The MARDI GRAS MYSTERY

by H. Bedford Jones

Illustrations by Irwin Myers

TWO elements distinguish this story: The gaiety that makes New Orleans stand out among American cities, and the dark struggle and intrigue that have come with the development of oil lands in the surrounding region.

The carnival period is enlivened by the sensational yet mysterious performances of a man masked in aviator's garb. It is a rich young man's Mardi Gras prank, but it leads him into the midst of a most amazing conspiracy. It leads him also to a meeting with an unusual girl; and the story that evolves is an enthralling blend of mystery, adventure and love.

Thrift

The rainy days always come! The "eat, drink, be merry" idea is alright if you have something laid away for the tomorrows; if you are saving a generous portion of your income.

The "rainy days" inevitably drench those who fail to save in the days of prosperity. Time passes swiftly—on the streets and park benches of every town are striking examples of those who failed to note its passing.

One of the fundamental purposes of this bank is to encourage saving of your funds and then protect them with the solidity of the Depositors Guaranty Fund of Texas in order that your accumulations may always be at your service for any "rainy day."

Your account will be welcome and protected—

DECORATION DAY CELEBRATED IN BROWNFIELD

By mutual agreement among the business men, all the stores were closed May 30th, while the men, the women and children celebrated the day by putting the cemeteries in Al condition and decorating the graves of the loved ones. It is said that the cemetery was never in better shape, but should be worked again in the near future to keep it in good shape.

The lodges, including the Legion decorated the graves of their members and fallen heroes, and the Baptist ladies spread a feast at the tabernacle at the noon hour.

The Stars and Stripes were in evidence at many homes throughout the town, and floated proudly from the flat pole at the Legion building all day. A nice program was rendered at the Legion Hall at night.

I. C. BURGESS SEEKS THE OFFICE COUNTY ATTORNEY

We are authorized to place in the announcement column the name of I. C. Burgess, who seeks your suffrage for the office of County Attorney of Terry county, subject to the action of the Democratic primaries in July.

Mr. Burgess has been here several years, during which he has conducted an abstract business along with his law practice, and has always been found straight and honest in all his business dealings.

Mr. Burgess was for two years the State Senator from Johnson county, Arkansas, and has the best interests of the people at heart.

A Defective Title May Rife Your Savings

You have heard or at least read of scores of people losing most, if not all, of their savings because of defective title to property.

Don't let this be your lot! Use the preventive. Let the abstract specialists determine whether your claim to ownership of certain property is secure.

We'll cover the whole situation regarding the property, and should there be taxes, mortgages or liens on the property—we'll tell you about it—any hazy transfers will be pointed out. On the other hand if the property receives our O. K., you can bank on it.

Our years of experience and training, coupled with accurate systematic records, enable us to furnish an abstract that is a "dead shot"—one that hits the mark every time.

Save the dollar marks, as well as valuable time lost in the courts. Discuss the subject with us now.

An abstract that's true will work FOR YOU.

TWENTY-SEVEN PIECE BAND ORGANIZED HERE

H. H. Copeland and J. C. Bond recently informed us that they had succeeded in organizing a twenty-seven piece brass band here, and that the instrument had been ordered and are expected any time now.

A local man, Mr. J. S. Powell will be instructor, and we are sure that we will soon have a band the old town will be proud of.

We believe the business men should do everything in their power to encourage this enterprise, for a good band is necessarily a good asset to any town.

A GREAT PORTION OF LYNN CO. HAILED OUT

News was received here Saturday morning that the east portion of Lynn county, or at least a wide place in the east half had been hailed out the night before, and a call for all the surplus cotton seed in this town and county was called for and gladly furnished.

We was called over the phone on Monday morning by Albert Curry, a former employe of the Herald to the effect that they escaped last Friday night but that another hail visited that section Sunday night and wiped up what it failed to get before.

This is serious alright, but there is still time to make a good crop on the Great South Plains.

About two inches of rain has fallen here since last Friday night, with a small hail reported at Tokio.

THE METHODIST-PRESBY- TERIAN REVIVAL

Rev. W. E. Hawkins Jr., of Fort Worth and Prof. C. G. Spindler, of Tulsa, Okla., will arrive here Saturday afternoon to aid in the revival campaign, beginning Sunday the 11th at the tabernacle.

Rev. Hawkins has already been introduced to the people of Brownfield, having held a successful meeting for the Methodist people here three years ago. Mr. Spindler comes highly recommended as a choir director and organizer of young people. The pastors at Waco, Houston, El Paso, Bryan and other places speak in the highest terms of his work.

It is hoped that the Christian forces of Brownfield will all lend their assistance that the church life of the town and vicinity may be built up in a spiritual way.

TERRY COUNTY MUST HAVE GOOD ROADS

Recent rainy weather has showed us the serious need of good roads, and it has also showed that you have to have modern machinery if you are to make real roads. The roads in Terry county are as flat as can be, while those in adjoining counties that are using modern machinery are in first class condition.

There are now several candidates out for the office of commissioner, and if you believe in good roads, be sure to interview these men before the primary comes off and see how they stand on this question.

We will gladly admit that roads that are worthy the name, cannot be built and maintained for a long, and no reasonable person expects it, and we do not expect to get our food and clothing nor schooling for the children for nothing. Roads costs money, but they are worth it.

Terry county is rich agriculturally, and we should stand behind none of our neighboring counties when it comes to roads.

CUSTOM crushing by Tankersley & Son.

Rev. Wheatley, pastor of the Central Christian church, ordered the Herald to his father at Henderson, Tenn., this week.

RAY BROWNFIELD BUILDING DRIVE-IN FILLING STATION

The ground is prepared and the foundation ditches are being dug one block west of the square for the concrete drive-in filling station being built by Ray Brownfield. It is said that when complete, it will be a plant the town may well be proud of. J. A. Gamble, we understand, will have the management of the station.

Not only this building, but the present prospects are good for two more brick or concrete buildings to go in beside this one, but they are not advanced enough to announce them just now, but suffice to say, the old town is likely to experience a big growth during the summer months.

Prospects are good for the ginning of from five to eight thousand bales of cotton here this fall, not to mention the usual big corn harvest.

The school matters have been adjusted by a new board taking charge and the old trustees say they are behind them with all the vim at their command, and really we have fourteen instead of seven trustees.

Put your shoulder to the wheel and shove along.

Misses Margaret Bell and Thera Lemmon returned home from Lubbock the latter part of last week, where they had been visiting and attending the Chautauqua.

- From eight to ten thousand bales of cotton and three hundred cars of corn is the talk for 1922.
There never was a time in the history of Terry county when the outlook was quite as optimistic. Is it any wonder that our moneyed men are planning improvements?

That land on the South Plains will take another jump this fall is a foregone conclusion. Better step on the gas and head for old Terry while you are thinking about the matter?

The nickel in times past functioned as a factor in finance, but now it has lost its attractive features. It is thrown around and the children no longer cry for it. It did hold a place in the marts of trade in making purchases at cash prices and in settling accounts, but now it is useful during business hours only to buy shoe laces for a legged man.

Mrs. Woodard renewed for the Herald and had it changed from Fayetteville, Ark. back to old Terry, as she has moved back.

That old where so dearly loved by lawyers examining jurors—have you read any newspapers about this case?—has been given a poke in the jaw by Judge Bingham in Roseburg, Oregon, who says: "A person has the right to believe what he reads in the newspapers is true and the fact that he has read about a case in court need not disqualify him for jury service."

We never could understand why the most ignorant numpskulls in the county should be the best qualified for jury service. We don't elect the benighted and ignorant to the bench as jurists, and we don't get the wheel-headed cranks of the community to fill our pulpits and school rooms. While on the subject of juries, we hear lots of cussing about the suspended sentence law, and almost invariably they cuss the judges. Now, as we understand it, it one says he does not believe in the suspended sentence law, that forthwith disqualifies him for jury service in a case where a suspended sentence is likely to be asked. The only remedy is to elect a legislature pledged to repeal the law or at least to modify it.

The Tale of a Carnival Joke That Led to Grim Realities
The Mardi Gras Mystery
By H. BEDFORD-JONES
The setting of this charming story is not the New Orleans which General Jackson defended, neither is it the New Orleans of George W. Cable; but the modern commercial metropolis made rich by shipping, industrialism and the development of oil, sulphur and other nearby resources.
However, the author does throw in some of the atmosphere that still clings to the historic place in the undiminished gaieties of Mardi Gras and Mi-Careme and in glimpses of "Cajunism" and the surviving pride and hospitality of Creole aristocracy.

CHAPTER I
Garnival.
Jaclyn Fell pushed the voluminous glass curtains between the voluminous over-panels in the windows of the Chess and Checkers club, and gazed out upon the riotous streets of New Orleans. Half an hour he had been waiting here in the lounge room for Dr. Cyril Anselmy, a middle-aged bachelor who had practiced in Opelousas for twenty years, and who had come to the city for the Mardi Gras festivities. Another man might have been irritated by the wait, but Jaclyn Fell was quite unruffled.

He had much the air of a clerk. His features were thin and unremarkable; his pale eyes constantly wore an expression of wondering aloofness, as though he saw around him things that he vainly tried to understand. In his entire manner was a staid reserve, which was no clerk, however; this was evident from head to foot in soberly blending shades of gray whose richness was notable only at close view. One fancied him a very precise sort of man, an old maid of the wrong sex.

Doctor Anselmy, an Inverness flung over his evening clothes, entered the lounge room, and Fell turned to him with a dry, tongueless chuckle. "You're the limit! Did you forget we were going to the Maillards' tonight? However, we need not leave for fifteen minutes yet, at least."

Doctor Anselmy laid aside his cap, stick and hat and dropped into one of the comfortable big chairs. "You intend to mask for the Maillards?" Anselmy cast his eye over the gray business attire of the little man. "I never mask," Jaclyn Fell shook his head. "I'll get domino and go in plain. Excuse me—I'll order a domino now. Black in a moment."

Doctor Anselmy followed the slight figure of the other man with speculative eyes. Well as he knew Jaclyn Fell, he invariably found the man a source of puzzled speculation. During many years Jaclyn Fell had been a member of the most exclusive New Orleans clubs. He was even received in the inner circles of Creole society, which in itself was evidence as to his position. At this moment he sat in a wicker chair in a wicker club he was found as a wicker master of chess. He never entered a tournament, yet he consistently defeated the champions in private matches—defeated them with a bewildering ease, a shy and apologetic ease, an ease which left the beholders incredulous and agast.

With all this, Jaclyn Fell was very much of a mystery, even among his closest friends. Very little was known of him; he was a lawyer and certainly maintained offices in the Maison Blanche building, but he never appeared in the courts and no case of his pleading was known. Anselmy knew him as well as did most men, and Anselmy knew a few who had courted him of having been a guest in Jaclyn Fell's home. There was a mother, an invalid, of whom Fell sometimes spoke and to whom he appeared to devote himself. The family, an old one in the city, promised to die out with Jaclyn Fell.

Anselmy puffed at his cigar and considered these things. Outside, in the New Orleans streets, was racketing the mad music of carnival. The week preceding Mardi Gras was at its close. Now, as Jaclyn was a man of means, he was a man of means, and he had a few well-placed friends in New Orleans. Here in New Orleans were jewels and costumes in a profusion of splendor; but here was preserved the underlying idea of the masquerade—that in concealment of identity lay the life of the thing!

When Jaclyn Fell returned and lighted his cigar he sank into one of the luxurious chairs beside Anselmy and indicated a newspaper lying across the latter's knee, its flaring headlines standing out blackly. "What's that about the Midnight Masquer?" He's not appeared again?" "What?" Anselmy glanced at him in surprise. "You've not heard? Good heavens, man! He showed up last night at the Lapeyrouse dance, two minutes before midnight, and he's a detective had been engaged, but was afterward found locked in a closet, bound with his own hands. The Masquer wore his usual costume, and went through the party famously, stripping everyone in sight. Then he backed through the doors and vanished."

The Sunset Hour

Jimmy Jarredson looked across the cardtable at Kitty Marstairs while she studied the cards she held. He looked long and searchingly, looked admiringly as well, for Kitty Marstairs was certainly good to look upon.

Just three months had the happiness lasted. Then Kitty, accompanied only by her aunt, had gone to Aiken for the spring season, and slipped away from there very quietly and came to some little obscure western town, where she had remained until now, when she had returned to her former social world—its very latest divorce.

Dr. Jarredson had been among the first to join the fighting forces. He had been "over the top," and through letters received from mutual friends "over there" Jarredson learned that Marstairs had won the cross of guerre for distinctive bravery under fire, saving, by his quick wit and action, his entire company from slaughter. He had suffered severe personal injuries, however, and upon his perital recovery, had been invalided home.

That day, Jarredson, during a few hours' stop-over in the city en route from Washington to attend the dance his wife was giving that night at their country home, had run into Marstairs, and not knowing that Kitty was among his wife's house guests, had insisted upon Marstairs coming home with him.

Mrs. Jarredson always had a welcome for any of Jimmy's friends, but there was consternation in her eyes when she saw who the unexpected guest was.

COUNTY JUDGE'S ORDER OF ELECTION

State of Texas, County of Terry:—Whereas, on the 15th day of May a petition was presented to me for an election in Common School District No. 14 of this county on the question of issuing bonds to provide funds to be expended in payment of accounts legally contracted in constructing and equipping a public school building of wooden material in said district, and authorizing a tax upon all taxable property within said district sufficient to pay the current interest on said bonds and provide a sinking fund, sufficient to pay the principal at maturity, said petition bearing the requisite number of signatures of property taxpayers voters of said district, and being in every respect in conformity to law, and appearing that the said Common School District No. 14 has been heretofore established in accordance with law, and that said district contains an area of more than nine square miles, and that no other district has been reduced in area below nine square miles by reason of the creation of this district, and that said District No. 14 does not embrace any territory taken from other school districts that has an outstanding issue of bonds at date of such inclusion in this district.

Now therefore, I, D. J. C. J. Bonham is hereby appointed presiding officer for said election and he shall select two judges and two clerks to assist him in holding

MESDAMES DOWNING AND BROWN ENTERTAIN

The Maids and Matrons' and Idle Wives were graciously entertained Monday afternoon, May 29th, at the hospitable home of Mrs. Downing, with Mrs. T. I. Brown assisting as hostess.

After a short business meeting of the Maids and Matrons, the two societies enjoyed progressive forty-two. There being five tables, a number of enthusiastic games were played with much zest. At the end of seven games, the hostess served a delicious salad and ice course, in the colors of the two clubs. Dainty ferns in tiny pots were the favors of each guest. This was one of the most enjoyable functions of the season, and combining as it did the two organizations, the occasion was one to be remembered, as the hostess so admirably arranged and furnished the entertaining in their own original way. Those present were Mesdames Bell, Enders, M. V., A. R., and A. M. Brownfield, May, Green, Lemmon, Dallas, Hurst, Pridaux, Randal, Fred Smith, Snodgrass, Shelton, Powell, Stricklin, Misses Miller, Castleberry, Bangham, and Daugherty. Mesdames Downing and T. I. Brown.

McADOO-HENDRICKS

Mr. J. E. McAdoo and Miss Armor Lee Hendricks, young people of this county, drove to the home of Elder C. B. Glasgow last Thursday at 5:00 p.m., where they were united in marriage. They left Friday morning for Iredell, Texas, where they will reside in the future.

Herald joins their friends in congratulations.

Postmaster T. G. Price is showing his progressive spirit and confidence in Brownfield by recently installing one of the latest canceling machines. This not only takes considerable of hard work off them and gives the postoffice force more time to devote to other matters, but makes it possible for them to take letters just a few minutes before train time, which is a great accommodation to the patrons of the office. Rah! for Price.

Mrs. Bert Doddridge of Seagraves, was here Monday, shopping.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hall spent Sunday in Lubbock.
