The Low Down From Hickory Grove

I been thumbing around in our dictionary in the "M" section, and I run into "moratorium" and you know she looks to me as if it is exactly what we been needing more of. Gee whiz, says Henry, we must be in a fix, is it something like a mortician and are we that far along and bad off. Don't get excited, I says, I will straighten you out—a five-syllable word, I can see, is pretty big for the circle in which you are in the middle of same. Well, thank you, says Henry.

A period of delay—putting something off for a while—that is a moratorium, and sisters and brothers, we have in this grand land more things that should be put on ice than has been seen since about Adam's time.

Along with postponing things like lavish Govt. spending I would also put on my moratorium list "social science" now top flight stuff on the university curriculum—like "psychology." All you know after graduation in either course you could put in your eye. You come out with just an opinion—possibly one that is more added than when you started. In the meanwhile you have just cluttered up the campus.

Govt. barging-in where is don't know where it is comin' out—and which is most often in the hole—but with which it is still fiddlin' and with which it said last Nov. it was finished and through, is on my taboo list, too.

Yours with the low down,
JO SERRA

VISITS IN CORSICANA

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hogue and daughter, Mrs. Wayne Brown and Mr. Brown, went to Snyder Wednesday of last week, where they were joined by their son and brother, Howard Hogue and family to go to Corsicana to attend the St. Elmo Cemetery Memorial services, which were rained out. While there, they were guests in the home of Mr. Hogue's nieces, Mrs. J. D. Haney and Mrs. Charlie DeRusha and families. Also visiting in above homes were T. C. Hogue, who had been there several days.

Recent rains over much of the state have increased the chances for good pastures and silage crops this summer. It's time to get them planted.

"Mr. Republican" Speaking
Washington—Senator Robert A. Taft has been drafted onto the Eisenhower governmental "team" and is rapidly becoming the president's greatest asset in establishing the new administration and getting it over its first big hurdles. This was evident as I visited with Senator Taft in his office on Capitol Hill. What did the senator consider to be the most important message from Washington that I could carry to the American people through the column, the Harding College monthly letter, the radio program and the said. Then, with hard-hitting logic, other media of our national education program?

"An appeal for patience," he he backed the president on the widely debated question of whether tax cuts or a balanced budget should come first. "The important thing," he said, "is to reduce expenses, and I believe the administration is going about this job with enthusiasm and good faith."

Cutting Under Way

"We can expect to learn any day now what the administration feels the expenditures will have to be for the fiscal year beginning in July," said the senator. "Then we can tell whether the budget will be balanced and whether a tax reduction is feasible." After 30 days in Washington, talking to treasury department officials, and key men in the department of defense, the post office department, the agriculture department, and others, I'm convinced that the new official family operating the federal government is going to drastically cut expenses.

"Mr. Truman's budget called for the expenditure of $78 billion during the year beginning July, 1953," Senator Taft noted. "Taxes will produce about $70 billion if they are not reduced, so that there is a deficit of $8 billion. Therefore, Mr. Truman's budget will have to be cut $8 billion before we even balance the budget or can justify any reduction in taxes."

Man of Knowledge

The senator from Ohio, universally respected for his integrity, intellect, intellect, and both practical and theoretical knowledge of government, is assuming the role of friend, confidant and advisor to the new president, the man he fought so sharply for the Republican nomination at Chicago last July. It is characteristic of him to cast off personal feelings and work unselfishly for the nation and his party.

And Senator Taft thinks that, for the nation's good, President Eisenhower is right in placing the first emphasis on a balanced budget. In fact, he himself advocated such a policy during the campaign and his insistence on it undoubtedly was a factor in the president's decision. There could be no permanent gain toward fiscal soundness in Washington, Senator Taft contends, if taxes were cut and yet the national debt mounted as a result of an unbalanced budget.

States Policy

"The Republicans never promised any reduction in taxes in 1953," he reminded me. "After I conferred with General Eisenhower in New York in the campaign, my statement promised a balanced budget in 1953, and further reductions in expenditures of $10 billion, to a total of a $60-billion budget in the fiscal year 1955. I stated that I thought a tax reduction could be given in the beginning of 1954 for the ensuing year, a substantial tax reduction of about 13 percent. This is still my guess, although I hope there might be a still further reduction of expenditures."

It is my opinion that once the Eisenhower team has "learned the ropes" in the various agencies and departments, Senator Taft's will be one of the most powerful voices in Washington for whittling the federal government down to proper size. But it will take time, he cautions. That's why he feels an appeal to the taxpayers for patience is so important. "A year or so from now," he said, "the people may expect to see the tangible results of our program, and I believe that the administration will make real progress."

Let us all hope the promise is fulfilled.

More Feed Needed For Livestock

College Station—If business remains good and the buying power of U. S. consumers continues high—both seem likely—then the demand for meat and livestock products is likely to remain strong.

This means, says C. H. Bates, farm management specialist for the Texas agricultural extension service, that feed crops and pastures must be provided to maintain a high output of meat, milk, eggs and other livestock products.

Since feed reserves in Texas have been depleted as a result of the drought, livestock producers should make every effort to build up adequate reserves of hay and silage this summer. These, with good pastures, are the cheapest feeds, and, explains the specialist, profits from the beef or dairy herd can be maintained only when ample supply of good quality forage is provided. Too, he adds, plenty of feed on the farm or ranch—grass, hay or silage—means cheaper livestock gains.

Livestock producers have found that high feed costs, even with milk, reduce their chance for profits.

If a limited acreage is devoted to feed crops this year, Bates says, aim for maximum produc-

To Get Honorary Degrees At Tech

Honorary doctors of law degrees will be conferred upon two Texans and a Missourian here May 25 during the commencement exercises of Texas Tech's 1953 graduating class.

Tech's board of directors has approved the special degrees for Tech's immediate past president, Dr. D. M. Wiggins; Gov. Dan Thornton, an ex-student of Tech and now governor of Colorado; and Fred G. Gurley, president of the Santa Fe Railway Co.

The three honorary degrees will bring to 11 the total number awarded by the college in its history, and the use of good cultural methods will also increase yields whether or not fertilizers are adapted. The time of harvest and the method of storage for the crop are two mighty important items that have a bearing on the quality of the feed when it finally is needed by the livestock, says Bates.

And finally, the specialist points out that the need for cutting back livestock production seems less urgent than for reducing cotton and wheat, and that means more feed will be needed.

N. M. Editor Finds Benson Is Refreshing

Esra Taft Benson is something new in the line of agriculture secretaries. Some might even consider him refreshing.

Since taking over his job as head of the huge, sprawling Department of Agriculture, Benson has attempted a sharp break with the past. He has harshly criticized price supports, political-sacred cow. Talking more like a business man than a politician, he has advised massive doses of free enterprise as medicine for the farm industry of the United States.

How Benson's formula is going over with the farmer remains to be seen. But some of the things he has been saying sound pretty wholesome.

Talking recently to a convention of the American Dairy Association, Benson painted a picture of the 37 million pounds of butter, 7 million pounds of cheese, 56 million pounds of dried milk held by the federal government in its price support program.

What has been the actual effect of the support program, aside from the temporary result of bolstering prices? Benson's answer is that the long-range effect has been to damage the dairy industry. Because of "abnormally high prices," the dairy industry has been pricing itself out of the market, declared the secretary.

Substitutes, such as margarine and various other spreads, have cut deeply into the butter market, Benson said. The average American now uses 130 pounds of milk products less than in 1939.

"It has become too easy to merely spend taxpayers' money to bolster markets," Benson said.

It is strange indeed to hear such talk from a secretary of agriculture. Who would ever think a man in that job would go around preaching free enterprise? —Carlsbad (N. M.) Current-News.

The high income level of this part of the country is reflected in the increased number of bigger automobiles purchased since the first of the year. An example of this is seen in the statement recently released by James J. Nance, above, newest leader in the auto industry, who heads Packard Motor Car company.

He told stockholders last week, "Three times as many Packards were bought in the first three months of the year as compared to last year. This amounted to approximately $125 million cars, marking an all time record for the company. Part of this increase in the public's new interest in Packard is traceable to its new medium priced car, the Clipper, which has met with especially strong consumer interest in small towns. This new buying surge has been accompanied by an increase in the company's service facilities. Some 400 new service and sales garages have been appointed by the company in 40 county seat towns across the nation."

Stricklinly Speaking

By OLD HE

Well, the little State Observer is in again with its many observations. The editor himself, Bro. Holcomb, takes most of his space in defense of the late Dr. Granberry, and shows conclusively, to Holcomb's satisfaction at least, that Dr. Granberry was a great man and a great educator. So far as we know, no one has said that the late doctor was not a moral man, a religious man, that he provided well for his household and that he was a well educated man.

But what most people did not like was for their children to absorb some of the radical things he taught. In other words, unlike the Observer editor, they thought they had a right to suggest courses as well as the thoughts taught their children in school and college.

Then, the staff writer, who signs only with initials, seemed only half happy about Texas getting its tideland back from the government grab. The final idea that he advanced seemed to suggest that Texas just get them back to give them to "big oil companies." If "Editor Initials" would just come out in west Texas, he would soon find that Texas, as well as many counties, were not exactly giving their lands to big oil companies, but leasing them at a pretty high rate. That the U. of T. down there at the Observer's home town, Austin, is becoming one of the richest universities in the world because of leases of their lands to the "dirty oil companies." Bunk, pure bunk, and Socialism.

And down at another town further upon the Colorado river—Colorado City itself—has had two great events of late. The first was the opening of the 26 inch pipe line from there to the gulf, the largest oil pipeline in existence, to carry oil from the Permian Basin of west Texas to the gulf.

Then last week, they held the grand opening of their $100,000 jail for the edification of all and sundry who wished to avail themselves of a tour of inspection through the edifice. The item we read did not enlarge and tell us how many of the visitors wished to avail themselves of free lodging in the building. The other one, built back in the teens, is outmoded for the pleasure and sanitary conditions expected by present day inmates, perhaps.

And while on the subject of prisons and prisoners, reminds us what our brother-in-law, Roy Holden, of San Antonio, said. Being a former police officer, now retired, from Los Angeles, he keeps pretty good tabs on prison conditions and crime.

Got to talking about the epidemic of "wetback" Mexicans slipping into Texas along the 1,000 mile or so reaches of the Rio Grande between the two nations, and the very few patrolmen to guard the banks on the Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California sides. Roy stated that official records in San Antonio showed that 33,000 wetbacks had been picked up there in the past year.

Almost every means of transportation has been used in carrying these "runaway" people back to the land of their births—airplanes, bus and train. Still they come. Why? Despite the fact that Old Mexico hats come a long way financially in the past few years, they are still far below the average income and living conditions of their own kind of people on this side of the river. So, they will take any kind of a chance to slip into a country with the highest standards of living in the world.

According to a press sheet we received weekly, and it is not from WCTU, "wimman" have invaded another precinct that once was held exclusively as man's field. The "shes" of the family are now said to buy more wines and liquors in her various shopping tours than does the old man. But the males still dictate the brand she buys.

Now, the reader, if any, may be his or her own judge as to whether or not this is a great invasion of the sanctum sanctimonious field of the hes. You may have your opinion — we'll have ours.

Frankly, we don't know how Texas Congressmen and Senators stood on our helping to build the St. Lawrence waterway over in Canada. To our notion, any money put out in this effort is a pure waste of tax money so far as beneficial results to the USA is concerned. We believe frankly that the railroads on our side of the lakes and rivers can handle all the east-west freight that may accumulate.

It appears to us that if the USA has any money to spend, it might consider the Canadian river dam in our own section, from which a dozen towns may get water in emergencies. This area is not asking that the government take over and build this dam, but perhaps loan the district money to build it with, if no private takers.

We are not building this dam for a power development. We have plenty of power, and a government take-over sounds too socialistic to most people in this area. But we are having just about as much trouble with a bunch of politicians down in east Texas, who are lobbying with the legislature. They don't want the government to build or finance it, even though a dozen towns and cities, including Brownfield, just want to borrow the money to build it, and repay the lender over a number of years. It makes little difference with these towns whether the lender is a private individual or company, or the government.

NUTRITION AND HEART DISEASE

"Today, with the wonder drugs available for infectious diseases, and with modern sanitation preventing such scourges as typhoid fever, many physicians and scientists consider nutrition the most important environmental factor in health." That statement is made in a manual, "Food For Your Heart," recently issued by the American Heart Association. Copies of the manual, which was prepared by the department of nutrition of the school of public health, Harvard University, are available to individuals only on prescription by physicians through local heart associations.

Heart disease is America's greatest killer. It is now believed, according to the manual, that diets low in calories and salt but high in protein—as much as 34 to one pound of cooked meat daily—are valuable in its treatment. Among the meats prescribed for various diets are lamb chops, meat loaf, broiled pork chops, hamburger, roast pork, lean beef and veal, with poultry, fresh water fish, liver and eggs listed as alternates.

The manual points out that nutrition and food have a two-way relationship to normal heart function and to high blood pressure. First is the prevention or treatment of obesity resulting from the consumption of more food energy (calories) than the body needs. Second is treatment of hypertension and fluid in body tissues by reducing the intake of sodium. Diets which are generous in their meat content often aid materially in these treatments. It is obvious, of course, that no one should attempt self-medication, and should adopt only those weight reduction and dietary procedures which are recommended by his physician.

The science of nutrition has made tremendous strides in recent years. The result is that proper diet is in some cases more effective than drugs in combating a lengthy list of physical ailments.

Everything Ready For Tahoka Rodeo
