In Time of Stress We Can Do Many Things

About the strangest thing we have heard of lately, and one that took real nerve and patience, was when Holland Johnson, young Terry county farmer got this foot caught between the power lift arm of his tractor. He had to remove the power lift to remove his foot, and then found that he could not walk to the house, a mile away, as his foot was badly crushed.

There was nothing for him to do but patiently put the power lift arm back on the tractor, mount it and drive to the house. He was rushed in to the hospital. He is doing as well as could be expected.

Supply New Telephone Directories Delivered

Monday morning, the Herald delivered a little more than 300 new telephone directories to Miss Laura "Chuck Wagon Gang" Lee Jones, local manager of the Southwestern Associated Telephone Co., and which were immediately delivered to their subscribers.

A healthy increase was shown over the number printed six months ago, which indicates that the telephone system here, like practically all other enterprises, is growing.

Merchants break from the inside. This is due to management rather than condition. Take for instance, our present highway situation. It is true that more people make purchases in the larger town than ever before. The small town merchant who maintains the old attitude of "take it or leave it," is a goner in the mad rush of 1936.

If he stocks greater variety, in small quanity, and is willing to push his business and be content with smaller profit, he has little to fear. At least for the present. This idea is being proven every day.

Dr. Hill's Address Pronounced Great

The big high school auditorium was filled last Friday night, including the balcony for the graduating exercises, when 59 young men and women received their diplomas, which were handed out by Tom May, president of the local school board. This was by far the largest graduating class in the history of the school.

The address of Dr. J. A. Hill, president of WTST college at Canyon, Texas, was a model of wholesomeness for the graduate, as well as underclassmen and older people. Righteous and clean living, was his main theme. Perhaps some of the most interesting things he said, was a brief of his own early struggles for an education, as well as that of other Texans that have became great in many lines of endeavor.

A short talk was made by Supt. Baze, during which awards and scholarships were announced. The papers of the stlutatorian and valedictorian were really good, and showed close study and application. The sponsor of the class, M. L. Penn announced that he was moving to Tahoka next term as principal of high school

The readers of the Lubbock Morning Avalanche are pleased that the management sends their papers down on an early morning bus now instead of the train, which gets in here about 11 o'clock. Heretofore the Abilene and Fort Worth papers beat the Avalanche here some two hours.

Our old friend Ira C. Switzer Farmdale, Ohio had his paper stopped some two weeks ago, but decided later to have 'er started up again. He has been on our list for years.

He is a poor sport who can't take chance on a sure shot.

FIRMS FROM EAST CLAMOR FOR WOOL IN ANGELO AREA

SAN ANGELO, Texas, May 27 .- A long antticipated wave of wool buying surged over West Texas ranges last week, more than 500,000 pounds being sold daily for a new six-year peak | Exposition which opens here June 6 of 33c a pound.

Spot purchases now total around 6,000,000 pounds. Texas spring clip is estimated at 65,000,000 pounds, 40 per cent of which is shorn now. Recent rains have assured good grazing and a fine quality of washed Mr. McLeod and Mrs. Nichols' brother wool. The price so far has never gone below 30c a pound.

Mrs. Clovis Kendrick returned last week from a two weeks visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Henson of Ashdown, Arkansas. Her sister, Barbara, came home with her to spend the summer.

We wish it were possible for every boy and girl in the Miami school to take advantage of the low rates offered by the Santa Fe Railroad and attend the Texas Centennial at Dallas for one day. There is no telling how much a boy and girl could see and retain in their minds in one day and what it would mean to them through life.-Miami Chief.

We often wonder why the Santa Fe does not tell people about their cheap rates through the local paper. It would not hurt them in the least, and would keep the people informed. In fact, it would be to their advantage. The Santa Fe as well as other big railroad companies seem to be sold on the fact that a few dailies scattered over the area reaches all the people, when as a matter of fact, they reach but a very small per cent of readers. City people, who mostly read dailies have from two to a half dozen ways to reach an advertised point, like the Centennial, such as other railroads and many bus lines.

LOW RATE TO CENTENNIAL

DALLAS, Texas, June1. - Railroads are drafting tariff that will bring rates down to as low as a cent a mile for travel to and from the $25,000,000 Texas Centennial to continue through November 29.

Rubinoff Holds World Record for Broadcasting

Rubinoff and his violin-and Chevrolet-are a combination that few, if any, radio listeners in the United States have not received in their homes via the air. The famous violinist and his Etradivarius, sters of the Chevrolet Musical Moments programs, have the distinction of going on the air from more in the history of radio. Three hundred and seventy-eight stations broader that 1134 fifteen-minute programs. That figures out at 283 hours, and if one week's programs were broadcast one after the other, day and night, it would require 11 days. The illustration shows Rubinoff, carrying his precious violin, posing with his car after a special appearance at Detroit.

THE STORY

CHAPTER XI.—Tod informs Sheriff Bridger that Bluejay has seen Holt taking money from a box which had been buried under the Downer cabin floor. A prisoner overhears and tells Ezra. Tod Brisoner overhears and tells Ezra. Tod sees Kerry in town and is enraged at Buejay, who already has collected his blood money. Bridger, his deputy, and Tod set out to take Holt. Young comes apon Bluejay, who is panic-stricken. him to leave the country. Ezra tells Kerry of the frame-up on Stuart. They take a short cut to the cabin and dig up the planted box. The sheriff's party surives and demands the box. Kerry refuses. They leave, and Kerry finds face was swollen from bee stings.

CHAPTER XII.—At Nan's headquar-ters Kerry and Ezra find the sheriff has arrested Holt. Kerry is arrested on a charge of driving out the state's chief witness, Bluejay. In a cell Kerry is told of Nan's love for him by Holt. Kerry escapes.

CHAPTER XIII

Jim Hinkle had not slept. Too much had happened at Nan's headquarters and too much speculation had gone on at the Landing that night to let his senses sink into unconsciousness. Besides, he had had Tod West to watch. until West took to his bed. He had promised Young he would watch West's every move and was doing his best to make his word good.

So when that light rapping came on his door he was out of bed with a stealthy bound.

"Young, Jim," came the cautious whisper in answer to his query. "Come out here!"

"My God, Young, how'd you-" "Never mind anything now, Jim. Where's West?"

amazement became articulate. "I don't want to be seen.' Omitting all detail, he told what had happened. Then: "Money and honey, Ezra! There's a book-up somewhere; they tie in. I'm on my way to try to wrangle it out. I want some stuff from the kitchen and the men's shanty, Nan." His eyes had been fast on her face as he talked, rapidly and lowly. Its eval seemed more sweet and gentle than ever. He wanted to touch her, take her hands, to draw her close and say the things that were surging his heart, of far more consequence then the things he let his lips say. But be put the impulse back. They followed into the darkened

"Ezra, we've got to keep Bridger as far in the dark as we hope we can keep West. We didn't dare trust Nat with the bullet identification; no more can we on the finger prints. You'll find Jim Hinkle home by the middle of the forenoon, anyhow. My suggestion is that you write a telegram and send him out with it; away out; ! wouldn't even trust the Shoestring operator. Get the state police in here as fast as they can come and until they are on the job you sit on the stuff we brought in last evening and don't let a soul near it, much less touch it. Am I right?"

"Right as rain! I'd wondered what to do and this is it!"

He turned to Nan, then, and his strained excitement subsided. He looked down at her, smiling in the faint light. She was more appealing, more desirable than ever . . . and Holt Stuart's words, with all their incredible implications, came back to him. He felt suddenly humble.

"There are so many things to say to you, Nan," he said gravely and saw her eyes drop at the quality of his tone. Ezra noted it too, likely, and

As the bee launched itself, Kerry stood erect and tense, eyes on the swiftly moving dot against the pale sky. Out it went in a great circle, and back again, skimming over the box. Wider it circled, and higher; again and again it swooped above its newly discovered source of treasure, widening the circle each time, and Young's body moved as he followed the course. . . . Then, with a final swoop, the bee straightened out, bearing a bit east of north, and disappeared behind a hemlock stub.

"There!" he said and looked down at the bewildered dog. "That's the way it works, Tip, and that's our job for the Sabbath!"

At his word Tip sneezed and Young laughed heartily.

"He's taking the bacon home, chum! He gave the box all those swings so he'll know where to come for more of what he found. Oh, yes, he'll be back. He'll fight wind and distance and anything but rain or cold to get here so long's there's a drop left. And he'll tell his buddies about it, too!"

More bees appeared on the firewood, but Kerry gave them no heed. He smoked and stood over his box, waiting through a long half hour. And then a louder buzzing, a more intent sound. came out of the silence, and a bee zoomed over the box, lighted on the cover and disappeared within.

"And his gang!" the man cried in triumph. "His gang, Tip! See? Two more . . . three . . . four . . . seven!" Singly and in braces they dropped to the box, sought the hole and, upending, went through it out of sight.

Timber's not so far from here: they won't fly so fast in there as they will in this burning. And we won't be able to see so far, either. . . .

"Well, it's like leap-frog. Come on, chum, let's drag the duffle up!"

Again nearly a half hour passed but this time the first contingent brought more helpers and when he moved the box forward to the base of the poplar tree, a handful of bees were trapped there and, when the last had gone, he replenished the supply of honey which served as bait from his bottle.

That was a few minutes after eight. just at the time when Nat Bridger. drawn and gray of face, hammered loudly on Tod West's door.

West answered sleepily from above and after a short interval appeared. His greeting, which began with something of his old geniality, petered out "What the devil's up?" "Enough! I been tryin' to get you for three hours by 'phone but either you slept like hell or-" "What's up, I asked you?"-jaw

"Well, Young made a get-away. Must 've had help from outside, looks Mke. He's gone!" For a moment the room was silent and then came a hollow rattle: Tod West's teeth clicking as a spasm of fear shook his great frame. "You poor sap!" he rasped. "You poor, simple . . . Bridger protested and West stormed and explanations, excuses, regrets mingled with condemnations. "I've done all I can. I've notified every sheriff for two hundred miles. He went east. Took my car and drove a tire flat 'nd left it. Chances are, though, he's to hellangone!" On this, something like relief flickered in West's eyes but it was of short duration. This Young was not the sort of man who flees in the face of as flimsy a charge as had been placed against him. He had hoped at the most to keep Kerry in safe confinement until Bridger and the prosecutor could perfect a case against Holt Stuart which would forever remove from his own breast those cancerous fears. But now . . . "Gone, eh?" he muttered. "Well, you've been made a monkey of by him. How'll folks think of that when they go to vote for sheriff again? I tell you, Bridger, you got just one chance: that's to start things movin' against Stuart and not let 'em stop!" "Well, I'm tryin', ain't I. But what can I do when Ezra's sittin' on the evidence? I've got lines out to locate buzzing was constant for an interval; Bluejay, but it's Ezra who'll gum up ook out there! It's a flying Frigidaire falling from a Goodyear dirigible into salty Biscayne bay at Miami, Fla. Subjected to one of the most severe tests ever given an electric refrigerator, this stock model unit built by Frigidaire Division of General Motors was dropped 100 feet from a blimp into Florida waters. Towed around by a speedboat to guarantee complete submersion, it was hauled out, found sealed as tightly as when it left the factory and was put into immediate operation freezing ice-cubes. Aeronauts who witnessed the spectacular test were amazed that the refrigerator survived the terrific impact of the drop and came out without a single leak in its permanently sealed mechanism or a break in its cabinet, because, after all, they reasoned; household refrigerators are not supposed to be manhandled that way.

Frigidaire Unharmed After Plunge from Blimp into Bay
