"DO YOU KICK?"

Be quick to kick and make a fuss,
But when you kick, kick to us,
For that kind of kickin' is our delight,
Because we always make things right.

Come or phone down to Magnolia oil station, headquarters for high grade Gasoline and Kerosene, clear and pure. Get your car to using Magnolene motor oils. The quicker you do this the better for your car and your pocket-book. Some people are finding this out, as we sold sixty seven bbls. 3500 gallons last month. Fall in line.

MAN RUN DOWN BY CAR HERE SATURDAY

The day has long since passed when one can safely jay-walk here, especially on Saturday afternoons, and no one tries it any more, or we would probably be compelled to report more accidents than we do.

The crossing between the State Bank and the Turner land office was the scene Saturday afternoon of what like to have proved a fatal accident. Mr. D. H. Eddy was crossing this usually crowded place when a car that was driven by three young girls approached him at what dozens of bystanders described as twenty miles an hour and hit him squarely. He is large but active man, and caught the axle and hood after being knocked down and was dragged about 30 feet nearly to the curb.

Medical attention was given him immediately, and examination showed several severe bruises. It was not long until he was back on the street smoking a long cigar and bragging how he stopped a Ford going twenty miles per hour.

Of course the girls were very sorry and were profuse in apology, but that did not help a bruised man, and we are of the opinion that a heavy fine is going to be the only cure for reckless speeders.

GRANDMA AND ELDORA LEWIS HAVING GOOD TIME

Mrs. May Lewis, nee Covention, of Brownfield, Texas, is visiting relatives near Oakland. She is accompanied by her daughter, Miss Eldora Lewis, who is a sister of Mr. J. F. Covention, of near Oakland, and this is her first visit here in forty-one years. To say her brothers and sisters were rejoiced at seeing her at the old home again, accompanied by her daughter, would be putting it very mildly.

Mr. J. F. Covention and his brother, Forest, lives at the old home where the family grew to manhood and womanhood, and a day or two after Mrs. Lewis arrived they prepared a dinner and held a family reunion of the children now living.

Forty-one years is a long time, and many changes have taken place, but Mrs. Lewis says there yet remain many familiar scenes, and that she will enjoy every minute of her visit. She will return to her home about July 1st.—The Yellow (Ark.) Mountain Echo.

THIRD CLASS POSTMASTER EXAMINATION JULY 14, 1923

At the request of the Postmaster General, the United States Civil Service announces an open competitive examination to be held on July 14th, 1923, to fill the position of postmaster at each of the postoffices hereinafter named at which a vacancy exists or is about to occur. It is expected that appointments will be made as a result of this examination unless it is found in the interest of the service to fill the vacancy by transfer or promotion.

The following is a list of offices for which the examination will be held with the salary and date of vacancy of each.

Office	Salary	Date of vacancy
Brownfield	$1,800	May 15, '23
Stanton	2,000	July 15, '23

OMISSION

The name of the John B. King Land Company should have appeared on the list of cash subscribers to the picnic printed in last issue, through oversight, and same did not appear on list handed the Herald. The amount the subscribed was $2.

TAX ELECTION

Let the voter keep in mind that an election will be held here Saturday to see whether or not the trustees are to be allowed to assess and collect $100 on each $10000 valuation of the property in the Brownfield Independent School District. Everybody concedes that the assessment is too high but with the present rate it has to be valued high to secure sufficient revenues to run the school.

Of course it is not the intention of the trustees to keep the land at its present high value and use the dollar rate too, but to use in their judgment, after values are lowered within reason, just what it will take to run the school as economically as possible and yet have a school such as the people demand.

It is your school, and the trustees are your servants, and they await the action of their constituents Saturday and shall gladly abide thereby.

CONVENIENCE AND SAFETY

We are constantly endeavoring to make this bank a universal servant of this territory. For your convenience we are equipped to furnish you with Traveler Cheques, negotiable by you the world over without identification; but if lost not cashable without your signature; thereby providing you with convenient methods of always having ready funds when you are away from home, yet absolutely safe.

While not at home, your account with us rests under the protection of the Guaranty Fund of the State of Texas, guaranteeing every dollar on open deposit. Thus in these two phases of service we are equipped to surround your funds whether at home or in transit with the best and safest protection known. We invite your account.

Runs as Easily as a Single-Row Cultivator

Double the results of your labor whenever and wherever you can. Be a combined boss and hired man. It will give you a feeling of independence.

The McCormick-Deering P & O Two Row Lister Cultivator works just as easy as a single-row cultivator. Each gang follows its own team between the rows whether the rows are straight or otherwise.

One of the appealing features on the McCormick-Deering P & O is the wide range of adjustments for first and second cultivation, and the ease with which they can be made. The gangs have a double movement, either forward or backward, or in and out on the connecting tube. The weight of the gangs, whether in or out of the ground, is counterbalanced by the drivers weight.

These are merely a few features on the McCormick-Deering P & O Cultivator. Come in and give us a chance to demonstrate it.

TO THE PEOPLE OF TERRY COUNTY AND TERRITORY

Brownfield and the Chamber of Commerce want you and your family to come and enjoy the day with them on July 4th. Come early and attend all events; let's all have an enjoyable day together on the 4th. We have made plans for everything to be FREE and want you and your family to enjoy the day. Bring your baskets of dinner and let's have a big community spread at noon. Terry has never fallen down on the dinner party in her existence and she WILL NOT fall down this time.

We want the entire day to be open and free to you. We will be better pleased if you do not leave a one at home. When the Farm Labor Union of the county are ready for their picnic and speaking later in the summer, then give us a chance to co-operate with you and let us help you. Let's have a co-operative community; we will all have a good time together. Come, everybody.

ANNOUNCEMENT TO THE GENERAL PUBLIC

The swimming season is now on. Come to the swimming pool and enjoy the refreshing water. It is our aim to so conduct the pool that there can be no objectionable features therein.

Allow your children to come and enjoy the refreshing water. Their moral as well as their physical welfare will be carefully looked after while here by Mrs. W. H. Harris and myself. Ladies only on Tuesdays and Fridays from 4 to 7 p.m. (No men allowed on the premises at these hours and days) and men only at other times except families coming at the same time will be allowed, and children of 12 years and under at all times. Sunday morning there will be no swimming during church services.

What's the Difference in Mule Feed?

IT'S not the amount of feed you give your mules but the kind. Just a monotonous diet of corn, oats with hay fails to supply work animals with a sufficient variety of diet to keep them in good shape. Mules fed in this fashion get plenty "to fill 'em up."

Picture yourself sitting down to meals of bread and water. You would soon lose your health. If you could have plenty of good meat, and fresh vegetables, your health would soon come back.

You don't need as big a bucket to measure out a feed of O-Molene as you do for a feed of corn and oats. It takes much less O-Molene.

O-Molene contains the variety of foodstuffs necessary to keep mules in perfect condition. You get more work from them. Mules like O-Molene because it is made exceedingly appetizing by a special process of crushing the select grains. O-Molene is being used by many of the biggest mule owners in the country, because it is the cheapest in the long run.

WHAT IS THAT LAND WORTH AN ACRE?

It may look well worth its price, but you'd better be sure. If the expense of a lawsuit is coming out of the returns for your crop, or if back taxes or an unsettled mortgage are going to be cut out of your rents, well, it's not worth the price after all.

GETTING OFF TOO LIGHT

The trial of oil swindlers in Fort Worth is putting the fear of God in the hearts of many, to such an extent that oil journals which, a few weeks ago were too big to go in the ordinary mail box can now hardly be found in the morning mail. The details of how these arch speculators duped the people—making a specialty of the aged, who were led to believe that an investment in these companies would provide for their old age—makes more gruesome reading than does the average murder trial. Murder is more often done in the heat of passion, but these men preyed in cold blood upon the widow and orphan, and the only injustice the whole affair is the leniency of their sentences.—Baltimore Herald.

The newspapers that ran the ads of these swindlers were almost if not altogether as guilty as the "operators" themselves. The Herald was offered many of these ads, some of them on a fifty-fifty basis, but they were rejected like a poison dose that they were. The skirts of the Herald is clear of the blood of the innocent in this line anyway.

SYNOPSIS

PROLOGUE—Realizing that she has a possible chance of being saved, as the young American girl, a package which he asks her to deliver to the American ambassador in London. She is saved.

CHAPTER I—In London, former Miss "Tommy" Beresford and Miss Prudence Cartwright, Tuppence's friends, arrange to form an organization, "The Young Adventurers, Ltd." Tuppence takes a house in London, and meets a man, Edward Whittington, who offers her easy employment, but on giving her name as "Jane Finn," which she had heard on the street, Whittington, whom he is seeking for, Tuppence is told to return next day.

CHAPTER II—In the morning the girl finds Whittington's office deserted, in answer to an advertisement signed "Jane Finn," the two recent notes from "Mr. Carter" and "Julius P. Vandemeyer." Carter is really a high government official. He speaks of the Bolsheviks in England, and engages the pair to attempt to find Jane Finn, whom he is seeking for important reasons of state.

CHAPTER III—Next day the pair visits Heronheimer, American millionaire, living at the Ritz hotel. He is looking for his cousin, Jane Finn, who had disappeared after landing from the Louisiana boats, and employs them to search for her. They discover a certain Mrs. Vandemeyer is a Louisiana survivor. Seeking information from her, Tuppence recognizes Whittington in a caller on Mrs. Vandemeyer. Tommy trails him.

CHAPTER IV—Whittington leaves for France to investigate whom Tommy had summoned. Tommy, having heard the two men, "Mr. Carter" and "Julius P. Vandemeyer," to a house in Soho. He secures details of a Bolshevik and later plot to assassinate the government. Success apparently depends on finding a set of trails made between the allies during the war. Tommy is caught listening, and knocked senseless.

Number one's voice held suddenly a dangerous quality: "What has gone wrong?" "Nothing, but—" "But what?" "The Labor leaders. Without them, as you say, we can do nothing. If they do not declare a general strike on the 28th—" "Why should they not?" "As you've said, they're honest. And in spite of everything we've done to discredit the government in their eyes, I'm not sure that they haven't got a smacking faith and belief in it."

"I know. They abuse it unnecessarily. But on the whole, public opinion swings to the side of the government. They will not go against it." Again the Russian's fingers drummed on the table. "To the point, my friend. I was given to understand that there was a certain document in existence which assured success."

"That is so. If that document were placed before the leaders, the result would be immediate. They would publish it broadcast throughout England, and declare for the revolution without a moment's hesitation. The government would be broken finally and completely."

"Then what more do you want?" "The document itself," said the German bluntly. "Ah! It is not in your possession? But you know where it is?" "No."

"Does anyone know where it is?" "One person—perhaps. And we are not sure of that either."

"Who is that person?" "A girl."

"A girl? The Russian's voice rose contemptuously. "And you have not made her speak? In Russia we have ways of making a girl talk."

"This case is different," said the German subtly. "How—different?" He paused a moment, then went on: "Where is the girl now?" "The girl?" "Yes."

"She is—" "But Tommy heard no more."

CHAPTER V
Tuppence Enters Domestic Service. When Tommy set forth on the trail of the two men, it took all Tuppence's self-command to refrain from accompanying him. However, she contained herself as best she might, consoled by the reflection that her reasoning had been justified by events. The two men had undoubtedly come from the second floor flat, and that slender thread of the name "Rita" had set the Young Adventurers more sure upon the track of the abductors of Jane Finn.

The question was what to do next? She retraced her steps to the entrance hall of the mansion. It was now tenanted by a small Irishman, who was polishing brass fittings, and wincing the latest air with a good deal of vigor and a reasonable amount of accuracy.

He glanced round at Tuppence's entry. There was a certain amount of the genuine element in the girl; at all events, she invariably got on well with small boys. "Well, William," she remarked cheerfully, in the best approved hospital-bent morning style, "getting a good shine up?"

The boy grinned responsively. "Albert, miss," he corrected. "Albert he is," said Tuppence. She glanced mysteriously round the hall. The effect was purposely a broad one, in case Albert should misinterpret, she leaned toward the boy and dropped her voice: "I want a word with you, Albert."

Albert ceased operations on the fittings and opened his mouth slightly: "Look! Do you know what this is?" With a dramatic gesture she flung back the left side of her coat and exposed a small enameled badge. It was extremely unlikely that Albert would have any knowledge of it—indeed, it would have been fatal for Tuppence's plans, since the badge in question was the device of a local corps organized by the ardentness in the early days of the war. Its presence in Tuppence's coat was due to the fact that she had used it for pinning in some flowers a day or two before. But Tuppence had sharp eyes, and had noted the corner of a three-penny detective novel protruding from Albert's pocket, and the immediate enlargement of his eyes told her that her tactics were good, and that the 4th would rise to the level of "American detective force," she hissed.

ed boy. "It's as English as anything. No, I sold as a friend of mine knew a young girl. Annie wasn't best pleased. She's stopped on till today—" "Really, she said, but really it's as us to put you against the place. Are you going up now, Miss? Step inside the lift. No. 20 did you say?" And he winked.

Tuppence quelled him with a stern glance and stepped inside. As she rang the bell of No. 20 she was conscious of Albert's eyes slowly descending beneath the level of the floor.

"A smart young woman opened the door. "Come about the place," said Tuppence. "It's a rotten place," said the young woman without hesitation. "Regular old out-walks interfering. Accused me of tampering with her letters. Me! The flap was half undone anyway. She's a wrong 'un, that's what she is. Swell clothes, but no class. Cook knows something about her—but she won't tell—scared to death of her. And suspicious! I can tell you."

"But what more Annie could tell, Tuppence was never destined to learn, for at that moment a clear voice with a peculiarly steady ring to it called: "Annie!"

"The smart young woman jumped as if she had been shot. "Yes, ma'am." "Who are you talking to?" "It's a young woman about the situation, ma'am."

"Slow her in then. At once." "Yes, ma'am."

Tuppence was ushered into a room on the right of the long passage. A woman was standing by the fireplace.

"In spite of my warnings, you make up your mind to go through with it, you will find everything arranged. You have lived for two years with Miss Duffin, the Parsonee, Llanelli, and Mrs. Vandemeyer can apply to her for a reference. "Max I be permitted a word or two of advice? I suggest that you should represent yourself to the extent you are a former V. A. I. who has done domestic service as a professional. There are many such at the present time. That explains away any irregularities of voice or manner which otherwise might awaken suspicion. "Whichever way you decide, good luck to you."

"Your sincere friend, "MRS. CARTER." Tuppence's spirits rose mercurially. Mrs. Carter's warnings passed unheeded. The young lady had far too much confidence in herself to pay any heed to them.

There was still no word or message from Tommy, but the morning post brought a somewhat dirty postcard with the words: "Mrs. O. K." scrawled upon it.

At ten-thirty Tuppence surveyed with pride a slightly battered tin trunk containing her new possessions. It was artistically corded. She drove to Fiddington, and left the box in the cloak room, she then repaired with a handbag to the fastnesses of the ladies' waiting-room. Ten minutes later a metamorphosed Tuppence walked demurely out of the station and entered a bus.

It was a few minutes past eleven when Tuppence again entered the hall of South Audley mansions. Albert was on the lookout, attending to his duties in a somewhat desultory fashion. He did not immediately recognize Tuppence. When he did, his admiration was unbounded. "Bliss! If I had known you! That right-out's top-hole." "Glad you like it, Albert," replied Tuppence modestly. "By the way, am I your cousin, or am I not?" "Your voice, too," said the delight-

The Secret Adversary

By AGATHA CHRISTIE

(Copyright Dodd, Mead & Company)

For the first time Tuppence felt afraid. She had not feared Whittington, but this woman was different. As if fascinated, she watched the long, cruel line of the red, curving mouth, and again she felt that sensation of panic pass over her. Her usual self-confidence deserted her. Vaguely she felt that describing this woman would be very different to describing Whittington. Here, indeed, she might expect to meet mercy.

Mrs. Vandemeyer motioned to a chair. "You can sit down. How did you hear I wanted a house-painter maid?" "Through a friend who knows the lift boy here. He thought the place might suit me."

Again that basilisk glance seemed to pierce her through. "You speak like an educated girl?" "Glibly enough, Tuppence ran through her imaginary career on the lines suggested by Mr. Carter. It seemed to her, as she did so, that the tension of Mrs. Vandemeyer's attitude relaxed.

"I see," she remarked at length. "Is there anyone I can write to for a reference?" "I lived last with a Miss Duffin, the Pursonage, Llanely. I was with her two years."

"And then you thought you would get more money by coming to London. I suppose? Well, it doesn't matter to me. I will give you whatever you want. You can come in at once?" "Yes, ma'am. Today, if you like. My box is at Paddington."

"Go and fetch it in a taxi, then. It's an easy place. I am out a good deal. By the way, what's your name?" "Prudence Cooper, ma'am."

"Very well, Prudence. Go away and fetch your box."

"Thank you, ma'am."

Tuppence withdrew. The adventure had begun, but she felt less elated than she had done earlier in the morning. It crossed her mind that if the unknown Jane Finn had fallen into the hands of Mrs. Vandemeyer, it was likely to have gone hard with her.

CHAPTER VI

Enter Sir James Peel Edgerton. Tuppence betrayed no awkwardness in her new duties. The daughters of the archdeacon were well grounded in household tasks. Mrs. Vandemeyer's cook puzzled her. She evidently went in deadly terror of her mistress. The girl thought it probable that the other woman had some hold over her. For the rest, she cooked like a chef, as Tuppence had an opportunity of judging that evening. Mrs. Vandemeyer was expecting a guest to dinner, and Tuppence accordingly laid the beautifully polished table for two. She was a little exercised in her own mind as to this visitor. It was highly possible that it might prove to be Whittington. Although she felt fairly confident that he would not recognize her, yet she would have been better pleased had the guest proved to be a total stranger.

At a few minutes past eight the front door bell rang, and Tuppence went to answer it with some inward trepidation. She was relieved to see that the visitor was the second of the two men whom Tommy had taken upon himself to follow.

He gave his name as Count Stepanov. Tuppence announced him, and Mrs. Vandemeyer rose from her seat on a low divan with a quick murmur of pleasure. He bowed low over her hand.

Tuppence returned to the kitchen. "Count Stepanov, or some such," she remarked, and affecting a frank and unvarnished curiosity: "Who's he?"

"A Russian gentleman, I believe." "Come here, ma'am."

"Once in a while. What do you want to know for?"

"Fancied he might be sweet on the mistress, that's all," explained the girl, adding with an appearance of suddenness: "How do you take one up?"

"I'm not quite easy in my mind about the soufflé," explained the other. "You know something," thought Tuppence.

Whilst waiting at table, Tuppence listened closely to all that was said. She remembered that this was one of the men Tommy was shadowing when she had last seen him. Already, although she would hardly admit it, she was becoming uneasy about her partner. Where was he? Why had no word of any kind come from him? She had arranged before leaving the Blitz to have all letters or messages sent on at once by special messenger to a small stationer's shop near at hand, where Albert was to call in frequently. True, it was only yesterday morning that she had parted from Tommy, and she told herself that any anxiety on his behalf would be absurd. Still, it was strange that he had sent no word of any kind.

But, listen as she might, the conversation presented no clue. Boris and Mrs. Vandemeyer talked on purely indifferent subjects. Tuppence brought in the coffee and liqueurs and unwillingly retired.

She cleared away and washed up with a breathless speed acquired in hospital. Then she slipped quietly back to the boudoir door. The cook, more leisurely, was still busy in the kitchen, and if she missed the other, would only suppose her to be turning down the beds.

At last the conversation inside was being carried on in too low a tone to permit hearing anything of it. She dared not reopen the door, however gently. Mrs. Vandemeyer was sitting almost facing it, and Tuppence respected her mistress' lynx-eyed powers of observation.

Nevertheless, she felt she would give a good deal to overhear what was going on. Possibly, if anything unforeseen had happened, she might get news of Tommy. For some moments she reflected desperately, then her face brightened. She went quickly along the passage to Mrs. Vandemeyer's boudoir, which had long French windows leading onto a balcony that ran the length of the flat. Slipping quickly through the window, Tuppence crept noiselessly along till she reached the boudoir window. As she stood there, it stood a little ajar, and the voices within were plainly audible.

Tuppence listened attentively, but there was no mention of anything that could be twisted to apply to Tommy. Mrs. Vandemeyer and the Russian seemed to be at variance over some matter, and finally the latter exclaimed bitterly:

"You are going about everywhere with Peel Edgerton. Not only is he, perhaps, the most celebrated king's counsel in England, but his special hobby is criminology! It is madness!"

"I know that his eloquence has saved untold men from the gallows."

The Voices Within Were Plainly Audible.

said Mrs. Vandemeyer calmly. "What of it? I may need his assistance in that respect some day. If so, how fortunate to have such a friend!"

"You are a clever woman, Rita; but you are also a fool! He guided by me, and give up Peel Edgerton."

"I think not."

"You refuse? There was an ugly hint in the Russian's voice."

"I do."

"Then, by heaven," snarled the Russian, "we will see—"

But Mrs. Vandemeyer also rose to her feet, her eyes flashing.

"You forget, Boris," she said, "I am accountable to no one. I take my orders only from—Mr. Brown."

The other threw up his hands in despair.

"You are impossible," he muttered. "Impossible! Already it may be too late. They say Peel Edgerton can smell a criminal! Perhaps even now his suspicions are aroused. He guesses—"

"Mrs. Vandemeyer eyed him scornfully.

"Reassure yourself, my dear Boris. He suspects nothing. You see to forget that I am commonly accounted a beautiful woman. I assure you that is all that interests Peel Edgerton."

"Besides, he is extremely rich. I am not one who despises money. The 'shews of war' you know, Boris?"

"Money—money! That is always the danger with you, Rita! Believe you would sell your soul for money. I believe—"

He paused, then in a low, sinister voice he said slowly: "Sometimes I believe you would sell—us!"

Mrs. Vandemeyer smiled and shrugged her shoulders.

"The price, at any rate, would have to be enormous," she said lightly. "It would be beyond the power of anyone but a millionaire to pay."

"Ah!" said the Russian. "You see, I was right."

"My dear Boris, can you not take a joke?"

"Of course. Let us not quarrel, Boris. Touch the bell. We will have some drink."

Tuppence beat a hasty retreat. She paused a moment to survey herself in Mrs. Vandemeyer's long glass, and be sure that nothing was amiss with her appearance. Then she answered the bell demand.

The conversation that she had overheard, although interesting in that it proved beyond doubt the complexity of both Rita and Boris, threw very little light on the present negotiations. The name of Jane Finn had not even been mentioned.

The following morning a few brief words with Albert informed her that nothing was waiting for her at the stationers'. It seemed incredible that Tommy, if all was well with him, should not send any word to her. A cold hand seemed to close round her heart. . . . Supposing . . . She choked her fears down bravely. It was no good worrying. But she went at a glance offered her by Mrs. Vandemeyer.

the hall to show the visitor out. He had given her a piercing glance before. Now, as she handed him his hat and stick, she was conscious of his eyes raking her through. As she opened the door and stood aside to let him pass out, he stopped in the doorway.

"Not been doing this long, eh?" Tuppence raised her eyes, astonished. She read in his glance kindness, and something else more difficult to fathom.

He nodded as though she had answered.

"V. A. D. and hard up, I suppose? Good place here?"

"Very good, thank you, sir."

"Ah, but there are plenty of good places nowadays. And a change does no harm sometimes."

"Do you mean—?" began Tuppence.

But Sir James was already on the "spines" stairs. He looked back with his kindly, shrewd glance.

"Just a hint," he said. "That's all. Tuppence went back to the party more thoughtful than ever."

Dad is the one who buys the turkey—and for his expense and trouble he draws the neck and wing.

"True, it is mother who dars the box, but who pays for the darn sock? When a burglar is in the cellar, it's Dad who gets a kick in the back. When company comes, dad he figets like a puppy chewing a string. When he carves he is as clumsy as a woman in a side-saddle. When he wants to smoke he is sent to the woodshed. But with all Dad's faults, there is something about him that we more than love."

"Dad is as steady as a hay wagon as certain as the drip from a loose faucet. When Dad's forehead wrinkles like a last year's apple, it is probably because he is thinking of the price of coal. Sometimes Dad's sober presence is like an instrument whose strings steal into your soul with a song with a song that sounds like 'Home Sweet Home.'"

TERRY COUNTY FARMER GIVES CAPOIZING DIRECTION

By V. B. Reeves.

Dear Editor:—I wish to explain through the columns of the Herald the ease of caponizing. Most people think this is a secret known only by a few, but this is a mistake. It is not at all a tedious or difficult task.

The cockerels to be caponized should be about like a quail in size and appearance, and weighing between one and two pounds; more than six and not over ten weeks old. The beginner may practice on a bird that has been killed for table use if he prefers. The birds to undergo operation should be confined in a cool, dark place, absolutely away from feed and water for 36 hours before the work is attempted.

In order to successfully perform the operation, one should be equipped with the following: knife for making incision and spreaders for holding apart the ribs, probe for tearing over intestines, and a special form of tweezers for removing the testicles.

When the birds to caponize are ready, place on a box or barrel, secure a cord around the feet, place another cord around the wings and make the cords taut with a small weight. Pluck a few feathers just in front of the hip joint (these will come out easily as they are ready to moult) stand in front of chicken so the breast will be toward you; locate the last two ribs with the forefinger of the left hand, and place the blade of the knife between them, and with a firm steady pressure, draw toward you making a cut about one inch in length. Insert the spreader so you can see to work. Take the probe and tear the membrane over the intestines. Now you can see a small, yellowish object lying close to the backbone with a blue artery just back of it. Insert the tweezers and grasp the testicle firmly; being very careful not to tear the artery; turn the tweezers a little each way to loosen the testicle; then twist around and around, drawing the parts toward you as you twist. If the bird is small the cord will twist into, but if large, they will have to be cut when pulled outside.

Now take out the spreader, turn the bird over and proceed as before. When operation is complete, water the birds first and then give feed; do not let the birds crowd at night after the operation. In a few days wind puffs may develop on a few capons; this can be remedied by taking a long stitch with a common darning needle and tying the ends of thread in a hard knot.

I keep capons up a few days after the operation so that I can look after them easily. I never attempt to caponize the small strain of chickens. Capons make good "mothers" and anyone wishing further advice I will be glad to give it. Now is the time to caponize.

I hope to hear of a lot of it being done as it is very profitable. There is very little danger of killing the birds; in fact you don't even have to watch and get the moon right.

LUBBOCK OFFICER SLAYS CAR SALESMAN

By V. B. Reeves.

Lubbock, June 17.—Alvie Hooper, connected with an automobile agency of this city, was killed by deputy constable John T. Halbert and Halbert probably fatally wounded, as the result of a gun fight between the two last night.

Following the exchange of shots in front of the Methodist church, Halbert ran toward the Lubbock Sanitarium and fell on the lawn as he turned up the walk leading to the main entrance of the building. In a disconnected statement, Halbert said that while making his rounds, he met Hooper who was of exceptionally dark complexion, walking with two women, one of whom was supposedly Mrs. Hooper. He indicated that he believed the man was a negro in company with two white women and followed the three until they entered a house. Halbert then started to return to town, he said, and after walking a few blocks he was overtaken by Hooper. "Are you the man who was following me?" Hooper demanded.

"I might be," was Halbert's answer. Halbert declared that Hooper then drew his gun and shot him through the abdomen. Halbert then opened fire and shot Hooper four or five times at close range, according to his story. Without waiting to see the effects of his shots he ran to the hospital.

Hooper was an automobile salesman about 30 years old, and is survived by a wife who is so overcome by grief that she is unable to throw any light on the circumstances surrounding the shooting. Halbert is about 45 years old and well known here.

M. & N. W. RAILROAD SOLD TUESDAY JUNE 5TH 1923

The Midland & Northwestern Railroad was sold at public auction at Midland, Tuesday, June, 5th, being bought by Attorney Gresham of the T. & P. Railroad, that road being the principle creditor of the M. & N. W.

While it is not known what disposition will be made of the M. & N. W., it is generally believed by those familiar with the situation that the purchasers will make the necessary repairs to the road and operate it.

The country served by this line has in the past two years changed considerably, many thousands of acres of new land has been put in cultivation, and the prospect for the immediate future are such that if the road is rehabilitated that its source of revenue will be made much greater than before.

Much has been said lately in regard to the University lands between Seminole and Midland. With the operation again of this road, and when the legislature sees fit to allow this land to come on the market, the value will no doubt be greatly enhanced. This line passes through, or is adjacent to, the greater portion of this land.

It is hoped that the purchasers of the Midland & Northwestern will make the necessary repairs and again give Seminole railroad connections with the Texas & Pacific at Midland.—Seminole Sentinel.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT

House Joint Resolution No. 16.

Proposing an amendment to Article 8, of the Constitution of the State of Texas, which relates to taxation and revenues, by adding a new section to be known as Section 9a, directing the Legislature to provide for the construction, operation and maintenance, under State control, a State system of highways; providing for an election for the ratification or rejection of amendment herein proposed, and making an appropriation to defray the expenses of said election.

Be it resolved by the Legislature of the State of Texas:

Section 1. That there be submitted to the people of Texas, for ratification or rejection at a special election provided for herein an amendment to article 8, of the Constitution of the State of Texas, amending article 8, of the Constitution of the State of Texas, by adding thereto a new section to be known as Section 9a, which shall read as follows:

Section 9a. The Legislature is authorized and directed to provide for the creation, establishment, construction, maintenance and repair of a system of improved highways throughout the State; and in order that the State may provide the means, revenues and instrumentalities the establishment and maintenance of such system of highways, the Legislature is empowered to levy and cause to be collected specific excise and ad valorem taxes, in addition to those permitted for other purposes in the Constitution, but such an ad valorem tax shall be imposed only for the purpose of retiring the bonds authorized by vote of the people of this State as provided for hereinafter in this Section.

When said system shall have been designated and taken over for the State as provided in Section 4 hereof, the Legislature is authorized to make provision for the equitable compensation to such counties for the value of such improvements as have been heretofore been constructed by the counties in the State.

Provided, also, that save for the State highway system, in all other respects, Counties shall have the right to build, construct and maintain roads, turnpikes, and bridges within their boundaries and the Constitutional provisions relating thereto are not qualified or repealed by reason hereof.

The Legislature, at any Regular or Special session, is authorized and directed to pass and enact all appropriate legislation necessary to carry out and effectuate the purpose and intent of these articles.

Sec. 2. The governor of the State is hereby directed to cause to be issued his necessary proclamation for an election to be held on the fourth Saturday in July, 1923 at which election the qualified electors of this State for adoption or rejection of the Constitution and Laws of the State. Said election shall be held under and in accordance with the General Election Laws of the State, and the ballots for said election shall have written or printed thereon in plain letters the following words:

"OFFICIAL BALLOT": "For the Amendment to Article 8, of the Constitution of the State of Texas, providing for a State system of highways."

Those voters who favor such amendment shall erase by marking a line through the words, "Against amendment to Article 8 of the Constitution of the State of Texas, providing for a State system of highways." Those who oppose such amendment shall erase by marking through them the words, "For the amendment to Article 8 of the Constitution of the State of Texas, providing for a system of highways." And the result of the election shall be published and declared according to the majority of votes cast in said election.

Sec. 3. The sum of Five Thousand Dollars, or as much thereof as may be necessary is hereby appropriated out of any fund in the treasury not otherwise appropriated for the purpose of paying the necessary expenses of the proclamation and publication of this amendment and the election to be held thereunder.

S. L. STAPLES,
Secretary of State.
