet in these valuable buildings, if the passage of a railway line nearby had not made necessary the demolition of about 100 houses.

A ONE MAN TOWN

A traveling man sold some goods to the proprietor of a general store in a small town. When the goods arrived they were not up to the sample and were returned. The house drew a sight draft on the merchant thru the local bank, which was returned. The letter asking the Postmaster in regards to the financial standing of the merchant was returned by the Government official marked "O. K." The house wrote the postmaster to secure a lawyer to collect the amount and received this reply:
"The undersigned is the merchant on whom you tried to palm off your worthless goods. The undersigned is the owner and president of the bank which returned your sight draft. The undersigned is the Postmaster whom you wrote and the undersigned is the lawyer you sought to obtain for your fake business. If the undersigned were not also pastor of the church at this place, he would tell you to go hell—Oklahoma Banker."

There was 45 cars of cattle loaded out from Brownfield Friday evening, this being the herd driven through the country from Midland, Texas on the T. & P. railroad, 125 miles south of here, to Dalhart, one of the extreme points of the Panhandle to the north. The parties were unable to get sufficient water for this number of cattle (1900 head) and had to stop here and load out. The only place a herd like this can water is in the big ranches, and this time of year, when we have little wind to turn the mills the ranches are nearly always short on water.

COUNTY JUDGE'S ORDER OF ELECTION

The State of Texas, County of Terry:—
Whereas on the 15th day of May, 1922, a petition was presented to me for an election in Common School District No. 14 of this county on the question of issuing bonds to provide funds to be expended in payment of accounts legally contracted in constructing and equipping a public school building of wooden material in said district, and authorizing a tax upon all taxable property within said district sufficient to pay the current interest on said bonds and provide a sinking fund, sufficient to pay the principal at maturity, said petition bearing the requisite number of signatures of property taxpaying voters of said district, and being in every respect in conformity to law, and it appearing that the said Common School District No. 14 has been heretofore established in accordance with law, and that said district contains an area of more than nine square miles, and that no other district has been reduced in area below nine square miles by reason of the creation of this district, and that said District No. 14 does not embrace any territory taken from other school districts that has an outstanding issue of bonds at date of such inclusion in this district.
Now therefore, I, D. J. Broughton, in my capacity as County Judge of Terry County, Texas, do hereby order that an election be held on the 15th day of June, 1922, at school hours in said Common School District No. 14 in this county, as established by the order of the County Board of Trustees, of date the 19th day of July, 1921, which is recorded in book 1 at page 18 of the minutes of said Board to determine whether the legally qualified taxpaying voters of the said district desire the issuance of bonds on the faith and credit of said district in the amount of $1,500.00, the bonds to be of the denomination of $100.00 each, numbered consecutively from one to fifteen both inclusive, payable in twenty years from their date, and bearing six per cent interest per annum, payable annually on April 10th of each year, to provide funds to be expended in payment of accounts legally contracted in constructing and equipping a public school building of wooden material in said district, and to determine whether the Commissioners' Court of this county shall be authorized to levy, assess and collect annually while said bonds, or any of them are outstanding a tax upon all taxable property within said district sufficient to pay the current interest on said bonds, and providing a sinking fund sufficient to pay the principal at maturity.

The State of Texas, County of Terry:—
Whereas on the 15th day of May, 1922, a petition was presented to me for an election in Common School District No. 14, of this county on the question of authorizing an additional tax of and at the rate of 50c on the $100.00 valuation of taxable property in said district for the purpose of supplementing the State school fund apportioned to said district, said petition bearing the requisite number of signatures of property taxpaying voters of said district, and being in all respects in conformity with law.
Now, therefore, I, D. J. Broughton, in my capacity as County Judge of Terry County, Texas, do hereby order that an election be held on the 10th day of June, 1922, at the school house in said Common School District No. 14 of this county, as established by order of the Minutes of the School Districts of this county, as shown in Vol. I at page 78 of the minutes of said school districts, to determine whether the majority of the legally qualified taxpaying voters of said district desire to tax themselves for the purpose of supplementing the State school fund apportioned to said district, and for local maintenance purposes, and to determine whether the Commissioners' Court shall be authorized to levy, assess and collect annually a tax of and at the rate of 50c on the $100.00 valuation of property in said district for that purpose, in addition to the taxes now levied against same.
C. J. Bonham is hereby appointed presiding officer for said election and he shall select two judges and two clerks to assist him in holding clerks to assist in holding same, and shall within five days after said election, make due returns thereof to the Commissioners' Court of this county as is required by law for holding a general election.
