"DO YOU KICK?"

Be quick to kick and make a fuss,
But when you kick, kick to us,
For that kind of kicking is our delight,
Because we always make things right.

Come or phone down to Magnolia oil station, headquarters for high grade Gasoline and Kerosene, clear and pure. Get your car to using Magnolene motor oils. The quicker you do this the better for your car and your pocket-book. Some people are finding this out, as we sold sixty seven bbls. 3500 gallons last month. Fall in line.

Runs as Easily as a Single-Row Cultivator

Double the results of your labor whenever and wherever you can. Be a combined boss and hired man. It will give you a feeling of independence.

The McCormick-Deering P & O Two Row Lister Cultivator works just as easy as a single-row cultivator. Each gang follows its own team between the rows whether the rows are straight or otherwise.

One of the appealing features on the McCormick-Deering P & O is the wide range of adjustments for first and second cultivation, and the ease with which they can be made. The gangs have a double movement, either forward or backward, or in and out on the connecting tube. The weight of the gangs, whether in or out of the ground, is counterbalanced by the drivers weight.

These are merely a few features on the McCormick-Deering P & O Cultivator. Come in and give us a chance to demonstrate it.

We Have Knife Attachments for the Above.

DIED

Little Walter Nathaniel (Bunny) son of Dr. and Mrs. W. N. Lennon, passed away at 2:00 o'clock Monday morning after a week of suffering, in which the best medical profession of the Plains failed to give relief.

The little body was embalmed by a Lubbock undertaker, assisted by Roy Collier, of the Brownfield Undertaking Co., and funeral services were conducted at the tabernacle on Tuesday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock by Rev. Wheatley, pastor of the Christian church, after which the body was carried to Lubbock for burial.

While Bunny was only four years of age, he was the idol of his parents and brother and sister, and had a warm place in the affections of the people of Brownfield.

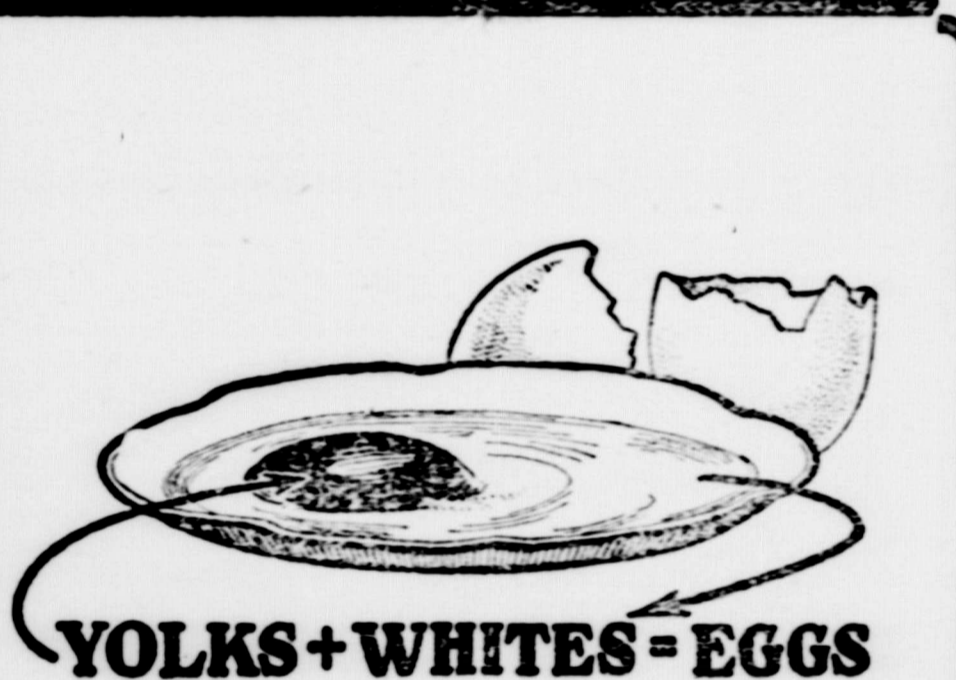

JIM MILLER APPOINTED ACTING POSTMASTER HERE

J. D. Miller, postal clerk at the local office, received a telegram from the Postmaster General's Department at Washington, recently, telling him to take charge officially of the local postoffice July 1st, as acting postmaster, vice T. G. Price, resigned.

Jim is popular with all the people in Brownfield, who will be glad to know that he has thus been honored and trusted.

Competitive examinations will be held in the near future to fill the vacancy here.

Hundreds of tourists are passing through Brownfield these days, some headed west and some east, but it seems the majority are headed west.

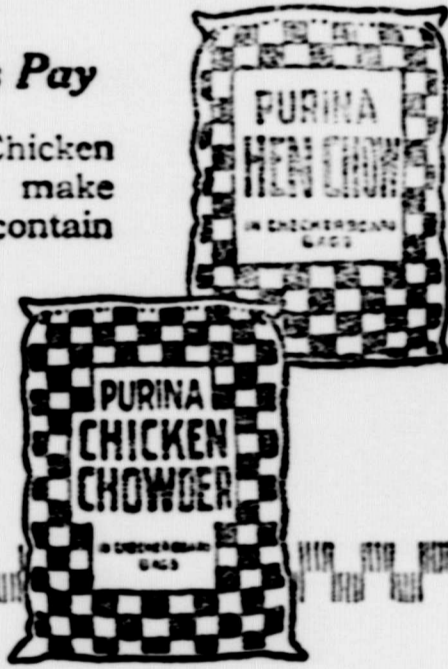

YOLKS + WHITES = EGGS

JOHN W. GORDON, PIONEER RANGEMAN PASSES AWAY

On July 9th, at 2:00 A.M. in the Levering Hospital, Hannibal, Mo. John W. Gordon came to the end of a long and successful career. He had been in ill health for over two years, fighting a downward battle daily for recovery; however, long before death overcame him, it was apparent that he would not recover.

John William Gordon, his full name, was the son of William and Elizabeth (McWilliams) Gordon, and was born near Palmyra, Marion county, Missouri, on June 11th, 1854. He came to Texas at the age of 26 and settled in the region east of Terry county, and at that time north of Colorado, Texas, that being what few settlers there were at that time, termed the nearest railroad point.

Mr. Gordon was unfortunate in his first ventures in West Texas, completely losing everything he possessed the fall following his arrival. He then returned to Colorado City, where he began work in a livery stable, and saved his earnings from week to week. Later he went to work for large cattle companies, which were operating in and around this section of the state. After several years he was able to start again with a small number of cattle.

It was from this start and accumulation that he began to carefully build up his estate, which comprises holdings in Terry, Hackley, Lubbock, Castro and Deaf Smith counties. He was a splendid example of the character that can save and build. Not only did Mr. Gordon acquire vast ranches and great herds of cattle, but his holdings had increased until he had invested in various city property, and owned considerable bank stock from the South Plains to Hereford. He always had an active part in the ranch work and was recognized as a successful cow-man, and while conservative, he was also active in the promotion of many public enterprises in this locality.

"Uncle John," as he was familiarly known to most every one, was never married and is survived by one brother, M. G. Gordon, of Brownfield, one sister, Mrs. S. Givin, Hannibal, Mo., another sister, Mrs. R. H. Coons having passed away two years previous to his departure. He was an active member of the Masonic Lodge of Brownfield, Texas, and also a member of the Elk fraternity and by faith a member of the First Christian church.

John W. Gordon was a straightforward, kind and sympathetic character, befriending every one he could and making friends of every acquaintance. He was sturdy, strong and true to ideals, possessing the ability to face hardships, surmount difficulties and overcome obstacles. He is another one of those great characters of the frontiersmen who has finished his earthly task—A Friend.

MEADOW BRIEFS
By Ascalapias

All the fountains of the great deep were broken up and the windows of heaven opened and it rained to beat the band here Monday afternoon, three inches inside an hour. Meadow was surrounded by water and her streets were one immense pond. For all of which we feel duly thankful.

Our people all went to the barbecue at Brownfield except a few who felt they must hold things down. The writer went along to look after the Meadow contingent and help cut the bread for that five thousand crowd (?) Dalt Lewis and Rich Bennett must have made that estimate. A little miss of a thousand or two would not hurt their conscience. We count 200 automobiles and 100 wagons and buggies; add to this 100 horsemen and the 500 population of Brownfield I figure would make about 3000. The food was ample or would have been if some folks had not acted like the swine instead of well bred people. Anyway here's a bouquet to Brownfield. They made good.

Quite a number of our people have been indisposed for the past few days. Some of them ate too much at the barbecue; others perhaps did not have enough or drank too much ink lemonade, and as a consequence the paragonic bottle has been in demand.

The meeting at the Church of Christ, is still in progress. There has been six additions to the church with some reclamations. Elder Freeman is doing some good preaching and is having large congregations. We wish him success in his effort to make the world better.

Somebody whispered in the ears of our people a few mornings ago and immediately the cows and horses were all tethered out or securely in pens. There must be something in a name.

The railroad people continue their work around the depot, filling in and in other ways making things look good.

There is quite a number of visitors among us, but as those whom they are visiting are ashamed of them or don't think enough of them to have their names, we will also pass 'em up.

The Herald has been a Try Weekly for the past two weeks at this time.

Did you know that Texas farmers buy an enormous amount of feed stuff, especially hay, an amount that equals 13 per cent of the value of the livestock each year? Texas can just as easily raise its hay as any state in the union, and it is a pure waste of money to buy it.

The Attorney General's department has decided that the proposed constitutional amendment to be voted on the 28th of this month is not legally advertised, and the election has been called off. Another five thousand dollars of the people's money gone on account of carelessness.

The citizens of Crosbyton have one of the most popular bathing and fishing places on the plains, and people are going there by the hundreds from other places. They dammed White River just above Silver Falls. Brownfield has a natural basin just in the edge of town that could be made to pay handsome dividends with a few thousand dollars invested.

The hobo had asked the hardfaced woman for something to eat. "Yes," she replied, "I'll fix you some supper if you will split and saw some wood, sweep off the walk, fix the hole in the fence, tidy up the barnyard and burn the rubbish piled up at the cellar door." "Lady," replied the hobo, "I'm only a hobo; I ain't your husband."—Ex.

Mr. Morris was one of the best newspaper men in this part of the State, and we are sorry to report his demise. The Banner is left in the hands of a good successor, however, being the son of Mr. Morris. The Herald offers condolence to the bereaved.

RAINS VISIT TERRY AGAIN

Nearly a half inch rain that was beginning to be badly needed, fell in and around Brownfield, Monday afternoon. A streak around Gomez was left dry, but they were not suffering like other parts of the county. North east and south the rain was much heavier. Meadow reports a two inch rain.

During the rain a lightning bolt struck the generator at the light plant and the town was in darkness Monday night. Old fashion oil and gas lamps had to be brought into play. Electricians reported Tuesday that the damage was not serious, and it is thought the current will be turned on tonight. (Tuesday.)

The Secret Adversary
by Agatha Christie

SYNOPSIS

PROLOGUE—Realizing that she has a possible chance of being saved, as the boatman is taking a package which he says he has for the American ambassador in England. She is saved.

CHAPTER I—In London. Former Lieut. "Tommy" Beresford and Miss Prudence "Tuppence" Tuppence, a discharged army nurse, form an organization, "The Young Adventurers. Ltd." Tuppence makes a business appointment with a man, Edward Whittington, who offers her easy employment, but on giving her name as Jane Finn, which she had heard on the street, Whittington shows agitation and Tuppence is told to return next day.

CHAPTER II—In the morning the girl finds Whittington's office deserted. In answer to an advertisement signed "Jane Finn" she receives two letters from "Mr. Carter" and "Julius P. Hershimmer." Carter is really a high government official. He speaks of a mysterious "Mr. Brown" as head of the Bolsheviks in England and exhorts the pair to attempt to find Jane Finn, whom he is seeking for important reasons of state.

CHAPTER III—Next day the pair visit the Hershimmer. American millionaire living at the Ritz hotel. He is looking for his cousin, Jane Finn, who had disappeared after landing from the Lusitania's boat and employs them to search for her. They discover a certain Mrs. Vandemeyer is a Lusitania survivor. Seeking information from her, Tuppence recognizes Whittington in a caller. Mrs. Vandemeyer. Tommy trails him.

CHAPTER IV—Whittington leaves for France. Hershimmer whom Tommy had summoned, follows him. Having had the two meetings "Mr. Brown" Tommy trails "Mrs. Whittington" to a house in Soho. He secures admission on a hidden overhead door to a room where a Bolshevik and labor agitator is overheard. Hershimmer suggests apparently desiring to find a secret code made between the allies during the war. Tommy is caught listening and knocked senseless.

CHAPTER V—Seeking sinister relations between Whittington and Mrs. Vandemeyer, Tuppence determines to spy on the latter. She discovers her husband and secures employment as a parlour maid in the Vandemeyer home.

CHAPTER VI—Using a conversation between a visitor, "Peter," and Mrs. Vandemeyer, in which the name of Sir James Peel Edgerton, famous criminal lawyer, is mentioned, Tuppence hears talk of an organization. Next day Edgerton visits Mrs. Vandemeyer and on leaving gives Tuppence to give up her position, but refuses to give a reason.

CHAPTER VIII
The Vigil.

Sir James brushed past Julius and hurriedly bent over the fallen woman. "Heart," he said sharply. "Seeing you so suddenly must have given her a shock. Brandy—quickly, or she'll slip through our fingers." Julius hurried to the washstand. "Not there," said Tuppence over her shoulder. "In the dining room. Several days ago, I passed."

Between them she lifted Mrs. Vandemeyer and carried her to the bed. The lawyer inquired her pulse.

"Touch and go," he muttered. "I wish that young fellow would hurry up with the brandy." At that moment Julius re-entered the room, carrying a glass half full of the spirit which he handed to Sir James. While Tuppence lifted her head the lawyer tried to force a little of the spirit between her closed lips. Finally the woman opened her eyes feebly. Tuppence held the glass to her lips.

"Drink this," Mrs. Vandemeyer complied. The brandy brought the color back to her white cheeks, and revived her in a marvelous fashion. She tried to sit up—then fell back with a groan, her hand to her side.

"It's my heart," she whispered. "I must talk." She lay back with closed eyes. Sir James kept his finger on her wrist a minute longer, then withdrew it with a nod. "She'll do now."

All three moved away, and stood together talking in low voices. One and all were conscious of a certain feeling of antipathy. Clearly any scheme for cross-questioning the lady was out of the question for the moment. For the time being they were baffled, and could do nothing.

Tuppence related how Mrs. Vandemeyer had declared herself willing to disclose the identity of Mr. Brown, and how she had consented to discover and reveal to them the whereabouts of Jane Finn.

"Well," said Tuppence, with an attempt at cheerfulness, "we must wait, that's all. But I don't think we ought to leave the flat."

"What about leaving that bright boy of yours on guard?" "Albert? And suppose she came round again and looked it. Albert couldn't stop her. She seemed very frightened of Mr. Brown." Said even walls had ears.

"Miss Tuppence is right," said Sir James quietly. "We must not leave the flat—if only for Mrs. Vandemeyer's sake."

Julius stared at him. "You think he'd get after her? Between now and tomorrow morning how could he know, even?"

"We have a very formidable adversary, I believe, if we exercise all due care, that there is a very good chance of his being delivered into our hands. But we must neglect no precaution. We have an important witness, but she must be safeguarded. I would suggest that Miss Tuppence should go to bed, and that you and I, Mr. Hershimmer, should share the vigil."

Tuppence was about to protest, but happening to glance at the bed she saw Mrs. Vandemeyer, her eyes half-open, with such an expression of mingled fear and malice on her face that it quite drove the words on her lips.

For a moment she wondered whether the faint and the heart attack had been a gigantic sham, but remembering the deadly poison she could hardly credit the supposition. As she looked the expression disappeared as by magic, and Mrs. Vandemeyer lay inert and motionless as before. For a moment the girl fancied she must have dreamt it. But she determined never

She hesitated a moment by the bed. The intensity of the expression she had surprised had impressed her powerfully. Mrs. Vandemeyer lifted her lids. She seemed to be struggling to speak. Tuppence bent over her.

"Don't leave," she seemed unable to proceed, murmuring something that sounded like "sleepy."

Tuppence bent lower still. It was only a breath. "Mr.—Brown—" The voice stopped. But the half-closed eyes seemed still to send an agonized message.

Moved by a sudden impulse, the girl said quickly: "I don't leave the flat. I shall sit up all night."

A flash of relief shone before the lids descended once more. Apparently she hesitated to be on the alert.

Apparently Mrs. Vandemeyer slept. But her words had awakened a new uneasiness in Tuppence's mind. She meant by that low murmur, "Mr. Brown?" Tuppence caught herself nervously looking over her shoulder. The big wardrobe loomed up in a sinister fashion before her eyes. Plenty of room for a man to hide in that.

Half-ashamed of herself, Tuppence pulled it open and looked inside. Of course! She stooped down and looked under the bed. There was no other possible hiding place.

It was absurd, this giving way to nerves. Slowly she went out of the room. Julius and Sir James were talking in a low voice. Sir James turned to her.

"Lock the door on the outside, please, Miss Tuppence, and take out the key. There must be no chance of anyone entering that room."

The gravity of his manner impressed them, and Tuppence felt less assured of her attack of "terrors."

"Now, Miss Tuppence," said Sir James, "you know this place better than I do. Where do you suggest we should take up our quarters?"

Tuppence considered for a moment or two. "I think Mrs. Vandemeyer's bedroom would be the most comfortable," she said at last, and led the way thence.

Sir James looked round approvingly. "This will do very well, and now, my dear young lady, do go to bed and get some sleep."

Tuppence shook her head resolutely. "I couldn't, thank you, Sir James. I should dream of Mr. Brown all night!"

"But you'll be so tired, child!" "No, sir, I'll rather stay up—really!"

The lawyer gave in. Tuppence related her adventures. "There's one thing I don't get clear up," said Julius. "What put her up to clearing out?"

"I don't know," confessed Tuppence. "Sir James stroked his chin thoughtfully. "The room was in great disorder and that looks as though her flight was unpremeditated. Almost as though she got a sudden warning to go from some one."

In the trials in the District Court at Lubbock recently of Tom Ross and Milton Good for the alleged murder of Robertson and Allison, two associational cattle inspectors, the former got 35 years and the latter 30 years in the state penitentiary. There was a pause before Julius announced that he withdrew his head and shot the door.

"Nothing," he said. "In five minutes a brisk young doctor arrived, hastily summoned. He was deferential to Sir James, whom he recognized. "Heart failure, or possibly an over-dose of some sleeping draught." He sniffed. "Rather an odor of chloral in the air."

Tuppence remembered the glass she had upset. A new thought drove her to the washstand. She found the little bottle from which Mrs. Vandemeyer had poured a few drops.

CHAPTER IX

A Consultation.

Nothing was more surprising and bewildering to Tuppence than the ease and simplicity with which everything was arranged, owing to Sir James' skilful handling. The doctor accepted quite readily the theory that Mrs. Vandemeyer had accidentally taken an overdose of chloral. He doubted whether an inquest would be necessary. Sir James and his young friends had been paying a call upon her, when she was suddenly stricken down and they had spent the night in the flat, not liking to leave her alone. Did they know of any relatives? They did not, but Sir James referred him to Mrs. Vandemeyer's solicitor.

Shortly afterward a nurse arrived to take charge, and the others left the ill-womened building.

"And what now?" asked Julius, with a gesture of despair. "I guess we're down and out for good."

Sir James stroked his chin thoughtfully.

"No," he said quietly. "There is still the chance that Doctor Hall may be able to tell us something. The chance is slight, but it must not be neglected. I think I told you that he is staying at the Metropole. I should like everyone to meet there as soon as possible."

It was arranged that Tuppence and Julius should return to the flat, and call for Sir James in the car. This program was faithfully carried out, and a little after eleven they drove up before the Metropole. They asked for Doctor Hall, and a page-boy went in search of him. In a few minutes the little doctor came hurrying toward them.

"Can you spare us a few minutes, Doctor Hall?" said Sir James pleasantly. "Let me introduce you to Miss Cowley. Mr. Herzhimmer, I think, you already know. Can we have a word with you in private?"

"Certainly. I think there is a room here where we shall be quite undisturbed."

He led the way, and the others followed him. They sat down, and the doctor looked inquiringly at Sir James.

"Doctor Hall, I am very anxious to find a certain young lady for the purpose of obtaining a statement from her. I have reason to believe that she has been at one time or another in your establishment at Brownfield. I hope I am transgressing no professional etiquette in questioning you on the subject?"

"I suppose it is a matter of testimony."

"Sir James hesitated a moment, then he replied: "Yes."

"I shall be pleased to give you any information in my power. What is the young lady's name? Mr. Herzhimmer asked me, I remember—"

His hand turned to Julius.

"The name," said Sir James bluntly, "is really immaterial. She would be almost certainly dead by now under an assumed name. But I should like to know if you are acquainted with a Mrs. Vandemeyer?"

"Mrs. Vandemeyer of 20 South Broadway Mansions? I know her slightly."

"You do not know that Mrs. Vandemeyer is dead?"

"Dear, dear, I had no idea of it. When did it happen?"

"She took an overdose of chloral last night."

"Purposefully, my dear sir?"

"Accidentally, it is believed. I should not like to say myself. Anyway, she was found dead this morning."

"Very sad. A singularly handsome woman, I presume she was a friend of yours, since you are acquainted with all these details."

"I am acquainted with the details because—well, it was I who found her dead."

"Indeed," said the doctor, starting. "This is very sad news, but you will excuse me if I say that I do not see how it bears on the subject of your inquiry."

"It bears on it in this way. It is not a fact that Mrs. Vandemeyer committed a relative of hers to your charge?"

"Julius leaned forward eagerly. "That is the case," said the doctor quietly.

"Under the name of—"

"Janet Vandemeyer. I understood her to be a niece of Mrs. Vandemeyer's."

"As far as I can remember in June or July of 1915."

"Was she a mental case?"

"She is perfectly sane, if that is what you mean. I understood from Mrs. Vandemeyer that the girl had been with her on the Lusitania when that ill-fated ship was sunk, and had suffered a severe shock in consequence."

"We're on the right track, I think," Sir James looked round.

"As I said before, I'm a nut!" returned Julius.

The doctor looked at them all curiously.

"You spoke of wanting a statement from her," he said. "Supposing she is not able to give one?"

"What? You have just said that she is perfectly sane."

"So she is. Nevertheless, if you want a statement from her concerning any events prior to May 7, 1915, she will not be able to give it to you. Janet Vandemeyer is suffering from a complete loss of memory."

"And she remembers nothing," said Sir James slowly.

"Nothing prior to May 7, 1915. After that date her memory is as good as yours or mine."

"Then the first thing she remembers?"

"Is landing with the survivors. Everything before that is a blank. She did not know her own name, or where she had come from, or where she was. She couldn't even speak her own tongue."

"But surely all this is most unusual?" put in Julius.

"No, my dear sir. Quite normal under the circumstances. Nervous shock to the nervous system. Loss of memory proceeds nearly always on the same lines. I suggested a specialist, of course, but Mrs. Vandemeyer opposed the idea of publicity that might result from such a course."

"I can imagine she would," said Sir James grimly.

"I'll tell you with her views. There is a certain notoriety given to these cases. And the girl was very young—nineteen, I believe. It seemed a pity that her infirmity should be talked about—might damage her prospects. Besides, there is no special treatment to pursue in such cases. It is really a matter of waiting."

"Waiting?"

"Yes, sooner or later, the memory will return—suddenly as it went. But in all probability the girl will have entirely forgotten the intervening period, and will take up life where she left off—at the sinking of the Lusitania."

"And when do you expect this to happen?"

The doctor shrugged his shoulders. "Ah, that I cannot say. Sometimes it is a matter of months, sometimes it has been known to be as long as twenty years! Sometimes another shock does the trick. One restores what the other took away."

"Another shock, eh?" said Julius thoughtfully.

"Exactly. There was a case in Colorado—"

"Julius did not seem to be listening. He had relapsed into his own thoughts and was frowning. Suddenly he came out of his brown study, and hit the table with a resounding bang with his fist. "What a splendid idea! The doctor most of all."

"I've got it! I guess, doc, I'll like your medical opinion on the plan I'm about to outline. Say Jane was to cross the ocean, and I again, and the same thing was to happen. The submarine, the sinking ship, everyone to take to the boats—and so on. Wouldn't that do the trick? Wouldn't it give a mighty big bump to her subconscious self or whatever that sort is, and start it functioning again right away?"

"A very interesting speculation, Mr. Herzhimmer. In my opinion, it would be successful. It is unfortunate that there is no chance of the conditions repeating themselves as you suggest."

"Why, yes. What's the difficulty? Hire a liner?" murmured Doctor Hall faintly.

"Hire some passenger liner, a submarine—that's the only difficulty, I guess. Governments are apt to be a bit hildered over their engines of war. They won't sell to the doctor the ship he needs. But that can be got over. Ever heard of the word 'lease'?"

"Well, grant gets these every time! I reckon that we shall really need to lease a torpedo. If everyone has one and a woman has one, she can sink the ship she ought to be sunk for. By the time she's got a life-boat on her, and is being hustled into a boat with a well-drilled lot of articles being the hypocritical stunt she does, why—she ought to be right back again where she was in May, 1915. How's that for the bare outline?"

Doctor Hall looked at Julius. Everything that he was for the moment incapable of saying was in that look.

"No," said Julius in answer to it. "I'm not crazy. The thing's perfectly possible. It's done every day in the States for the movies. Haven't you seen trains in collision on the screen? What's the difference between bumping up a train and bumping up a liner? Get the quantities and you can go right ahead."

Doctor Hall held his voice.

"But the expense, my dear sir! His voice rose. "The expense! It will be colossal!"

"Money doesn't worry me any," explained Julius simply.

"Mr. Herzhimmer is very well off—"

The doctor's glance came back to Julius with a new and subtle quality.

"The other best-seller."

"You do not think I ought to go to the police?"

"No, no. In all probability the young lady is with other relatives."

The doctor was not completely satisfied, but he said that Sir James was determined to say no more. Accordingly, he stood them goodbye and they left the room, the latter talking as they went.

"How middling!" cried Tuppence. "To think that Julius must have been actually under the same roof with her for a few hours!"

"I was a damned idiot," muttered Julius gloomily.

"You couldn't know," Tuppence reminded him. "Could he?" She appealed to Sir James.

"I should advise you not to worry," said the latter kindly. "No use crying over spilt milk, you know. You might as well advertise for the nurse who accompanied the girl. That is the only course I can suggest, and I must confess I do not hope for much result. Observe, there is nothing to be done."

"Nothing?" said Tuppence blankly. "And—Thomas?"

"We must hope for the best," said Sir James. "Oh, yes, we must go on hoping."

But over her forehead beat his eyes me Julius, and almost imperceptibly he shook his head. Julius understood. The larger considered the case hopeless. The young American's face grew grave. Sir James took Tuppence's hand.

"You must let me know if anything further comes to light. Letters will always be forwarded."

Tuppence stood at his blankly. "You are going away?"

"I told you. Don't you remember? To Scotland."

"Yes, but I thought—" The girl hesitated.

Sir James shrugged his shoulders. "My dear young lady, I can do nothing more. I fear. Our eyes have all faded in this air. You can take my word for it that there is nothing more

REVIVAL SERVICES

The First Christian Church of this city, announces that on Sunday evening July 15th, they will commence an evangelistic campaign in the tabernacle. For the campaign, they will have Charles D. Poston, of Lubbock as evangelist, and efforts are being made to secure a chorus director, though should that be impossible to secure the right man, Mr. Poston will direct his own music, he having had experience in the direction of chorus choirs in previous evangelistic campaigns.

Mr. Poston is a graduate of the Bethany College, Bethany, W. Va., experience both in ministerial and evangelistic work, and come to this city well equipped for the work he will do. He has been very successful in lecture work as a good mixer among men, and his writings are accepted and published by newspapers and magazines, both secular and religious.

From the standpoint of the Gospel, we promise the people of Brownfield a series of messages which will ring absolutely true. This meeting will not hold up the attitude that WE are right and we know we are, but we know that the Bible is right and we stand for it. Upon this platform we invite every man, woman and child in the city who believe in Jesus Christ as the Savior, and the only Savior of men, to come in helping toward the meeting.

From the standpoint of oratory the expression of thought in beautiful, well rounded, flowing figure, our evangelist bears an excellent reputation, and we feel that none who attend will be disappointed.

We are in the community to serve, and desire to be used to the fullest extent. We urge that if you are concerned about your soul salvation, and have questions which puzzle you, or matters over which you are seriously concerned, religiously, let us help you. Feel free to ask any question, and we assure you that your question will be answered in good faith, writing forth what the Bible teaches upon the subject, and this only. A question will be used during the meeting for those who care to have their questions answered publicly, but we will be glad at any time to help in this way either publicly or privately.

Watch for further announcements.
E. M. Whosley Minister

Symbol

"The flag of the United States symbolizes that freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which our forefathers sacrificed their lives and personal fortunes. Today this flag represents a nation of over 100,000,000 free people; its Constitution and institutions, its achievements and aspirations.

"The nation's flag represents the living country and is itself considered a living thing.

Pledge

"I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States and the Republic for which it stands, one nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

Salute

"During the ceremony of hoisting or lowering the flag or when the flag is passing in review or parade all persons present should stand at attention facing the flag. The men—head-dress should be removed with the right hand and held at the left shoulder. Those present in uniform should salute with the right hand. Women should stand at attention facing the flag, or as the flag is passing in parade should salute by placing the right hand over the heart. If the national anthem is played and no flag is presented all stand at attention and salute at the first note of the anthem, retaining the position until the last note of the air is played.

Anthem

"The Star Spangled Banner" is recommended for universal recognition as the national anthem.

Flag Law

"There is but one Federal statute which protects the flag throughout the country from desecration. The law provides that a trade mark cannot be registered which consists of compromise among other things the flag, coat of arms, or any insignia of the United States, or any imitation thereof.

Display

"The flag should be displayed from sunrise to sunset only or between such source designated by proper authority on national occasions. The flag should always be hoisted briskly and lowered slowly and ceremoniously.

"When carried in procession with another flag or flags, the place of the United States flag is on the right.

"When a number of flags are grouped and displayed from standards, the flag of the United States should be in the center or at the highest point of the group.

Platform

"When used on the speaker's platform the flag should be displayed above and behind the speaker. It should never be used to cover the speaker's desk or drape over the front of the platform.

"When used in unveiling a statue or monument the flag should not be allowed to fall to the ground, but should be carried aloft to wave or forming a distinctive feature during the remainder of the ceremony.

Church

"When the flag is displayed in a church it should be on a staff that is placed on the congregation's right as they face the minister, when the service flag, state flag or other flag is on the left wall. If in the chapel the flag of the United States should be placed on the deacon's right as he faces the congregation."

Don'ts

Do not dip the flag of the United States to any person or thing. The regimental color, state flag, organizational or institutional flag will render this honor.

Do not let the flag of the United States touch the ground or drag in water.

Do not use the flag of the United States in any form of advertising nor fasten any advertising sign to the flag.

Do not use the flag as drapery; use hunting.

Do not drape the flag over the hood, top or sides of the vehicle, or of a railroad train or boat. It is desired to display the flag on the motor car affix the staff firmly to the chassis or clamp it to the radiator cap.

Do not use the flag of the United States as a receptacle for receiving holdings, carrying or delivering anything.

BOWERS-WINES

On Tuesday, July 10th, at an early morning hour, Miss Elizabeth Wines and Mr. Robert Bowers were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Wines, Jr., Greenville, Brownwood and Vernon. After returning they will make their home in Brownfield with Mr. and Mrs. Wines.

Miss Wines is one of the most popular young ladies of the city both socially and intellectually, having been a teacher in the high school for the past two years.

Mr. Bowers is a very popular business man, being engaged in wholesale grain and grocery business here. Their many friends join in wishing them much happiness and prosperity.

MISS WINES HONORED

On Tuesday afternoon, July 2nd, Mrs. Anderson entertained with a miscellaneous shower, honoring Miss Elizabeth Wines, bride-elect.

A very enjoyable program, consisting of two readings by Miss Stella Treadaway, a song given by Mrs. Robert Holgate, and Miss Moseley Treadaway, accompanied on the violin by Mrs. Rankin, and a reading by Miss Tompe Shepherd was enjoyed.

The lovely gifts were brought in a large basket, adorned by two large karpas, dressed as bride and groom. Much pleasure was received among packages and reading cards, and good wishes from the many friends of the honoree.

Brick ice cream with heart shaped cakes, were served with each plate bearing a miniature American flag, and a basket of red, white and blue nuts.

WM. WRIGLEY'S PHILOSOPHY OF ADVERTISING

While riding on a train recently, William Wrigley, the famous gum manufacturer, was approached by a man who addressed him:

"Fardon me, Mr. Wrigley, but do you know that you are wasting a lot of money?"

Mr. Wrigley, always anxious to learn anything about his business, asked in return, "how?"

"Why in advertising" the man replied. "Your product is so well advertised you don't need to advertise."

"My good man," Mr. Wrigley answered him, "do you know what would happen if we were to cut the engine off from this train?"

"The train would coast along for a while and stop, I suppose."

"Exactly," replied Mr. Wrigley, "and that is just what my business would do if I cut off advertising. Advertising is the engine that furnishes the motive power for my business."
