Loboes —

kick was bad and Coleman took over on the Lobo 35. On first down, Cleveland circled for a touchdown.

The Loboes then started a march. Gallagher hit Black for a 14-yard gain, and Brunkenhoefer broke through for 12 yards. A Gallagher pass then was intercepted on the Bluecat 42. Coleman was forced to punt, and the Loboes took over on their nine. Brunkenhoefer got 15 yards, and Cisco punted to the Bluecat 33 as the second period opened. McCrea romped through for 21 yards, and again for six. McCrea then scored.

In the middle of the second period, the Loboes drove to Coleman's 20 on a good run by Brunkenhoefer and a Bluecat penalty. But a pass interception ended the threat. A few plays later, the Bluecats speared another Cisco pass on the Lobo 36. A pass carried to the Lobo 16, and two more passes went to the Cisco 3. Thompson scored to give Coleman a 34-to-0 half-time lead.

The Bluecats needed only five plays to travel 80 yards and make a touchdown to open the third period. Cleveland went over from the 7.

A few minutes later, the Coleman team scored its final touchdown. The Bluecats intercepted a Lobo pass on the Cisco 27. A pass carried to the 15, and three line bucks set Powell over with the score.

Black took the kickoff on the Cisco 6 yard line and raced 94 yards for a touchdown. Several key blocks helped him, but much of the run was due to his speed and side-stepping ability. Gallagher converted.

The Loboes opened another scoring drive as the period ended. They recovered a fumble on the Cisco 32. Black got 10 yards, and Brunkenhoefer got 25 and was injured on the play. Lloyd got 11 yards to the Bluecat 19. On the first play of the fourth period, Black went for 19 yards and a touchdown.

The final tally came in the last minute of the game. Poyner recovered a pass on the midfield stripe. Two plays later, Gallagher hit Monty Ingram for a 47-yard touchdown play. Ingram caught the ball and ran about 15 yards. Gallagher kicked the goal.

ective outside structures: the bony socket in which it is set; the eyebrows, lids, and lashes; and the three coats of the eyeball, the sclera, choroid, and retina. The sclera, the outside layer, is the tough white tissue commonly known as the "white" of the eye; the choroid, the middle layer, consists mostly of blood vessels which carry nourishment to the eye; and the retina, the innermost layer, is made up of cells which receive sight impulses and send them on to the brain, where they are interpreted.

The colored part of the eye that corresponds to the camera shutter is the iris. Pierced through an opening, the pupil, it lies directly in front of the lens, which is suspended in an up and down fashion. The amount of light passing through the lens to the retina is regulated by the size of the pupil, which is controlled by the iris. The light is focused upon the retina as an upside down picture. The lens separates two sections of the eye. The front is filled with aqueous humor, a watery fluid; and the back with vitreous humor, which is more jelly-like. Both "humors" are clear and are kept under pressure to give the eyeball its right shape. The retina, the light-sensitive, inner lining of the eyeball, contains a pigment or coloring known as visual purple, which is constantly being reformed in the normal human eye. The bleaching of this pigment by light sets up sight impulses, which are carried by nerves to the brain and turned right side up. This is a much simplified account of what the eye is like.

The means by which sight is accomplished is highly specialized. It involves, for example, the seeing of near and distant objects, the working of the two eyes as one, and the seeing of color. Remembering the camera-like qualities of the eye, however, is a good beginning in understanding these more complex functions of the eye.

Written history is at least 6,000 years old. A bidentate animal is one with only two teeth.

What's in an eye? That's the question.
An eye is really a small camera, although unlike a camera made of wood, glass, and other "dead" matter, it is constantly growing and replacing worn out tissue. Like a camera, it has a shutter (the iris), a lens, and a "film" (the retina).
Camera-like, the eye has pro-
