This is, obviously, a very touchy subject. It has a direct bear ing on academic freedom, which is certainly as important as any spring to be given instruction which is heavily weighted in favor of industry, labor, agriculture, or any other special group. It is certainly necessary that students be given a clear and objective understanding of the principles upon which all the economic and social systems from the farthest right are based. The problem is to keep the truth, whether or not it is distasteful to any group, and to winnow the prejudices and the subtly worded inferences.
