

The Gay Philosopher

By J. W. S.

LOOKING OVER ONE of our calendars, we find that 1953 has three Friday the 13ths, which is a kind of unusual. The three superstitious days occur in February, March and November.

Two of the big holidays — Memorial Day and Independence Day — fall on Saturday, which means a double holiday for many people. The year has four five-day months in March, May, August and November. Labor Day is Sept. 7, Thanksgiving occurs Nov. 26, and Christmas, the last holiday of the year, is on Friday.

THE HANDBOOK of Texas, a two-volume edition of facts and figures all about Texas which is priced at $30, has this to say about Cisco:

Cisco, at the junction of the P and MKT railroads in the west Eastland County, was founded in 1881, when the citizens of Red Gap, one mile west, moved the new location. W. H. Rams of the T&P suggested the name; W. T. Caldwell was the first postmaster, and Frank Brown began publication of the Cisco Round-Up on April 29, 1903. Cisco was struck by a cyclone which killed 28 persons and destroyed property worth $10,000. A hollow-type dam built at Lake Cisco in 1926 is one of the state fish hatcheries located below the dam. The population was 4,868 in 1940 and 6,126 in 1950.

AS YOU MAY have read in the Press the other day, six members of Boy Scout Troop 101 are planning to attend the national jamboree this year. And they hope to earn all of the money for the trip by doing odd jobs and conducting various events.

To start off the program, the boys are going to collect wire clothes hangers around town and then they've set Saturday, Jan. 10, for this project. Any clothes hangers they would like to donate to the cause should be turned in to Bobby Woolsey at 1047-W, Wayne Farrow at 1026-J or to Ed Deen at 636. Blair Paul, Roy Beale and Don Martin are the other three boys in on the position.

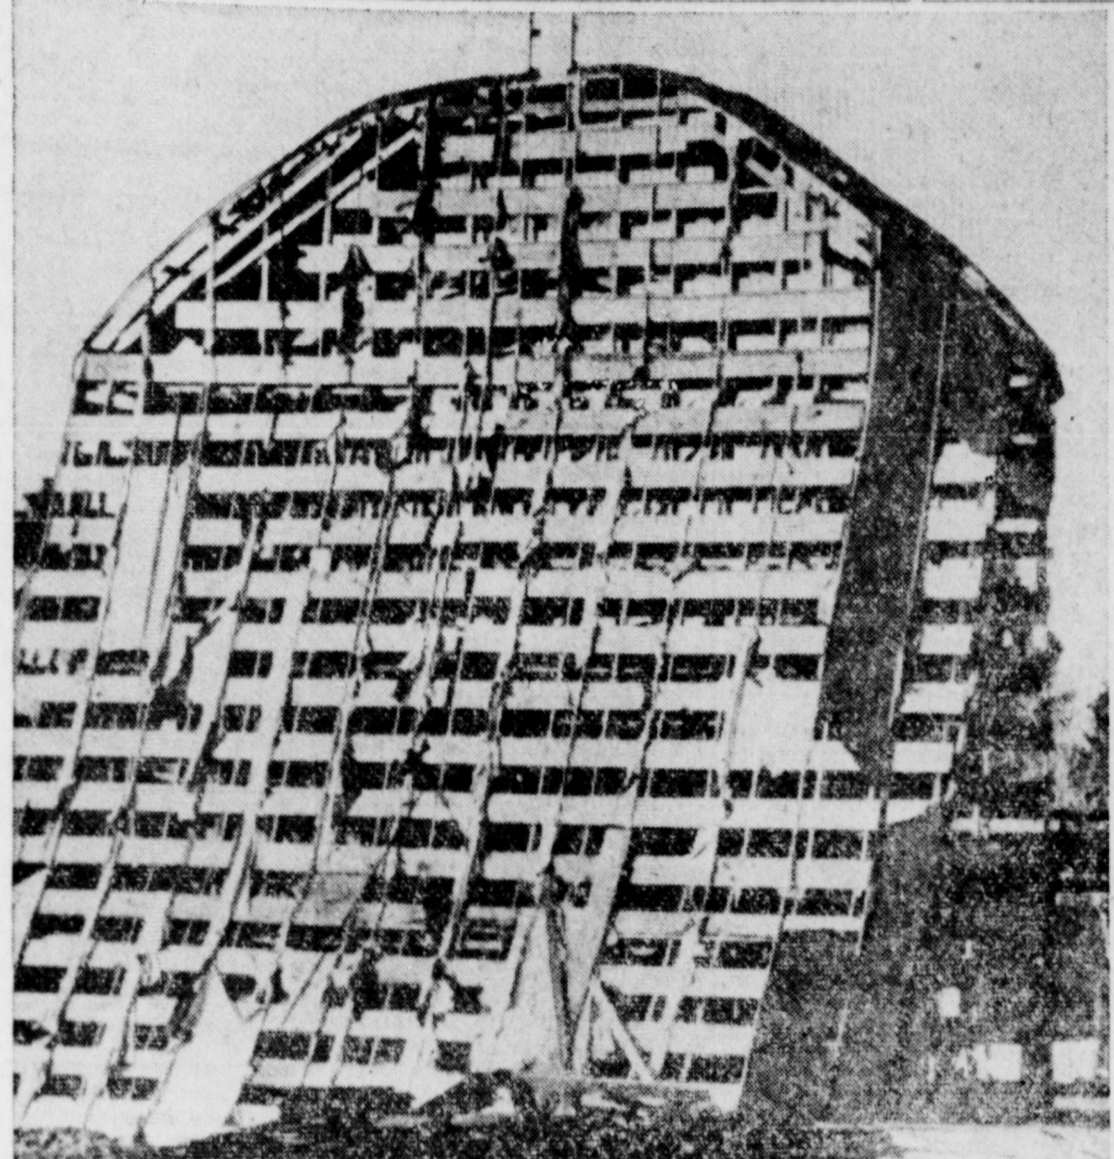

RESPONSE TO THE announcement about the Cisco Foundation organized here has been good. Purpose of the new organization is to take a leading role in seeking new industry payrolls in the area. The idea is very sound. Similar foundations have worked with excellent results in various other areas. Every business man and property owner will be taking part to improve his future in the future. It's all ready to do our part when our civic leaders point way.

DROPPED IN AT the A-G-O Company this morning for look at the 1953 Chevrolet. They had a free doughnut and a cup of coffee. The showing will continue through Saturday. The department has shutdown the two-day show. The new cars are very attractive and the men have every right to be proud. Everybody's invited to the new show.

MRS. JACK ANDERSON, who is registering lady visitors at the new car show, told us that the ladies of the Cisco Country are having their January luncheon at noon Wednesday. Plans for the event were made last week. Committees will make effort to call all the ladies. Reservations may be made by calling Mrs. Anderson. Following the 12 o'clock luncheon, there will be a game hour.

Jimmy Waddell has returned to his base at Shreveport, Louisiana, after spending a five-day furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Waddell. James and Karen Akers of Cisco are visiting in the home of their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Hall.

Wildlife Stamps Are Revealed To Public Of U. S.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The sixteenth annual wildlife conservation stamps published by the National Wildlife Federation were revealed to the public today at Federation headquarters in Washington.

The 36 stamps in the 1953 issue include full-color illustrations of 15 species of American birds, five mammals, five fishes, ten trees and wild flowers, the sulphur butterfly and the plumose sea anemone. They were painted by three noted nature artists — Roger Tory Peterson, who is the Federation's art director; Francis Lee Jaques and Leslie Ragan. Peterson, best known for his illustrated "Field Guide to the Birds" and more recently as author of "Wildlife in Color," contributed the birds, the butterfly and the sea anemone. Jaques, for many years staff artist of the American Museum of Natural History, did the mammals, fishes and trees. Ragan, noted for his travel-poster art, painted the flowers.

The issue includes a portrait of the scarce prairie chicken, which has been selected to symbolize National Wildlife Week in 1953. Wildlife Week, sponsored annually by the Federation and state affiliates since 1938, will be observed March 15-21. Charles H. Callison, the Federation's conservation director, has described the prairie chicken as typical of natural resources which through neglect or abuse Americans have almost lost, but which may yet be saved or restored.

In addition to the prairie chicken, the 1953 stamp subjects range from the patriarchal bison and grizzly bear to the little brown bat, from the strange hammerhead shark to the friendly crappie, and from the Ohio buckeye to the delicate Alaska flea-bane.

ARBOR DAY OBSERVANCE URGED BY GOVERNOR IN PROCLAMATION

COLLEGE STATION, Jan. 9.—Arbor Day will be observed in Texas January 16 according to a proclamation issued by Governor Allan Shivers. In full appreciation of the great value of Texas forests, shade and ornamental trees, Governor Shivers urges Texas to observe Arbor Day by planting trees and shrubs and otherwise marking the occasion in a proper manner.

D. A. Anderson, head of Research and Education Department of the Texas Forest Service makes these suggestions, "There are many ways in which Arbor Day can be observed. It is not essential to plant trees and shrubs. Actually," he said, "it is more desirable to protect growing trees than to plant additional trees without providing adequate protection. Any program designed to acquaint Texans with the economic value of forests would be a creditable observance of Arbor Day."

Doyle Holmes, principal of the East Ward School, will be in charge of song services for the revival, which will continue at 7:30 o'clock each night through Sunday, January 18.

The public has been invited to attend the services.

A LEG SAVER—Sad-eyed Kim, an unhappy great Dane, was biding time in a Chicago hospital until an orthopedic surgeon could perform what was called an "open reduction"—the realignment of the bone in the injured leg. Kim's owner said the operation was beyond a veterinarian's skill.

SEYMOUR TALKS ON PROBLEMS OF GOVERNMENT AT MEETING

The coming changes in Washington and their significance was the theme of a talk made by the Rev. Leslie Seymour at the weekly meeting of the Cisco Rotary Club at the Hotel Victor Thursday. Rev. Seymour is superintendent of the Cisco District of Methodist Churches.

Mr. Seymour pointed out that the problems that face the world could not be solved simply by changing administrations, but that the people held the prime position. He said that leadership was important but the people were the most important factor.

Stock Show Will Hold Big Parade On Opening Day

FORT WORTH, Jan. 8.—Plans are being made for the all-Western Exposition and Fat Stock Show, Ernest Allen, vice president of the show, announced today. Allen, for many years parade marshal, will again serve in that capacity.

Individual recognition of right and wrong, and said that good government, and the continuation of the American way of life, depended upon the integrity of the people. "The people," he said, "set the standards of life and of government."

Mr. Seymour said that "we should not look to our new president for the needed changes, but to look to ourselves."

Route of the parade will be somewhat different due to the change of the assembly point from the T & P Reservation to the parking lot of La Grave Field (Fort Worth Cats' baseball park) which can be reached by turning east from North Main on N. E. 7th Street. The parade will proceed south on North Main to Bluff Street, down Houston to Fifteenth, over to Main, north to the courthouse, east to Commerce and then back to the baseball park.

In the business session of the meeting President Con Collins read from the governor's monthly report that the Cisco club was in second place in attendance for the district with a 99.17 per cent average. Crowell was in first place with 100 per cent.

Sheriff's posses, riding clubs, special groups, families and individual riders are welcome to take part. Groups representing cities or organizations may carry identifying banners. No permit is necessary to participate but, if possible, notification ahead of time will enable Allen and the parade committee to plan a special place for the various units.

Lobos Play At Eastland Tonight

The Cisco High School Lobos go to Eastland tonight for games with the Eastland Mavericks in the Eastland High School gym. It will be the final game before the Lobos enter conference play against Ranger in Ranger Friday night, January 16.

Coach Buck Overall has been working the Lobos hard this week polishing up the defensive plays and on shooting. They will enter the Eastland game with 10 wins against three losses in 13 starts. They defeated the Mavericks on December 5 by a 39-20 score.

Probable starters will be Jim Webb, Irvin Brunkenhofer, George Callarman, C. W. Keller and H. L. Youngblood. Bob Lloyd will probably play most of the game in various positions. Coach Overall was expecting one of the hardest games of the year.

The hundreds of horses, many with elaborate saddles and equipment, and the riders in Western garb are a spectacle that attracts thousands along the line of march.

THE ECONOMIC FUTURE

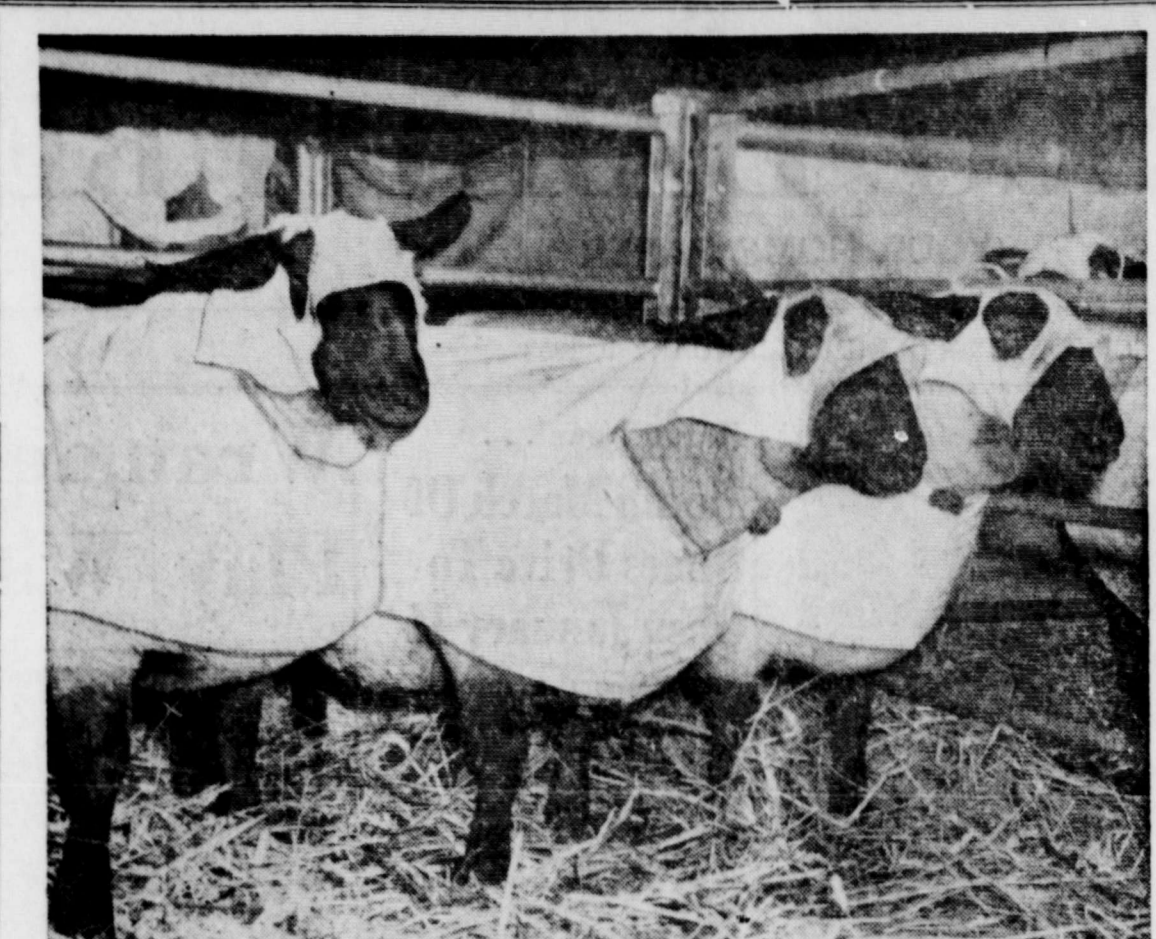

J. A. Livingston, a syndicated writer on economic affairs, recently devoted a column to the 1953 business outlook. He quoted Ralph J. Cordiner, president of General Electric, as saying, "I believe our business in 1953 will be as good as, maybe even better than, this year. I expect that sometime in the second quarter... we'll have to start selling harder than at any time since the end of the war."

It may seem something of an anomaly that top business leaders believe they must do a real selling job in the near future even though the average personal income of Americans is at the highest level in history. Mr. Livingston cites several reasons why this should be true. One is that the prospect of more inflation is no longer an incentive to buy — prices have varied very little in late months. Another is that personal income, after taxes are taken out, is not rising as fast as it did in '50 or '51. A third reason is hardly changed in the last three years. A fourth reason is that a larger proportion of our incomes now goes for basic necessities than was formerly the case.

So, as Mr. Livingston phrases it, "American industry has got to go out and unloose those inert dollars. That is, raise the propensity to spend: Sell."

Another business forecast came from the National Retail Dry Goods Association. This says that for the next eight or nine months the economy should reach and hold new highs. The test will arrive sometime early in 1954, when defense and other government spending is expected to decline.

These opinions are probably typical. They represent a middle-of-the-road view, while at the extremes are a few optimists and pessimists who predict, on the one hand, that things will continue to get better and better indefinitely or, on the other hand, that a really big bust is inevitable. That the election gave business a boost in morale goes without saying. And so, for the most part, have the appointments to top jobs that Mr. Eisenhower has announced so far. The cabinet is heavily staffed with men of the widest business experience, and a profound knowledge of business' problems and methods of operation. These men aren't expected to give business any undue favors, but they naturally will be sensitive to policies that may hurt or help the business community.

Business leaders also have high hopes that future legislation will be more sympathetic to their problems and plans. As an example, there is reason to believe that substantial cuts will be made before very long in the excess profits tax which, as now constituted, digs extremely deeply into earnings and hampers business' ability to expand and improve its plant along with its ability to pay dividends to the owners.

All in all, the educated guessers are taking a reasonably sanguine view of the economic future.

children are home from school. Logging is another risky activity. Accidents that happen during routine chores occur at about the same rate the year around and account for the largest percentage of farm accidents.

To avoid accidents or serious trouble once an accident has happened, farmers should know the right way to use their equipment, keep machinery in good repair, keep first aid material handy and learn how to use it, and seek medical help promptly for serious injuries.

HEALTH TALKS

Prepared by the Texas Medical Association

When accident prevention in industry is mentioned, usually farming is not thought of, yet although one of the oldest occupations, it is one of the most dangerous. Its dangers lie in several factors, among which are the fact that farmers live in isolated areas, no one is responsible for checking on safety or giving first aid, and there may be a need to use old or unsafe equipment about which the user may know little.

Equipment used in various parts of the country is likely to be different; therefore, any program to cut down on farm accidents must be based on the local situation. Falls, burns, and accidents with livestock have always been sources of danger on the farm, however. Lately tractors have added to the hazards; they turn over on uneven ground, throw and run over operators, or crush bystanders against machines and buildings. Accidents occur all over the farm — in the fields, barns, and in the home. A surprisingly large number — as high as one-half in some areas — occur in the barn and barnyard. The kicks of animals, especially horses, may be serious or even fatal. Fire is a hazard. Other dangers experienced more frequently in rural than other areas are such things as being hit by lightning or bitten by snakes and other animals.

Most farm accidents happen to persons in the working years between the ages of 14 and 64 and twice as often to men as women. Children may be involved if allowed to play around farm equipment or to ride tractors or other vehicles used in the fields. Summer is the most dangerous season; it is when haying occurs and

BEHIND THE WALLS OF TEXAS STATE HOSPITALS

BY BERT KRUGER SMITH

Martin R. and Henry E. walked slowly down the path which led from Ward 2 to the occupational therapy room. Martin held carefully in his left hand the tube which served as a larynx. When he spoke, his voice came out guttural and blurred, but Henry seemed to catch every word.

The two men stood for a moment, under the shade of a giant pecan tree, and breathed in the clean, fall air. The shadow of the leaves fell like a crown on Henry's stubby red hair and laid a lace work of shadows on his freckled arms.

Martin, short, dark, thick as the trunk of the tree, looked up at his friend and said in his whistling voice, "Doc said we might be out by Christmas. Both of us."

Henry took a quick look upward, as though expecting to see manna falling from Heaven and then grinned at his friend. "It's been a long road, boy. Three years. And part of that time I was screaming like a banshee behind a locked door. Or so they tell me." Henry's smile was traced with pain.

Martin adjusted the tube in his throat. "It was bad for you all right, boy; but for me it woulda been curtains if it hadn't been for the therapy." He smiled briefly. "Wouldn't a done me much good to get well if I couldn't have made a livin', would it?"

Henry put an arm around the smaller man's shoulder. "Don't see how you could have gone back to roughnecking, with just one hand and not much voice."

Martin's mouth worked nervously. "I'd as soon be dead as useless. I think this operation's what gave me my breakdown."

Smiling wryly, Henry said, "At least you have an excuse. Me, I just broke — like a milk bottle — a kid smashes on the concrete."

The men began walking again, and Henry continued, "I guess the really important thing is that we're on the last lap toward home. Gosh, no man ever had a better woman than mine. When I get in as a cabinet maker, I'll put Mary up in an easy chair and not let her move a muscle for a year."

Absorbed in their own thoughts, the two men opened the door to one of the occupational therapy rooms. Henry whistled as he crossed the floor. Kicking aside some wooden shavings, he knelt beside the mahogany radio cabinet he was fashioning. His fingers smoothing the grain of the wood were as gentle as a father's touching a baby's arm. Still whistling, he picked up the paint and paint brush and began working. This was the kind of job he loved to do, one that had some meaning in it. Maybe if he'd been doing this instead of slaving in that street gang, he'd not have gone whacky.

He lifted his head, watched Martin working his fingers at the big desk across the room. Martin would do all right now that he could be useful again. Henry's hands busied themselves with the work, but his eyes saw and his ears heard the noisy sounds of people working. In the next room he could catch the melody of a popular song, led by one of the volunteers. Another volunteer was teaching some of the women a new knitting stitch, and a tiny old lady in a gray dress was showing a patient how to cut a small girl's dress.

We ought to sing a song for the volunteers, Henry thought. They were the ones who kept this occupational therapy going. That poor Miss Larkin couldn't begin to get around to everyone.

Henry got to his feet, crossed over to Martin's desk. "Going to dance out on the patio this afternoon?" he asked.

Martin adjusted his tube again. "Feel silly when I go out. Who'd want to dance with a guy who had to hold a tube in his throat?"

"Your legs move all right, don't they? Then what's the difference?"

"O. K., you win. See you at the prom."

Martin and Henry are going to get well. They are going to leave the hospital as useful citizens. But they are the lucky ones.
