BROWNFIELD EXPECTS YOU JULY FOURTH

People will be here on the glorious Fourth from the four quarters, and the business and farming interests of the county got uneasy about feeding the vast throngs with an ordinary basket dinner and decided last week to make it a barbecue, and ten heaves were subscribed to make it a go before the Chamber of Commerce meeting ended, and several others have been given since. Terry never does things by halves. They are a proud people, a good people, a co-operative people—God bless them.

The Terry County Chamber of Commerce; the citizens of the county, are united in bidding you far and near to spend JULY THE FOURTH as their guests. They have prepared an elaborate line of varied entertainments for you, and they are going to expect you to be their guests. They are preparing cats for a crowd of ten thousand. Come and get your share.

Hundreds of flags will bedeck the old berg on that day and every one of them will join in a WELCOME to you.

There will be no gambling devices whatever allowed on the grounds. Arrange to meet your old friends in Brownfield, JULY FOURTH.

METHODIST MEETING ON IN FULL SWING NOW

Prof. C. G. Spindler, choir director and young peoples' worker, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, arrived last Saturday, and has already succeeded in getting the fingers of the town lined up, having been here last year and being already acquainted. The Brownfield orchestra is helping the choir make music. Two pianos are being used.

Rev. J. W. Baugman, local pastor, is doing the preaching. He was given good hearing by a large crowd Sunday night, and his week day night crowds are satisfactory. The tabernacle has been well seated for the meeting, and extra lights added.

FARMERS UNION PICNIC HERE AUGUST 4TH

For some time the Farmers Union of Terry county have been planning a picnic here and are able this week to announce a date, it being on the 4th day of August, at which time there will be no religious revivals going on, as they are desirous of getting speakers of national reputation and use the tabernacle for that purpose.

Don't get it into your head now that because they are to have a picnic of their own that they are not going to co-operate with the barbecue here the 4th of July, for they are some of them giving beets, but they want a day apart for speakers. This speaker will make the rounds of the county the fore part of that week and wind up here with a big rally, Saturday August 4th.

The business interests of Brownfield are proud of the Terry County Union, and most of them endorse the principles of the union, for them are not mixing up with politics and every thing else, but making hay while the sun shines.

TAX ELECTION CARRIES BY BIG MAJORITY

That Brownfield citizens are determined to have a good school was demonstrated again Saturday when they voted the dollar limit by a vote of almost 5 to 1, the totals being 67 for and 14 against. Very little interest was taken either way, most people seemingly thinking the tax would carry by a safe majority.

This will permit the board to greatly lower the valuations and yet not use the entire dollar at present and run a nine months affiliated school. If you are looking for good schools, churches and people, locate here.

Mrs. Dr. Ralph Lemmon and baby have returned from Dallas after a visit of several weeks.

JULY 4TH

OUR NATION'S BIRTHDAY SINCE 1776

In commemoration of Uncle Sam's birthday, this bank will not be open on Wednesday, July 4th, 1923.

We are expressing the hope that Terry County and her trade territory will be Brownfield's guests at the 4th of July picnic, and that everyone will enjoy the day.

LARGE CROWD INVADERS MEADOW TUESDAY P.M.

In order to finish up the booster trip of last week, and to forget no town in the county, 20 or 25 cars of the Brownfield Boosters visited the little city of Meadow Tuesday afternoon, immediately after the 9 o'clock closing hour here, carrying with them the Brownfield band.

On their arrival in Meadow, they were met and welcomed by a large crowd of the men and women who are putting Meadow on the map, and on being assembled, E. H. Jones, of their Chamber of Commerce gave a hearty welcome address. Responses were given by Judge Neill and M.L. Copeland.

The band rendered a pleasing concert, after which the visitors were treated to lemonade, which proved real refreshing after the drive.

Meadow promised to be here by a big majority, July 4th.

ANDY MEADOW DRAWS 20 YEARS SENTENCE

San Angelo, June 12—The jury here tonight sentenced W. A. Meadow, an Andrews county ranchman, to 20 years in the State penitentiary for the murder of Asa Rawls, on Meadow's ranch on April 17, 1922.

William Meadow, son of Andy, was sentenced to 99 years last year at Barstow for the same crime. An appeal is pending before the Court of Criminal Appeals.

The defence in Andy Meadow's case filed motion for a new trial.

LIFF SANDERS TO PREACH HERE SUNDAY

Elder Liff Sander, of Lubbock, will fill the pulpit at the Church of Christ here Sunday at the 11:30 and 8:00 o'clock hours, and as usual will be prepared to give his hearers a good gospel sermon. Everybody cordially invited and made to feel welcome.

He will fill the pulpit at Gomez on Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. L. L. Cobb and children, of Seminole, have been here recently on a visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Bynum.

BROWNFIELD BOOSTERS VISIT TRADE TERRITORY

Fifteen cars packed to the guard, assembled in front of the Hill Hotel last Thursday morning to start on the trade excursion west of Brownfield, to thank these good people for the trade they have been giving us in the past and to personally invite them to make merry with us at the big picnic and barbecue here July 4th.

Practically every business firm of importance in the city was represented that could possibly get away, and the aggregation was accompanied by our 32 piece band, that has become the pride of almost every citizen in the county. In all there were some sixty or seventy people who were out for business as well as pleasure.

Leaving Brownfield at 7:00 A. M., the first stop was made at Gomez, where after a short concert and a hearty handshake, some of the citizens of that community joined us on the trip west, among them being Jim Moore, prominent young merchant of that place, and R. Stice, farmer.

The next stop was at Tokio, where after a short stop and concert, merchant J. C. Casey passed the Y. B.'s to the crowd, and elected the entire crowd honorary members of the Tokio Lodge, Sons of Rest.

Plains was reached at about 9:30, and either the inhabitants were not expecting us or had not got up. Anyway, those who were on hand had the glad hand given them and a short band concert of three select pieces.

Then came the rah! rah! chorus, which was as follows: Leader—who wants Plains' trade? Boosters—who wants Plains' trade? Brownfield! Brownfield! Brownfield! Leader—who wants Plains on the 4th of July? Boosters—who wants Plains' trade? Brownfield! Brownfield! Brownfield!

The next stop was Broncho where the same performance was had, but only two or three individuals were on hand to hear what was said outside the bunch from Brownfield.

Tatum, N. M., was reached at about 10:00 o'clock their time, and as they were expecting us at eleven o'clock their time, not many were on hand to welcome the bunch from here, but they soon began to put in appearance thick and fast. Tatum is made up of a bunch of the liveliest people of any small inland town we ever saw, and their way of making one feel welcome is so frank that you soon forget they are strangers. They have a pretty little town, a good country around it, good people, splendid schools and churches. These people are largely made up from this part of Texas, so it is no wonder they are well to give the glad hand. There are the Dukes, Daniels, Keys, Gainers, Foremans, James, Holts, as well as other too numerous to mention. We thought we had a Rah! bunch, but the local professor at Tatum had a bunch of High School boys and girls trained that made our crowd almost ashamed of ourselves, for they were trained to put their welcome Rah! over with a will. Our crowd hated to leave Tatum. At noon (our time) Mrs. Jim Key, of the Tatum Hotel had a dinner seldom equaled, and hardly ever approached, and to say the boosters done it justice—but ask the Tatum folks. They said they would be on hand the Fourth.

The next stop was Plainview, where a concert was given, circulars distributed and the yell for the trade and invitation to the barbecue given. Arrival was made at Lovington, the thriving county capital of Lea county (N.M.) at about 2:30 our time, and of course an hour before they were expecting us—but our honking car that paraded the square twice got 'em there in a hurry, and they were the same kind of live wires we left at Tatum only more of them.

Lovington is one of the best inland towns we ever saw, having almost all modern conveniences, including ice, light and water plants, real modern hotel facilities, a splendid school system, and as patriotic citizenship as you ever met. They soon had the district courtroom ready for the big crowd that gathered, and the kindly President of the Chamber of Commerce bid us a hearty welcome, explaining that the entire citizenship joined him in welcome. Responses were made by Morgan L. Copeland, President of the Terry County Chamber of Commerce, Judge Geo. W. Neill and County Clerk H. R. Winston, who also led the yell crowd.

After a short band concert, we had to hit the road for the 51 mile drive to Seagraves. However, the writer made a short call on Editor Jones of the Lovington Leader, and found him busy and as optimistic as all editors should be. He has a good plant and doing a thriving business.

Several Lovington cars piloted us out a few miles, and circling back stopped their cars and waved us adieu. Seagraves, that hustling little city at the terminal of this branch of the Santa Fe, was reached at about six o'clock, and a good crowd was on the streets to bid us a hearty welcome. Some time was spent in visiting the many business places, and stretching our weary limbs after the long run. A good long concert was given by the band which seemed to be enjoyed by the people, after which, Mr. Steelone, one of her prominent citizens told the entire Brownfield crowd the drinks were on him, and we understand he had a lot of them to pay for. Seagraves promised to have a good delegation at Brownfield the 4th, also Seminole in their own county is having a picnic that day. It was the intention of the Boosters to make Seminole on the trip and invite them up here but heard of their picnic on the same date. The writer called on the Progress but found that Editor Bachman had few de cup.

Brownfield was reached about 8:00 o'clock, and a good crowd had gathered to welcome the Boosters home in front of the Hill Hotel, where the last concert and the last yells of the day were given. These are really the people who are trying to put Brownfield on the map.

The trip was remarkably lucky as only one car was put out during the entire trip, and all are agreed that the 200 mile spin around the circle will be worth much to Brownfield in the future.

SUNDAY SCHOOL AND B.Y.P.U. INSTITUTE
One of the most successful B. Y. P. U. and Sunday School Institutes that was ever held in the local Baptist church, was held here week before last.

The work was led by Miss Inez Ketchum, a state worker, sent out by the State Board. There was four classes all being conducted at the same time. In these classes sixty-eight were enrolled, and fifty-one of them took examinations, making creditable grades.

Classes were led by Miss Ketchum, Douglas Carver, Prof. J. D. Rankin, and the pastor. A thirty minute recess period was given each evening at 8:15 o'clock, while wholesome refreshments were served.

Runs as Easily as a Single-Row Cultivator

Double the results of your labor whenever and wherever you can. Be a combined boss and hired man. It will give you a feeling of independence.

The McCormick-Deering P & O Two Row Lister Cultivator works just as easy as a single-row cultivator. Each gang follows its own team between the rows whether the rows are straight or otherwise.

One of the appealing features on the McCormick-Deering P & O is the wide range of adjustments for first and second cultivation, and the ease with which they can be made. The gangs have a double movement, either forward or backward, or in and out on the connecting tube. The weight of the gangs, whether in or out of the ground, is counterbalanced by the drivers weight.

These are merely a few features on the McCormick-Deering P & O Cultivator. Come in and give us a chance to demonstrate it.

LAMESA C. OF C. MAKES FLEA FOR BLUE QUAIL

At a regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Lamesa Chamber of Commerce, held on the 6th day of June, 1923, it was unanimously voted to bring to the attention of the people the value of the blue quail, and if possible to aid in a movement to prevent their total extermination, which will surely occur if decisive measures are not adopted to check their wild and wholesale slaughter.

The quail is the oldest known bird whose flesh during all periods of history has been a sustaining and delicious food for mankind. It was a quail that supplied the children of Israel with meat when they were starving on their journey from Egypt to the Promised Land. The blue quail is the one bird that can be domesticated, and if not shot at and other wise mistreated, can be more easily raised than other domestic fowls.

Many farmers in our country are now raising them around their homes and in some instances they roost with the chickens. Their delicious merriment comes at a time of year when the frying sized chickens have been used up and it is too cold to go fishing. They can be raised in West Texas by the millions if they are treated right. They are not a "game bird" in the same sense as the "Bob White" and there is little more sport in hunting them than it would be in hunting the Leghorn chicken. They are intended by nature as a domestic fowl, and if people can be persuaded to respect the rights of others, they can be raised in abundance on every farm, thus adding to the happiness of every home. As it is, what must be the feeling of a family who have grown some one drive up on their premises and shoot down their gentle little birds even before the mother quail have let them go to make their own living? The blue quail will thrive in any part of the State if not molested, and it is not possible that the present generation have the intelligence and ability to domesticate a least one bird, when our remote ancestors set us an example in the turkey, chicken, duck, goose and guinea and other fowls. We appeal to the press, to thoughtful people and to the sportsman, to deal fairly with the blue quail while there is a chance to be blessed by its existence. What is needed is a strong sentiment for their preservation and propagation, and a law protecting them where domesticated the same as the barnyard fowls. In other words, let there be a distinction between the domesticated and undomesticated quail. We call upon the West Texas Chamber of Commerce and our papers to take up this matter and give it proper agitation.

If any one doubts that these birds can be domesticated and raised to the profit and happiness of the home, if you will come to Dawson county we will take you to several homes that are doing that very thing. All that is needed to make the blue quail as plentiful as the chicken is for the people to know the value of protecting them, and then they will be protected.—Lamesa Chamber of Commerce.

OLD TIMERS REGULAR

Promptly on the dot Monday evening, June 18th, the screens began to slam on the front doors at Marshall and Helen's wide open home, and the happy, laughing, welcome old timers poured in, and soon surrounded the dozen tables prearranged with pencils, paper and spotted bones, and they lost no time in beginning the 42 games, at which some have become adept. The time pieces were as well dead, for such things as hours and minutes were unthought of. The tag of the bell at the first table was the only thing that disturbed the deep interest of the merry past timers, as usual present.

Mun and Wade, Ben and Lottie Jack and Kate, Jawn and Cap, Jessie and Roy, Ellen and Simon, Homer and Fozelle, Mahota and Satch, Stella and George, Dennis and Mary, Sallie and O. E. Texie and the other Geo. and Fay (who happened to be sitting here). All came along, John and Pearl, and among the oddities were John Sr., and the Missus, Bob and Bernice were invited; Jim K. and his wife showed us that 42 is not unknown at Lou; Katie brought Pappo in but lost him to later find him in the kitchen.

Nothing but pleasing merriment opened. The games suddenly stopped along toward the last, when Hatie and Helen began to hand around real big glasses of sweet tea and faintly wrapped sandwiches filled with a delicious collection of oriental hostesses. All's well that end well and so did.

Cap and Wade will double up on the next installment at Ben's Bungalow next Monday evening. The only one to be disappointed will be that don't come.—Wun uv em.

WOOD SAYS $13 PER CAPITA ASSURED

Austin, Texas, June 15.—Sufficient funds will be available to give the common schools an apportionment of $13 per capita for the next two years, Senator Wood said in a speech Monday afternoon in the Senate, in which he opposed the passage of the $6,000,000 public school fund bill.

The figures he said, were given him by Comptroller Smith, he said, are based on the receipts of revenues for 1922 and anticipated revenues. The sum estimated available for the period as given was $17,189,317.00.

T. E. Clark, of the Gomez country and one of Terry's prime farmers was in town last Saturday. He, as well as many other farmers that we interviewed, reported that although they had replanted lots of the stuff this year, crops were now looking fine.

The Secret Adversary by Agatha Christie

SYNOPSIS

PROLOGUE—Reaching that she has a possible chance of being saved, as the young American girl, Barbara, which he asks her to deliver to the American ambassador in London. She is saved.

CHAPTER I—In London, former Lieut. "Tommy" Beresford and Miss Prudence Cowley, "Tuppence" are in charge of a nurse, form an organization, "The Young Adventurers, Ltd." Tuppence makes a business appointment with a man, Edward Whittington, who offers her easy employment, but on giving her name as "Jane Finn," which she had heard on the street, Whittington shows agitation and Tuppence is told to return next day.

CHAPTER II—In the morning the girl finds Whittington's office deserted. In answer to an advertisement signed "Jane Finn" the two receive notes from "Mr. Carter" and "Julius P. Hershimmer." Carter is really a high government official. He speaks of a mysterious "Mr. Brown," head of the Bolsheviks in England, and engages the pair to attempt to find out who he is, and to seek for important reasons of state.

CHAPTER III—Next day the pair visit the Heronham, American millionaire, at the Ritz hotel. He is looking for his cousin, Jane Finn, who had disappeared after leaving from the London boats, and employs them to search for her. They receive a copy of a letter from Mrs. Vandemeyer, a Louisiana survivor. Seeking information from the "Tuppence" recognizes Whittington in a caller on Mrs. Vandemeyer. Tommy trails him.

CHAPTER IV—Whittington leaves for France, Hershimmer and Tommy had summoned follows him. Having heard the two names, "Mr. Brown," Tommy trails "Boris," Whittington's companion, to a house in London. In the evening, Tommy and while in the dining room, details of a Bolshevik and labor plot to overturn the government, since a parently depends on fighting a war treaty made between the allies during the war. Tommy is caught listening and knocked senseless.

CHAPTER V—Seeing sinister relations between Whittington and Mrs. Vandemeyer, Tuppence determines to spy on the latter. She disguises herself and secures employment as a parlor maid in the Vandemeyer home.

CHAPTER VI—During a conversation between a visitor, "Boris" and Mrs. Vandemeyer, in which the name of Sir James Peel Edgerton, famous criminal lawyer, is mentioned, Tuppence hears talk of an "organizational" day Edgerton visits Mrs. Vandemeyer and on leaving advises Tuppence to give up her position, but refuses to give a reason.

CHAPTER VII

Julius Tells a Story.
Dressed appropriately, Tuppence duly sallied forth for her "afternoon out." Albert was in temporary absence, but Tuppence went herself to the stationer's to make quite sure that nothing had come for her. Satisfied on this point, she made her way to the Ritz. On inquiry she learnt that Tommy had not yet returned. It was the answer she had expected, but it was another nail in the coffin of her hopes. She inquired for Julius Hershimmer. The reply she got was to the effect that he had returned about half an hour ago, but had gone out immediately.

Tuppence's spirits revived. It would be something to see Julius. Perhaps he could devise some plan for finding out what had become of Tommy. She wrote her note to Mr. Carter in Julius' sitting-room, and was just addressing the envelope when the door burst open.

"What the—!" began Julius, but choked himself abruptly. "I beg your pardon, Miss Tuppence. Those footmen down at the office would have it that Beresford wasn't here any longer—hadn't been here since Wednesday. Is that so?"

Tuppence nodded. "You don't know where he is?" she asked faintly.

"I? How should I know? I haven't had one darned word from him since we parted at the depot on Wednesday."

"What depot?"

"Waterloo. Four London and Southwestern road."

"Waterloo?" frowned Tuppence.

"Why, yes. Didn't he tell you?"

"I haven't seen him either," replied Tuppence impatiently. "Go on about Waterloo. What were you doing there?"

"He gave me a call. Over the phone. Told me to get a move on, and hustle. Said he was trailing two crooks."

"Who?" said Tuppence, her eyes opening.

"I see. Go on."

"I hurried along right away. Beresford was there. He pointed out the guy you hunted. The big one was mine, the guy you hunted. Tommy shoved a ticket into my hand and told me to get aboard the cars. He was all plain to sleuth the other crook." Julius paused. "I thought for sure you'd know all this."

"Julius," said Tuppence firmly, sit down in that armchair and tell me the whole story with as few fancy turns of speech as possible."

"Well," began Julius, "I got into one of your dear old-fashioned first-class British compartments. The train was just off. I did a bit of prospecting along the corridor to the next coach. Whittington was there right enough. When I saw the skunk, and thought of poor little Jane in his clutches, I felt real mad that I hadn't got a gun with me. I'd have tickled him up some."

"We got to Bournemouth all right. Whittington took a cab and gave the name of an hotel. I did likewise, and we drove up within three minutes of each other. He hired a room, and I hired one too. So far it was all plain sailing. Well, he just sat around in the hotel lounge, reading the papers and so on, till it was time for dinner.

"I began to think that there was nothing doing, that he'd just come on the trip for his health, but I remembered that he hadn't changed for dinner, though it was by way of being a slap-up hotel, so it seemed likely enough that he'd be going out on his real business afterward.

"Sure enough, about nine o'clock, so he did. Took a car across the town—mighty pretty place by the way. I guess I'll take Jane there for a spell when I find her—and then paid it off and struck off along those pine-woods on the top of the cliff. It was there, too, you understand. We walked, maybe, for half an hour. There's a lot of villas all the way along, but by degrees they seemed to get more and more thinned out, and in the end we got to one that seemed the last of the bunch.

"It was a pretty black night, and the carriage drove up to the house was dark as pitch. I could hear him ahead, though I couldn't see him. I turned a curve and I was just in time to see him ring the bell and get admitted to the house. I just stopped where I was.

"Whittington didn't come out again, and by and by I got kind of restive, and began to mouch around. All the ground floor windows were shuttered tight, but upstairs, on the first floor (it was a two-story house) I noticed a window with a light burning and the curtains not drawn.

"Now, just opposite to that window, there was a tree growing. It was about thirty feet away from the house, maybe, and I sort of got it into my head that, if I climbed up that tree, I'd very likely be able to see into that room. So I started up.

"It wasn't so easy by a long chalk! The rain had made the boughs mighty slippery, and it was all I could do to keep a foothold, but bit by bit I managed it, until at last there I was level with the window.

"After then I was disappointed. I could only see sideways into the room. Just as I was going to give it up, and climb down limboously, someone inside moved and threw his shadow on my little bit of wall—and, by gum, it was Whittington!

"After that, my blood was up. I'd just got to get a look into that room. It was up to me to figure out how. I noticed that there was a long branch running out from the tree in the right direction. If I could only swarm about halfway along it, the proposition would be solved. Very cautiously, inch by inch, I crawled along. At last I got safely to where I wanted to be.

"There was a table with a lamp on it in the middle of the room, and sitting at that table, facing toward me, was Whittington right enough. He was talking to a woman dressed as a hospital nurse. She was sitting with her back to me, so I couldn't see her face. I caught a word or two of what they said. Whittington seemed to be doing all the talking, and the nurse just listened. He seemed very emphatic—once or twice he beat with his fist on the table.

"Presently, he seemed to get to the end of what he was saying. He got up, and so did she. He looked towards the window and asked something—I guess it was whether it was raining. Anyway, she came right across and looked out. Just then the moon came out from behind the clouds, and I was scared the woman would catch sight of me, for I was full in the moonlight. I tried to move back a bit. The jerk I gave was too much for that rotten old branch. With an almighty crash, again. He replied dryly, "You fell with a considerable portion of one of my trees, into one of my newly planted flower-beds."

"I looked the man. He seemed to be a doctor, at least, was plumb straight. "Save, doc," I said, "I'm sorry about the tree, and I guess the new bulbs will be on me. But perhaps you'd like to know what I was doing in your garden? I think the facts do call for explanation," he replied, "and to begin with, I wasn't after the spouse."

"He smiled. "My first theory, but I soon altered my mind. By the way, you are an American, are you not?" I told him my name. "And you?" "I'm Doctor Hain, and this, as you doubtless know, is my private hospital."

"I made up my mind in a flash. "Why, doctor, I said, "I guess I feel an almighty fool, but I owe it to you to let you know that I wasn't the Bill Sikes business I was up to. Then I went out and scumbled out something about a girl. I started out the stern American business, and a nervous breakdown, and finally explained that I had found I recognized her among the patients at the home, hence my nocturnal adventures."

"I guess it was just the kind of a story he was expecting. "Quite a romance," he said gently, when I'd finished. "Now, Doc, I went on, "will you be frank with me? Have you had here at any time a young girl called Jane Finn? He repeated the name thoughtfully. "Jane Finn?" he said. "No."

"I was charmed, and I guess I showed it. "You are sure?" "Quite sure, Mr. Hershimmer. It is an uncommon name, and I should not have been likely to forget it."

"Well, that was flat. It laid me out for a space. I'd kind of hoped my search was at an end. "That's all right," I said at last. "Now, there's another matter. When I was lying in that damned branch, I thought I recognized an old friend of mine talking to one of your nurses. I purposely didn't mention any name because, of course, Whittington might be calling himself something quite different down here, but the doctor answered at once. "Mr. Whittington perhaps? That's the fellow," I replied. "What's he doing down here? Don't tell me his carves are out of order."

"Doctor Hain laughed. "No. He came down to see one of my nurses, Nurse Edith, who is a niece of his? "Why, fancy that!" I exclaimed. "Is he still here?" "No, he went back to town almost immediately. "What a pity!" I exclaimed. "But perhaps I could speak to his niece—Nurse Edith, did you say her name was?"

"But the doctor shook his head. "I'm afraid that, too, is impossible. Nurse Edith left with a patient to-night about 10. It seems to be real unlucky," I remarked. "Have you Mr. Whittington's address in town? I guess I'd like to look him up when I get back." "I don't know his address. I can write to Nurse Edith for it if you like," I thanked him. "But say what it is wants it. I'd like to give him a little surprise."

"That was about all I could do for the moment. Of course, if the girl was really Whittington's niece, she might be too cute to fall into the trap, but it was worth trying. My foot soon got all right. I said good-bye to the little doctor chap, asked him to send me word if he heard from Nurse Edith, and came right away back to town. Say, Miss Tuppence, you're looking mighty pale!"

"It's Tommy," said Tuppence. "What can have happened to him?"

"Buck up; I guess he's all right really. Why shouldn't he be? See here; I said at last. "Now, there's another matter. When I was lying in that damned branch, I thought I recognized an old friend of mine talking to one of your nurses. I purposely didn't mention any name because, of course, Whittington might be calling himself something quite different down here, but the doctor answered at once. "Mr. Whittington perhaps? That's the fellow," I replied. "What's he doing down here? Don't tell me his carves are out of order."

"Doctor Hain laughed. "No. He came down to see one of my nurses, Nurse Edith, who is a niece of his? "Why, fancy that!" I exclaimed. "Is he still here?" "No, he went back to town almost immediately. "What a pity!" I exclaimed. "But perhaps I could speak to his niece—Nurse Edith, did you say her name was?"

"But the doctor shook his head. "I'm afraid that, too, is impossible. Nurse Edith left with a patient to-night about 10. It seems to be real unlucky," I remarked. "Have you Mr. Whittington's address in town? I guess I'd like to look him up when I get back." "I don't know his address. I can write to Nurse Edith for it if you like," I thanked him. "But say what it is wants it. I'd like to give him a little surprise."

"What do you mean?" said Tuppence meditatively. "But I think that, in an ambiguous, legal, without prejudicial lawyer's way, he was trying to warn me."

"Why should he? See here, we don't want any lawyers mixed up in this. That guy couldn't help us any."

"Well, I believe he could," retorted Tuppence obstinately.

"Don't you think it. So long. I'd be back in half an hour."

Thirty-five minutes had elapsed when Julius returned. He took Tuppence by the arm, and walked her to the window.

"There she is."

"Oh!" said Tuppence with a note of reverence in her voice, as she gazed down at the enormous car.

Friday and Saturday passed uneventfully. Tuppence had received a brief answer to her appeal from Mr. Carter. In it he pointed out that the Young Adventurers had undertaken the work at their own risk, and had been fully warned of the dangers. If anything had happened to Tommy, he regretted it deeply, but he could do nothing.

"Oh, Julius," breathed Tuppence, "how exciting! Go on."

"Well, luckily for me, I pitched down into a good soft bed of earth—but it put me out of action for the time, sure enough. The next thing I knew I was lying in bed with a hospital nurse (not Whittington's one) on one side of me, and a little black-headed man with gold glasses, and medical man written all over him, on the other. He rubbed his hands together, and raised his eyebrows as I stared at him. "Ah," he said, "so our young friend is coming round again. Capital. I think that'll do for the present, sister," and the nurse left the room in a swirl, well-trimmed way. But I caught her hand as she passed through the door.

"That look of hers gave me an idea. "Now, then, doc," I said, and tried to sit up in bed, but my right foot gave me a nasty twinge as I did so. "A slight sprain," explained the doctor. "Nothing serious. You'll be about in a couple of days."

"I noticed you walked lame," interrupted Tuppence.

Julius nodded, and continued. "How did it happen? I asked do nothing. This was cold comfort. It seemed to the girl that, for the first time, she realized the sinister character of the mission they had undertaken so light-heartedly. It had begun like a page of romance. Now, above of its glamor, it seemed to be turning to grim reality. Tommy—that was all that mattered. Many times in the day Tuppence blinked the tears out of her eyes resolutely. "Little foot," she would apostrophize herself, "don't snivel. Of course you're fond of him. You've known him all your life. But there's no need to be sentimental about it."

In the meantime, nothing more was seen of Boris. He did not come to the flat, and Julius and the car waited in vain. Tuppence gave herself over to new meditations. Whilst admitting the truth of Julius' objection, she had nevertheless not entirely relinquished the idea of appealing to Sir James Peel Edgerton. Indeed, she had gone so far as to look up his address in the Red Book. Had he meant to warn her that day? If so, why? Tuppence decided, with her usual shake of the shoulders, it was worth trying, and try it she would. Sunday was her afternoon out. She would meet Julius, persuade him to her point of view, and they would beund the lion in his den.

HENRY FORD LEADS IN WEEKLY STRAW VOTE

Henry Ford continues to increase his lead over all comers in Collier's Weekly Face to Face straw vote on the possible presidential aspirants, and it is considered that Ford's popularity may make him an issue in the next campaign. This would require the nomination by both the major parties of a man to whom the opposition could unite and be reasonably pleased over it, but nothing in the returns indicate that Ford would be a successful 3rd party independent candidate.

S. T. Murphey and family visited his brother, Dewey, and family at Johnson, one evening last week.

The Tandy girls visited Eileen Ellington, Sunday.

The Children's Day Service at the French school house Sunday was well prepared and well rendered, and was enjoyed by quite a large crowd that assembled at the arbor built for that purpose. The smaller children recited and sang in the morning, after which came the dinner, which was also much enjoyed by all present.

In the afternoon the larger children entertained the audience with music, exercises, drills and recitations, after which, Bro. Haynes, the pastor made the children a talk. Some of the best features of the program were some special songs arranged by J. W. Williams, of Tokio.

M. E. Ellington and family and his father, G. W. Ellington, of Meadow, visited in the Harris community Sunday afternoon.

Dewey Murphey and family from Johnson, spent Saturday with his brother, S. T. Murphey and attended Children's Day exercises at French school house Sunday.

MEADOW BRIEFS
By Aesculapias

(delayed)
This scribble was in bed with fever last week when the Briefs should have been written. He is happy to state that he is convalescing nicely. Mrs. Perry Hardin is still very sick, although better than at last writing.

Mr. Oscar Cook and wife of Rodgers, Texas, are visiting the family of his father, Mr. W. G. Cook. He is very favorably impressed with the country, and we would be glad if he would decide to come and live among us.

Mrs. Findley is still at the sanitarium and is getting on fine. She will be able to return the latter part of the week.

There was quite a crowd to hear Dr. Moorhead at the school house Saturday night. We noticed a number from Brownfield in the audience. The crowd was good natured and apparently went away well pleased. You can't fool all the people all the time.

At the close, the following tribute to the American Legion met a hearty response:
"It is a matter of congratulation and a great pleasure to have among those who have come to listen, a number of the men who in 1918 answering the call of their country, left their home and kindred, crossed the ocean and among a strange people and a stranger land, offered themselves if need be, upon the altar of liberty. Many of those having the same high ideals, sleep among the villages and hills of France, or slumber 'neath the poppies of Flanders fields. Those of you who fate permitted to return have not found the welcome that should have been yours. The gratitude expressed by the people on your return, has not shown itself in a substantial form you had the right to expect. However, it is still gratifying to know that you still believe in the supremacy of the law that the mob is a tyrant, and that secret politics is a delusion and a snare."

There was the usual services at the churches Sunday. Rev. Burnett occupied the pulpit at the Baptist church, Saturday and Sunday. Singing in the evening.
The stock law for this district went into effect Saturday, but to date stock are still running at large. The only known effect of the election was the forcing of a widow woman to dispose of her mule and cattle at a sacrifice to comply with the election and there may be others with stock up. The chief law enforcement officer for the town has decided that the whole proceeding was illegal, and by agreement the people can disregard the law. If there were illegal features in the election, those opposing it have had ample time to file objections to same, and if by agreement a people can legally set aside a statute, then we have indeed fallen into a bad state of affairs.

If the writer were not already accused of trying to regulate the universe, he would test it just for the fun that would follow. CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT House Joint Resolution No. 16.

Proposing an amendment to Article 8 of the Constitution of the State of Texas, which relates to taxation and revenues, by adding a new section to be known as Section 9a, directing the Legislature to provide for the construction, operation and maintenance, under State control, a State system of highways, providing for an election for the ratification or rejection of amendment herein proposed and making an appropriation to defray the expenses of said election.

Be it resolved by the Legislature of the State of Texas:

Section 1. That there be submitted to the people of Texas, for ratification or rejection at a special election provided for herein an amendment to article 8 of the Constitution of the State of Texas, amending article 8 of the Constitution of the State of Texas, by adding thereto a new section to be known as Section 9a, which shall read as follows:

Section 9a. The Legislature is authorized and directed to provide for the creation, establishment, construction, maintenance and repair of a system of improved highways throughout the State to be under the control of the State; and in order that the State may provide the means, revenues and instrumentalities the establishment and maintenance of such system of highways, the Legislature is empowered to levy and cause to be collected specific excise and ad valorem taxes, in addition to those permitted for other purposes in the Constitution, but such an ad valorem tax shall be imposed only for the purpose of retiring the bonds authorized by vote of the people of this State as provided for hereinafter in this Section.

When said system shall have been designated and taken over for the State as provided in Section A hereof, the Legislature is authorized to make provision for the equitable compensation to such counties for the value of such improvements as have been heretofore been constructed by the counties in the State.

Provided, also, that save for the State highway system, in all other respects, counties shall have the right to build, construct and maintain roads, turnpikes, and bridges within their boundaries and the Constitutional provisions relating thereto are not qualified or repealed by reason hereof.

The Legislature, at any Regular or Special session is authorized and directed to pass and enact all appropriate legislation necessary to carry out and effectuate the purpose and intent of these articles.

Sec. 2. The Governor of the State is hereby directed to cause to be issued his necessary proclamation for an election to be held on the fourth Saturday in July, 1923, at which election, this amendment shall be submitted to the qualified electors of this State for adoption or rejection and shall make the publication required by the Constitution and Laws of the State. Said election shall be held under and in accordance with the General Election Laws of the State, and the ballots for said election shall have written or printed thereon in plain letters the following words:

"OFFICIAL BALLOT." "For the Amendment to Article 8 of the Constitution of the State of Texas, providing for a State system of highways." "Against the Amendment to Article 8 of the Constitution of the State of Texas, providing for a State system of highways."

Those voters who favor such amendment shall erase by marking a line through the words, "Against amendment to Article 8 of the Constitution of the State of Texas, providing for a State system of highways." Those who oppose such amendment shall erase by marking through them the words, "For the Amendment to Article 8 of the Constitution of the State of Texas, providing for a system of highways." And the result of the election shall be published and declared according to the majority of votes cast in such election.

Sec. 3. The sum of Five Thousand Dollars, or as much thereof as may be necessary is hereby appropriated out of any fund in the treasury not otherwise appropriated for the purpose of paying the necessary expenses of the proclamation and publication of this amendment and the election to be held thereunder.
