(Missouri Synod) Six Miles South of Cisco 2:30 p. m. Sunday-Bible Class. p. m. Sunday-Services. (Pastor Naumann serving durng vacancy.)

We who live in the comfortable days of the Twentieth Century may do well to cherish and honor the memory of the vigorous servants of another day without whom we could not enjoy the blessings of our time. Among those noblemen of another day we must count the Circuit Rider of the churches.

They were "Prophets of the Long Trail," on horseback and by boat and by buggy, making their way along the bridle paths and the fresh trails of the frontier settlements, or down the streams along whose shores men had built their homes and their hamlets. Of one of them we have read that he journeyed some 270,000 miles through a long itinerant ministry.

I hese men were first and last God's men, committed to the work which they believed to be the will of God for them to do. They were "very sure of God" and counted themselves His messengers to the careless and the sinful and the needy. They carried Good News of divine grace and hope for lost men and women, and they spoke it wherever they could get a hearing; in private homes, in empty buildings of every sort, in the open fields, in the busy streets of the city. They asked only for people who would listen.

I hey were also lovers of their fellows, concerned for the present and for the eternal welfare of men. Many of them were well-educated men who brought into the distance places the news of the world and a careful interpretation of its meaning. They were all imbued with such love for human souls that they counted no sacrifice too great, if they might kindle in a man's heart a love for the Father God. They believed that inner riches were more to be desired than much fine gold. They carried books and Bibles and tracts for the hungry minds, they brought comfort and cheer to lonely spirits, but mainly they brought the Touch of God for the healing of souls.

Thank God then for these good servants of another day; may their memory stir each of us to self-forgetful service of men and of God.
