CITY AND COUNTY GROWING AT A RAPID RATE

Two years ago if one were traveling over this branch of the Santa Fe Railroad from Seagraves through Brownfield to Meadow and Ropesville, his vision would be rewarded with a view of several immense herds of cattle, a few scattering farm houses and occasionally a boxed and stipped school house on some high point of vantage.

Today he leaves a growing terminal with a progressive bunch of merchants that are up in harness for the betterment of their town and community and instead of huge ranches, many farm houses, surrounded with growing orchards, and fine stock greet the eye on each side of the road, many of the houses being built only this spring and others under construction.

At Brownfield he is rewarded by the sight of a town half pioneer and half modern, with the modern part fast gaining the ascendancy even in the business section.

Here is a town in which one is able to purchase almost any article that one eats wears or uses. A people who believe in their country, their schools and their churches. Scores of new residences are under construction besides innumerable one under repairs that class them as modern, not to mention many business houses just complete, under construction or being planned, which include a modern two-story brick rooming house and an up-to-now hotel also of brick.

Here the visitor finds a $25,000 addition to be built on their $50,000 school building that the most optimistic said four years ago would be large plenty for ten years to come. It was badly crowded the second year. Where they talk and not only talk but are planning two brick churches this fall, and the progressive citizens have begun to ask for a new court-house. With two modern gin plants and a third under construction.

From Brownfield to Meadow, a distance of sixteen miles that ninety five per cent of the land on each side of the track was in native grass two years ago is almost the reverse now—ninety-five percent in farm. Meadow is a thriving little town altogether new, with almost any kind of business from a bank to a barber-shop. Three years ago it had one store and the residences could be counted on the fingers of a one-arm man. They have recently created an independent district for school purposes and are to soon vote bonds to build a large brick school building. "Progress" is the pass word at Meadow.

The same conditions prevail on the

OLD TEXAS CATTLE BRANDS RECALLED

Cattle brands dating back to the time that Texas was a republic, are still in use on the ranges of Refugio county in southwest Texas.

The brand "JF" was recorded April 3, 1841, and is among those still in use, according to a letter to the Cattle Raisers' Association from Claude E. Heard, district and county clerk at Refugio. James Fox, pioneer cattleman, first had the brand, which is now used by his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Mary Fox.

The old Daniel Fox brand, an inverted "P" attached to an "F" was recorded Feb. 5, 1848, and is still the brand of the Fox estate. A number of other old brands were detailed in the letter.

E. B. Spiller, secretary of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers' Association, said the Refugio county brands were probably among the oldest in Texas.—Star-Telegram

W. B. English, the new gin man, has already completed his seed house and will use it as a storage for machinery as it arrives.

way and to Ropesville, for it is made up of the same kind of rollers.

Of course to those who have been here all the time during these three years and have watched this rapid development, it does not seem so very startling to make this trip, but let one who made the trip three years ago go over the route now, and he could not but wonder if he had not been suddenly transplanted back to ancient Bagdad, and the wonderful changes of the Arabian Nights were not being thrown on the screen of time for his special benefit. And while the changes of scene in the country, town and village has been rapid, even the most conservative reluctantly admit that the most radical changes are to be in the next few years.

LARGE CROWDS ATTEND COUNTY SINGING CONVENTION

It is estimated that there was fully 200 cars at the County Singing Convention at Gomez last Sunday, and a bare half of the crowd were able at any time to get in the big school auditorium.

Good singing and lots of it was the unanimous agreement, and the rather unwieldy crowd enjoyed itself the whole time.

There was nothing short about the dinner either, except the tables, and they were huge ones, but the Terry county housewives could not get the dinner on them.

Motion was made and seconded to have the next one at Brownfield the 3rd Sunday in July, was unanimously adopted.

Dear Mr. Stricklin—
We wish, through you, to express thanks to each of the old timers for the dandy tray given us by their kindness. We could have found no lower remembrance of their sincerity and good will.

Gratefully yours,

MRS. BAILEY BELIEVED TO BE BITTEN BY MAD DOG

A dog belonging to F. C. Bailey, who lives south of town, began acting curious Tuesday of this week, and finally bit Mrs. Bailey. The dog soon had another fit and died.

A local physician was called in to dress the wound, and it was decided to amputate the dog's head and send it to the Pasteur Institute at Austin, for analysis.

Several of the Rebekahs that belonged to the lodge here when it was disbanded a few years ago, met this week and notified all Rebekahs in reach to be on hand Wednesday night, April 25th for reorganization.

The eyes of the public is on you Rebekahs, and much new material is awaiting your action. Lots of newcomers with membership elsewhere are awaiting the outcome of your organization to transfer to you.

And while we are about it, remember that several reels of pictures of the Odd Fellows Widows and Orphans Home will be thrown on the screen at the American Legion Theatre next Thursday night.

This feature will be ABSOLUTELY FREE to everybody. Come see it.

Tax-Assessor J. C. Green is now making his rounds to see how much property the citizens of the county have.

BAND CONCERT AND SHOW TUESDAY NIGHT WAS FINE

When the American Legion boys of Brownfield give anything, it is not just half given—they give it and give it in some style, and from the smallest to the greatest feel at home in their hall and even us fellows who go out and forget that we are supposed to possess dignity, and laugh all we want to in our old corn-field style, seem to be welcome, and are at least never molested in our hilarity.

The shows consisted of one reel of illustrated news review, four reels of Will Rogers starring in a "Fruits of Faith," and a two reel comedy entitled "Casey Jones, Jr., all of which were rich and full of pep.

John S. Powell had the Brownfield band on hand and redereed a number of good selection, which were heartily applauded, and even in our section we heard many compliments passed on the rapid progress the band was making.

Two shows had to be given to accommodate the crowd, and the first one standing room was hard to get. The second show saw the large auditorium comfortably filled, and with the nominal charges of 15c and 25c, the proceeds amounted to nearly ninety dollars.

The only hint we wish to offer the Legion boys is that a good deal more ventilation would have been appreciated Tuesday night, and we know they will see that this is attended to the next big crowd they have.

ROPEVILLE HIGH SCHOOL PUTS ON PLAY HERE

A bunch of the Ropesville school students came down Monday afternoon, and got busy immediately with many devices to advertise the play to be staged by them that night in the school auditorium.

A nice crowd attended and found that the students had a good play and put it on well.

At the conclusion of the show, the professor accompanying them thanked the audience and announced that he and the students were well pleased with the receipts of the evening.

STATEMENT

Of the ownership, management, etc. required by the act of Congress of Aug. 24, 1912, of the Terry County Herald, published weekly at Brownfield, Texas, for April 1st, 1923.

State of Texas, County of Terry—
Before me a Notary Public in and for said county and state aforesaid, personally appeared A. J. Stricklin, who having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says he is the owner of the Terry County Herald and that the following is to the best of his knowledge and belief a true statement of the ownership and management of the above publication.

That the name and address of the editor, managing editor, publisher and business manager is—
A. J. Stricklin, Brownfield, Texas
That the owner is—
A. J. Stricklin, Brownfield, Texas
That the known bondholder, mortgages, etc. is—None.

How to Get Better Milk Prices

Now is the time to feed a real milk producing ration.

By raising the average of your winter milk deliveries with Cow Chow during the winter months you can expect better prices, and more milk accepted in the spring and summer.

The dairy farmer who brings in twenty gallons a day in the winter and then tries to deliver 40 gallons in the summer, gets the regular price for only 20 gallons, and the surplus price for the other twenty.

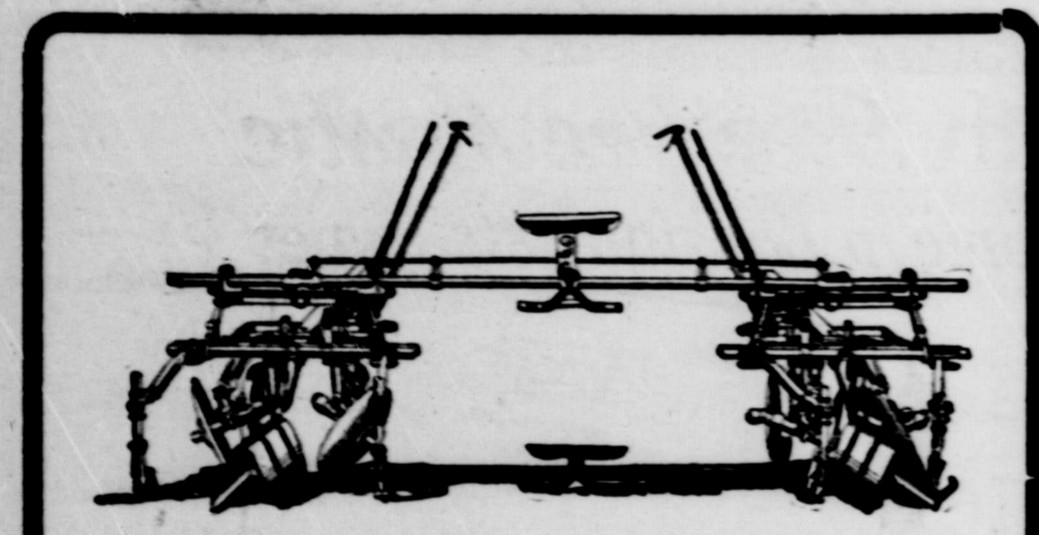

The dairy farmer who has a big fall and winter production establishes a high average for himself and gets a good price in the spring and summer on grass for as much milk as he made last fall.

Cow Chow now means more winter milk and more summer income.

Runs as Easily as a Single-Row Cultivator

Double the results of your labor whenever and wherever you can. Be a combined boss and hired man. It will give you a feeling of independence.

The McCormick-Deering P & O Two Row Lister Cultivator works just as easy as a single-row cultivator. Each gang follows its own team between the rows whether the rows are straight or otherwise.

One of the appealing features on the McCormick-Deering P & O is the wide range of adjustments for first and second cultivation, and the ease with which they can be made. The gangs have a double movement, either forward or backward, or in and out on the connecting tube. The weight of the gangs, whether in or out of the ground, is counterbalanced by the drivers weight.

These are merely a few features on the McCormick-Deering P & O Cultivator. Come in and give us a chance to demonstrate it.

THINK IT OVER
After God had finished making the rainmaker, the toad and the vampire, He had some waste material left of which he made a knocker. A knocker is a two legged animal with a corker screw soul, a water-tanked brain and a combination back-bone of jelly and glue. Where other men have their hearts, he carries a tumor of decayed principles. When the knocker comes down the road, honest men turn their backs; the angels weep in heaven and the devil shuts the door of hell to keep them out. Therefore don't be a knocker. I nodded, and he continued, "You notice that the blow came very close to the center of the heart. The murderer knew where to strike. If his knife had reached the place aimed for, the chauffeur would have died without uttering a word. In fact—"
He was prevented from saying more by the return of the others. At his entrance, they took the places they had occupied when the lights went out. I was asked to take the chair that Briffeur had been in. This placed Roche on my left, so near that I almost touched him, and Miss Potter about a foot away on my right. Doctor King took his seat on the left of the desk, which was directly in front of me and about eight feet away. The chair of the district attorney was at his side. Black and Webster stood near Bartley, who had seated himself on the desk.
For several moments he glanced around the room, trying to retrace for himself the way the row of chairs had looked when the lights had been extinguished. As his keen eyes studied us, a frown came to his face, lingered a moment, then faded away.
"You people in the front row," he commented, "were the nearest to the chauffeur. If anything was heard, you would have been the ones to hear it. Of course, the rattle of the murder would have drawn almost any other sound. The crowd was a sufficient one because of the sharp lightning, and made a little rustling noise of its own, yet it seems almost incredible that anyone could have crept up to Briffeur and struck him down without either Miss Potter or Roche having heard them."
Miss Potter flushed, and without waiting for him to say more she interrupted, "I never heard a thing; not a thing."
Bartley studied her carefully as he asked, "Are you sure?"
Her face paled, then the color returned, but again she replied, "I heard nothing until that horrible cry rang out."
I saw her shudder as if the memory of it were almost too much for her, but she continued bravely, "I knew it was beside me, and I wondered what had happened. It frightened me—so much—that I can't tell just what happened after that."
She seemed to be telling the truth; yet I could not understand how anyone had gotten near enough to Briffeur to kill him without the person next to him hearing his approach.
Bartley toyed with a piece of paper a second, then smiled as he said, "Of course, the cry started you, Miss Potter. But before or after it came, can you think of no little occurrence that might help us? Nothing at all?"
She was silent for a long time, then slowly, as if apologetic, she answered, "That is, I heard nothing, but I did think I felt something brush my dress—in the side next to Briffeur. I am not sure, however. I only thought something did. The next moment I heard him slip to the floor and knew something was wrong."
Bartley's eyes brightened at her remark, and he asked eagerly, "Can you show us just where your dress was brushed?"
She hesitated as if trying to collect her thoughts, and glanced down at her dark brown dress. Then she placed her hand on a spot a little not have been able to prove his statement, he knew enough to be dangerous. For myself, I believe the chauffeur could have told us and that he was killed to shut his mouth."

The district attorney made a little gesture of dissent. "I see that; but on the other hand, how do we know that Briffeur himself did not kill Sirke? He said, you remember, 'Sirke murdered—killed—killed.' Maybe he killed him himself."
Black nodded an emphatic agreement. This accorded with the theory he had advanced the night before. I could see that Bartley, however, was not convinced. As he made no comment, the attorney continued, "He said nothing more; but may we not say that if he had finished the job, there would have been a word said? He killed Sirke."
"Then why was the chauffeur killed?" Bartley asked with a sarcastic smile.
The lawyer shook his head slowly and answered that he advanced his argument as a theory only. "I have an idea," Bartley said, "that if the chauffeur had finished the sentence it would have been 'Syke murdered. I know who did it.'"

As I listened to both of their theories, one seemed to me just as likely to be correct as the other.

CHAPTER XI

In Which We Begin to Find a Motive

Bartley had some work for me to do, and I did not dine until the others had finished. While I was eating Currie wandered into the dining room and sat down beside me. The murder had taken all the life out of him. It was the first time that he had come so close to a crime. He seemed unable to forget the cry and those awful moments in the darkened room. We discussed the affair for a while; then I excused myself and went in search of Bartley.

I had been thinking for hours of the latest crime, and no solution had come to me. I could not understand how, in those few moments of darkness, the murderer had been able to approach the chauffeur near enough to kill him, nor why the people next to him had heard nothing.

When I told Bartley of my bewilderment, he answered with a little grin: "I agree with you, Pelt, it's very mysterious. It's the first time I ever heard of murder taking place at an inquest and in a room filled with people. There are no clues, apparently. To my mind, however, the real reason for the murder was to prevent Briffeur from testifying. Whoever killed him knew about what he would say, and feared that he would tell who had killed Syke."

Breaking in on him, I said, "But he could not have foreseen that the lights would go out and give him a chance? I thought that it was the storm that extinguished them."

He nodded. "That's true enough. It was that last flash of lightning. Darkness was just what he needed, and he took advantage of it. He had several moments in which to act. There were not many people near enough to the chauffeur to have killed him in that short time."

He rose, went over to his bag and brought back the knife with which the murder had been committed. For several moments he examined it, then he asked me to pass it over to me. "What do you think of it?"

It was a rather odd knife. It resembled a hunting knife, and the edge showed it had had a good deal of use. The blade was very sharp except at the point. It was too large to be carried in a man's pocket, but a woman could have hidden it somewhere in the folds of her clothing.

As Bartley seemed to expect some comment from me as I handed it back to him, I said, "Save for the fact it's not very sharp and seems to have been used a great deal, I can learn nothing from it."

He smiled as he turned the knife over and over in his hand. "Oh, there's more than that. It tells a great deal. The knife is unusual in shape and length. There was a time when it was used a great deal, and the owner kept it very sharp and clean. But for some time now he has neglected it. There is one very important thing that you have overlooked. You remember those little drawings I found on the magazine in Syke's room, the row of connected circles? I find the same thing here."

I gasped, and, reaching for the knife, looked at the wooden handle. There, faintly scratched on the wood, were a number of circles running one into the other.

"Do you think," I asked in excitement, "that it is the sign of some secret society?"

"No. It's simply this—that most of us, if we have a pen or pencil in our fingers, draw figures on whatever happens to be at hand. We do it without thinking, because it is a subconscious act; and, as a rule, we draw the same set of figures each time. Some one, having nothing to do, idly scratched these figures on this knife handle, hardly conscious of what he was doing. I believe the same person made the figures on the magazine and on the knife."

"Why do you think that?" I asked. "It had been scientifically proved that when a person plays with a pencil and idly draws figures, he always draws the same ones; and that they are symbols of something deep in his subconscious mind. These circles are so much alike that I think they were drawn by the same person."

I had a dim idea I had heard something similar to what he was saying in college, but just what it was I could not remember. As I started to hand him the knife, it slipped through my fingers and fell to the floor and stood quivering. Its point imbedded in the wood. With a sudden exclamation, Bartley picked it up and, to my astonishment, let it fall again and again. Each time the point struck right in the floor. Then he balanced it on his hand, smiling to himself. As he replaced it in his bag, he said, "I am glad you dropped that knife, Pelt."

"It seemed to me such an odd thing to say that I made no comment. 'We are going over to Syke's again,' he continued, 'to see Miss Potter. By the way, there's another thing, Pelt; you can aid me a good deal by solving."

"What's that?" I said.

"Find out why that dog did not bark the night of the murder. It's a puppy, noisy and active, and does not see strange people. The person that killed Syke, as far as we know, had to come down those long stairs and pass through the living room where the dog was. If it was some one from outside, that dog should have barked. But as far as we can find out, he never made a sound."

"It looks to me," I suggested, "as if the murder were committed by some one in the house."

Bartley did not answer until he had opened the door into the hall, then he paused for a moment. "There seems to be no motive for any of the family to have killed Syke. The little difficulty between Miss Potter and Syke does not seem important enough to consider. The will has been found and all the property is accounted for. His lawyer, you remember, discovered a large sum of money in the safe when it was opened." Then he proceeded down stairs.

It was only a short drive in Bartley's fast car to the Syke house. He offered no explanation of our call, and I hid my curiosity as well as I could.

As soon as the butler had gone, Bartley came at once to the object of his visit.

"Miss Potter," he said, "the butler testified this afternoon that he overheard words between Mr. Syke and yours? Would you mind telling me what they were?"

MEADOW BRIEFS

By Association

The week was ushered in by the arrival of a couple of youngsters: a boy at the home of Mr. G. J. Pursell, and a girl at Mr. N. S. Copeland's. Some body reported an enormous flock of geese going south, but it may have been storks. Did they reach Brownfield? Judging from the death announcements down there, the death rate must exceed the birth. Perhaps the sandstorms that circle about that burg confuses the noble birds.

Our new trustees visited a number of towns Friday on a tour of inspection of school buildings with a view of building a new one here. As there has been no announcement since their return, we presume they didn't find any they could carry off.

We are inclined to agree with the editor that the time has arrived for the building of a new courthouse and jail. Crime is on the increase with little probability of its being any better soon, and some place to try and keep the criminal is absolutely necessary. The present old hall would hardly make a respectable barn. Present indications are that we need a courthouse worse than we need school houses.

The roads, however, should not be neglected, especially the one from here to Brownfield. The sand pile just beyond the railroad is rather a bad advertisement for the business men and residents of that city. We guess our Commissioner is sick or is stalled somewhere in the sand.

Mrs. Carl Tate of Stephenville visited her sister, Mrs. A. L. Moorhead, the first part of the week.

Mrs. Warren Hollingsworth, of Seagraves, visited relatives in this community, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The Baptist brethren have secured the services of Bro. Burnett for two Sundays a month, and there were services at the church Sunday and Sunday night. He is above the average preacher usually found in rural communities, and his sermons are marked by great earnestness and a wonderful familiarity with the Bible. Dr. Moorhead is building a dirt tank near his house, and intends irrigating his garden—er have his wife do it. He is doing some of the work himself. It is really painful to watch that beg confuses the noble birds.

Our school closes Friday with exercises at night. There has been some little friction, but on the whole we have had a good school. The teachers have all done the best possible, perhaps, and we congratulate them and hope they will be able to do even better another year.

THERE ARE OTHERS IN THAT CLASS, TOO!

The editor of a country paper recently reported that he had received a news item one of his painting correspondents. The item read to the effect that a bride in the neighborhood had excited considerable comment among neighbors by kneading bread with her gloves on.

The editor, seizing upon the opportunity presented, used the item in his paper, adding an appendix: "The editor of this paper needs bread with his shoes on; he also needs it with his clothes on; but if some of the delinquent subscribers don't pay up pretty soon, he will need bread without a darn thing on."

A WONDERFUL PAGEANT

The fifth annual convention of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce will meet at San Angelo on May 21-22, and on the last evening, the city of San Angelo has planned a wonderful pageant as a fitting climax to the session.

Every town affiliated with the West Texas Chamber of Commerce is invited to take part in this pageant and all towns represented at the meeting are asked to send a young lady who will act as sponsor for that town. These young ladies will be designated as "Lady Lubbock," "Lady Plainview," etc. and will take part in the grand finale of the pageant.

The pageant itself will represent the progress of West Texas and it is expected that 500 people will take part in depicting the scenes from the history of this section.

Said bids to state the amount of interest offered on all funds and shall be accompanied with a certified check for $250.00, said check to be returned to the selected depository after making of bonds as required by law, on failure to make said bonds, said check shall go to the County as liquidated damages.

CITATION BY PUBLICATION

The State of Texas, To the Sheriff or any Constable of Terry County—Greeting:

You are hereby commanded to summon G. W. Snodgrass by making publication of this Citation once in each week for four consecutive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in some newspaper published in your county, if there be a newspaper published therein, but if not, then in any newspaper published in the 72nd Judicial District; but if there be no newspaper published in said Judicial District, then in a newspaper published in the nearest district to said 72nd Judicial District, to appear at the next regular term of the District Court of Terry County, to be holden at the Court House thereof, in the city of Brownfield, on the 5th Monday in April, A.D. 1923, the same being the 30th day of April, A.D. 1923, then and there to answer a petition filed in said Court on the 27th day of March, A.D. 1923 in a suit, numbered on the docket of said Court No. 734, wherein W. A. Bynum is Plaintiff, and G. W. Snodgrass is Defendant, and said petition alleges that plaintiff is the legal holder and owner for valuable consideration of five certain Vendor's Lien Notes for the sum of $184.00, each, dated November 15th, 1921, payable to the order of J. W. Hatton, at Brownfield, Texas, on or before 1, 2, 3, 4 and five years after their dates, respectively, with 8 per cent interest from their dates until paid, interest payable annually as it accrues, each of said notes providing that all past due interest and past due notes shall bear interest at the rate of 10 per cent per annum after the annual maturity thereof; said notes further providing that failure to pay either of said notes, or any installment or interest thereon when due, should at the option of the holder on them, or any of them, mature all of said notes; each of said notes further providing for 10 per cent additional to the amount due thereon as attorney's fees if placed in the hands of an attorney for collection or if collected by suit.

That each of said notes was given as part payment for all of Section No. 107 in Block D-11 in Terry County, Texas, and that a Vendor's Lien was retained in said deed to secure the payment of all the above described notes.

That defendant has failed and refused to pay Note No. 1 of said series of notes due November 15th, 1922, and the annual interest due on all said notes, due November 15, 1922; that on account of the failure of the defendant to pay said Note No. 1 and said interest, plaintiff has declared all the said notes due and payable and filed this suit for the collection of said notes and employed attorneys and agreed to pay them as attorney's fee the 10 per cent as provided for in said notes.

Plaintiff asks judgment for the full amount of said notes, interest, and attorney's fee, for foreclosure of Vendor's Lien, as it existed on the 15 day of November, 1921, for order of sale, costs of suit, and other relief to which he may be entitled.

Herein fail not but have before said Court, at its aforesaid regular term, in this writ with your return therein, showing how you have executed the same.

Given under my hand and the seal of said Court, at office in Brownfield, Texas, on this 27th day of March, 1923.
