THE ONLY WAY TO EAT FRIED CHICKEN

Lubbock, Texas, Jan.—Eating fried chicken with the hands has the official approval of Dean Margaret W. Weeks, of the Home Economics School of Texas Technological College. She set the example at a luncheon served by Tech economics students at a luncheon given in honor of the board of regents at their recent meeting. The regents evidenced approval and efficiency in following her lead.

Relation of Soil Fertility to Quality of Cotton

The decline in the length of staple of the upland cotton crop in Texas is due to the planting of shorter staple varieties rather than to any decline in soil fertility as shown by the records of several years experiments of the Texas station at various locations throughout the State. Mebane cotton grown for 10 years without irrigation at 11 substations produced inch staple while Half and Half produced 3-4 inch staple. The variations in the natural fertility of the soil at these different stations are marked and since standard varieties of distinctly different staple have produced, over a term of years, practically the same length staple whether in East Texas, West Texas, Central Texas, or South Texas, it is rather certain that variations in staple length are due to differences in varieties. It is interesting, however, to note that Half and Half when grown under irrigation at Weslaco, Balmorhea, and Iowa Park produced staple 1-8 inch longer than when grown under dry land conditions.

Applications of several fertilizers made in varying quantities at College Station and Troup did not prove to have any pronounced influence on the length of staple but on the dark prairie soils at Angleton which are deficient in phosphoric acid, fertilizers containing phosphoric acid did appear to increase the length of the staple about 1-16 inch over a period of five years.

"HOOVER HAM"

A wayfarer stopped at a farm house and asked if he might have something to eat. He was told that he was welcome to share what little they had.

He was served jack-rabbit stew. It was tough and stringy and gristly, but the guest was hungry and his teeth were strong, so he cleaned his plate and leaned back to rest.

"Won't you have some more of the Hoover Ham?" asked the host.—Contributed.

Don't Show My Copy to My Competitor—But

Some people have "ethics" to the extent that they do not recognize that anybody else has a right to have a code of ethics. These are the people hardest to get along with.

In a neighboring city a few weeks ago the publisher told this writer of a certain merchant there who asked to see advertising copy submitted by a competitor for publication, and when firmly and frankly refused, the said certain merchant got mad as a hornet, stamped out in a rage and forthwith sent all his printing out of town.

No reputable publisher will allow advertising copy to be seen by anybody before publication, more especially by a competing merchant, and it is strange that any well poised business man could fail to see the necessity for such a rule. Just how well would he have enjoyed knowing that his own copy was being read by competitors? The answer to that question would have restored his temper and kept him from making a spectacle of himself to the point of practicing disloyalty to his home publisher.

Yes, there are ethics, and ethics—and some people who prate loudest about their code, display the least in their dealings with their fellows.—Clarendon News.

Gaines Co. Calls Bond Election For Roads

Gaines County citizens will vote Feb. 28, on a $250,000 bond issue, which, if carried, will provide for a hard surfaced road north and south through the county and from Seagraves to Loop.

Theroad north and south through the county is part of the undesignated link of State Highway Number 137, and it is assumed that the designation will be granted if the issue carries, in as much as the State Highway Department has agreed to match the county funds in the paving work.

Should the bond issue carry, it would leave only the Terry County link and eight miles in Hockley County of the entire highway from McCamey on the south, 200 miles north to Lubbock.

When paved, much more traffic is to travel over this route, which is now taking other courses.

Wants to Know What Terry is Going to Do

Did you listen in last Saturday night and hear Will Rogers on the Radio as he tried to present the plight of the drouth sufferers of our own and adjoining states? Did you hear the details of want and privation of the old man with twelve children, the pleading of the woman with six little ones, the talk of the little boy and girl who told of the squallor and want that stalked thru Arkansas, and the plea of the Ex-sheriff for aid at once if we would care to do our part toward saving lives and helping those of our own Southland in the hour of their greatest need. If you did there was a lump in your throat and moistened eyes after the close.

Will Rogers told of visiting a place where soup was being made and served to the starving, made and dispensed from an old copper still loaned by a friendly boot legger. God bless the bootlegger. He had in him more of the milk of human kindness than the President of the United States and that bunch of Republican Senators and Representatives who voted to kill the $25,000,000 appropriation for the drouth sufferers.

It was not against the constitution or dangerous precedent, when the Belgians, Poles, Italians and Russians needed help and Mr. Hoover was gaining the fame and the name that would land him in the White House. The constitution was no hindrance when the rail roads were to be reimbursed for supposed losses during the World War; nor would it be in the way if New England was the scene of this latest wide-spread disaster.

His excuses and use of the famous platitude of Grover Cleveland that "the people should support the Government and not the government support the people" is too stale and silly for application to the present wholesale disaster. What are governments instituted for? If this same section should be invaded by a foreign foe and murder of inhabitants was imminent unquestionably forces would be sent for their protection. I would much prefer death at the hands of an enemy than starve.

These people are to be left to the tender hearted of their own South Land in which many are hardly able to care for themselves. In scattered areas of Texas a reasonable crop has been made. Little money has been available from cotton and other farm products. On the other hand those favoured sections have plenty of feed. Couldn't any of them spare a few dollars to keep alive a family until such time God may send plentiful food to those who so sorely need help?

Like myself perhaps all of you have felt that it was the duty of the Government to take the initiative in meeting the present needs of those suffering the pangs of hunger and the cold of a winter just begun. But it is up to the people now to meet this through the Red Cross if it is met at all in time to save life and much suffering.

We have talked of food and clothing but have said nothing of care of the sick. The doctors of those regions are in the same boat with the people. It was stated in the talks Saturday night that they had no money to buy gasoline for their cars nor to provide medicine for the sick. Be it remembered that disease stalks with giant strides under famine conditions and it was plainly stated that many were down without medical attention or medicines.

We are living in a land that at least pretends to be religious, that professes to be followers of Him that said "I was hungry and ye fed me not. I was sick and in prison and ye visited me not." If there has ever been a dollar sent from this section to assist these stricken people, I have absolutely failed to hear of it. I am generally found when a collection is being taken. This too, spite of the fact that we have three church sermons, Sunday schools and other exercises with prayer meeting mid-week. Guess we are waiting for mana to be showered on the sufferers. In Gods name what are churches for if they will not take the lead to succor the distressed.

There is little distress here, all those who farmed made plenty of feed and other crops. Although prices were low there was yet some left. None of them have bankrupted themselves paying their drug and doctor bills. I will give any of them credit on their accounts for any amount they will donate the Red Cross for benefit of the drouth sufferers, and it will not be counted as my contribution.

"Who so stoppeth his ears at the cry of the poor, he shall also cry himself but shall not be heard" Prov. 21-13. Do you believe it?

I have sat and watched handkerchiefs used energetically when the Heathen Chinese, the Hindu or the plight of the Catholic Mexican were the subject of the discourse, but when the spectre of famine and its results at our own doors and a deaf ear is turned to the cries for help it rouses all the resentment of which I am capable, if our people who are

Lamesa Dentist Inventor of a Parachute

Dr. G. M. Terry of Lamesa has invented a parachute for aviators that he claims is "foolproof," and whose claims have been substantiated after interviews with several nationally known pilots, he says.

His invention has so closely approached the safest standards of such a need in aviation that Co. William Easterwood, noted Texas aviation booster, has become interested in his project.

The new invention will open instantly after jumping from a plane and will, according to Dr. Terry, "save life even as close to the ground as 100 feet." Dr. Terry states, "it is so simple that I cannot understand why some of our fliers and air men have not already discovered it." The attachment can be placed on any standard parachute and consists of a small rubber tube and a compressed air tank. When the rip cord is released after jumping a valve is thrown open automatically and air from the tank rushes into the rubber tube which is bound in the hem of the parachute. The principle of inflating the tube forces open a side of the chute into which natural air rushes thereby insuring instant opening and checking of the falling body.

WHY NOT A PINE CROP?

There are plenty of crops which are not worth gathering, if you let them grow rank. There are others which, while of value in maturity, are of still greater utility before they leave the tenderer stage of growth. The discovery that young slash pine, for example, makes excellent paper, whereas older pine is too resinous for that use, is probably of great significance to Texas.

The theory of lumbering has been, hitherto, that we ought to save the young trees and take the big ones. But theories have exceptions, and that may be so with young pines. Where there are no big trees because they are already gone, the possibility that we can grow pine as a crop and get a continuing source of paper right here in Texas ought not to be overlooked.

The idea is a pine farm, instead of a pine forest. The worn-out farm lands of East Texas are not worn out for pine cropping. As near as we can make out, pine is the crop that the Almighty meant for them and planted there. To retire marginal farm lands in favor of profitable crops which do not compete with the overproduced crops of the farm today—that sounds like a panacea for agriculture. Perhaps it is for the piney woods section. By proper credit relations through banks and re-adjustment of tax policies we may be able to get back to pine farming, not by Providence this time, but by quite human Texans.—Dallas News.

THE AFTERMATH

A successful farmer sums up the troubles of the average farmer in this light: "The farmers had ten years of high prices following the war. Did he save anything? He most emphatically did not. He bought three dollar sox, twenty dollar shirts, high-powered autos, radios and saw the world."

"Not content with getting rid of his money in chunks, he dabbled in the stock market and boasted on the streets of Clarendon that he owned sugar stocks and was buying up most anything offered and expected to become a millionaire soon."

"About the only sensible thing he did during the wild spending spree was to send his kids to school. They did very little good because he let them spend too much money."

"I was one of the bunch and I know how they feel today. I sold a farm that was all paid out and bought on three times bigger and then proceeded to spend three times as much money instead of paying out the new farm. Do we deserve sympathy? No!"

By way of explanation, that fellow is today peddling cream and eggs. He is cutting corners to get back on his feet. In other words he believes he and a number of others are "suffering from the morning after the night before."—Clarendon Leader.

SURVEYOR EMPLOYED TO RUN LINES OF COUNTY

The Commissioner Court was in session Monday and Tuesday for the first time during the new administration. Little was done except the routine business and that of initiating the new officials.

A contract was entered into with Thomas Y. Pickett & Company, of Dallas, to audit the County books. The period to be covered by this audit is from December 31, 1928, when the last audit was made.

A. L. Harris, a surveyor of Lubbock, was employed to establish and mark the east, south and west lines on the County. Half of this expense will be borne by the adjoining counties, and the action was taken in concert with the other counties affected.

W. M. Johnson was also re-employed as janitor of the Court House.—Ropes Hustler.

SPEAK MEXICAN SPANISH

From the Dallas News:

The purists mourn, we are told, because the Spanish of the Southwest is not Castilian. The Spanish that our students can is the tongue of the educated people of Mexico City, and not those of the domes of Madrid. But there is no occasion for grief on that score hereabouts. The chances are that culture today is as much alive in Mexico City as in Madrid, and for our purposes it is infinitely more alive.

To get down to facts, of all that the United States ships to Mexico, 44 percent of it goes there through Texas ports. Mexico buys lard, corn, wheat, hides, shoes. Much of this trade originates in Texas. Of the rest not a little is to the benefit of Texas dealers who handle it from manufacturer to Mexican consumer.

W. R. Hunt in an article on Mexico as a Texas market, printed in the Texas Weekly, stresses the importance of knowing Spanish in business contracts with Mexico. Not only must our salesman down in the southern republic know Spanish, but they must know it as it is spoken in Mexico, and know also the courtesies which the business men of Mexico make a part of their daily life and habits.

It is to the New Spain and not to the old that our interests run. We learn its language, not to read "Don Quixote" in the original, but to come to know our next door neighbors. They have their own art, their own literature and their own pronunciation. Considering that Mexico is an older nation than ours is, why should we regard it as still a vassal of Spain?

SEEKING CHARITY

This publisher is receipt of a circular stating that the weekly papers of the state are on the eve of a campaign of publicity asking Texas people to buy Texas made products. The publicity agent wants us to sign an arrangement to print these "news" items as he sends them out.

First, he forgot or overlooked to state that this matter would be run at the regular advertising rate, which it will if run at all. Second, the publishers of Texas are under no direct obligations to boost the other fellow's business free of charge asking their readers to buy Texas made products regardless of price or quality.

If the manufacturers in Texas want to find a ready market for their products, they can do so in the same manner as those from outside state and who now control the sale of such products within this state—advertise them. The weeklies can carry the message direct to the buying public. What more could be asked?—Clarendon Leader

NATURAL GAS IS STORED CHEAPLY IN EMPTY WELLS

Washington, D. C.—Abandoned oil and gas wells are being used with satisfactory results for the storage of natural gas, according to the U. S. Bureau of Mines.

Excess gas produced in California, Kentucky and other areas is stored underground and down upon when needed to meet peak-loads, especially in winter when demand suddenly becomes heavy. The method is economical because no tanks or other heavy equipment is needed.

Demonstration acreages of hegari yielded two to four tons of heads per acre in Liberty county last year, but where this new crop was planted later than May 20th it did not cure well, the county agent says, and that maturing in October and November became musty in the field.

TEXAN WRITES MONTHS MOST POPULAR BOOK

By J. Frank Dobie

After years of research, travel and study, the author of "A Vaquero of the Brush Country" has completed a book that without a question will live and keep his name alive for years to come. It is fact and legend; history and adventure, joys and successes are mingled with hardships, suffering and disappointment.

"Coronado's Children" by J. Frank Dobie, published by the Southwest Press of Dallas, has been chosen by the Literary Guild of America as its February selection.

This marks the first time a volume by a Southwestern author has been selected by one of the national monthly book clubs and the only time in the history of the club a book has been chosen from the lists of any publisher outside of New York and Boston.

Mines of silver and gold, the wealth of a universe floats before the eyes of the reader, as the prospectors for the past four hundred years, beginning with Coronado, and extending to the present time, have searched for these mines of fabulous wealth.

What the Golden Fleece was to the Greeks or what El Dorado—the Gilded Man—has been to South America, these lost mines have been to all that part of the United States once owned by Spain. The story of these mines is a cycle made up of a thousand cantos that have for hundreds of years been recited with cumulative effect in the camps, households, and offices of the Southwest, house mechanics, preachers, teachers, doctors, lawyers, earth treading farmers and home-staying women, as well as roaming cowboys, rangers, outlaws and miners, have told these stories and believed them.

In seeking these mines, generations of men have disembowled mountains, drained lakes, turned rivers out of their courses. They have been found and lost in many places, under many conditions. They are stories of yesterday as obsolete as the claiming of continents by priority of flag hoisting; they are stories of today as realistic as the salt of the earth; they are also stories of tomorrow as fantastic and romantic as the hopes of man.

He relates the famous legends of the lost mines of Northern Mexico, Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona.

MUSIC CRITIC SAYS JAZZ OUR FOLK SONGS

Fort Worth, Jan.—The idea that jazz music is the bunk is all wrong, according to Dr. Sigmund Spaeth, New York musical critic, writer, lecturer and radio artist, who spoke at Texas Christian University here recently.

Dr. Spaeth, who is known as "the playboy of musical pedagogy," thinks there is nothing wrong with most popular hits—"as far as they go."

"Jazz is characteristically American, and is our folk music," says Dr. Spaeth. "The fundamental characteristics of jazz will be borrowed by the serious composers of America if she ever produces any great music. 'The Rhapsody in Blue,' by George Gershwin, is a hint as to what this future music may be."

Fundamentally all music, Dr. Spaeth points out, is based on the same patterns, whether it be "Little White Lies" or a Beethoven sonata.

"One cannot say that this whole class of music is bad, and that whole class good," Spaeth insists. "It all has its good and bad qualities."

"O, Charlie Schwab?"

"Yes, yes," from the guide.

"That is the home of Morgan."

"O, J. P. Morgan?"

"Yes, yes."

And so on, with the passenger seated directly behind the smart elec becoming more and more disgusted.

Finally when the guide pointed out, "The Church of Christ," the disgusted one gave the know-it-all a dig in the ribs and said between his teeth—

"Go on; ask him; take a chance."

THE BABY COOS!

When the Review editor read the comments of the Terry County Herald, she felt very much like Hans Christian Anderson's "Ugly Duckling" must have felt, when it was recognized by the coveted flock of beautiful swans.

Recognition by a paper as strong as the Herald is, with an age of more than a quarter of a century to its credit, is proof positive that the Review is a newspaper. As for being a baby the Herald is right again, for the Review lacks three days being one month old.

What is more helpful, or conducive to growth, than a hearty welcome and encouraging words? The Review appreciates these words from our neighbor, Mr. Stricklin.—Yoakum County Review.

A pupil was having trouble with punctuation and was being called down by the teacher.

"Never mind, sonny," said the visiting school board president, consolingly, "it's foolish to bother about commas. They don't amount to much, anyway."

"Don't they?" replied the teacher, turning to the president. Then calling to one of the pupils she order the boy to write on the board this sentence: "The president of the board says the teacher is a fool."

"Now," she continued, put a comma after 'board' and another after 'teacher'."
