HE'S ALL SET—Film producer Kees Manders of Amsterdam, The Netherlands, displays some of the props he will use in a short movie to be made in New York's Times Square. Manders arrived in Hoboken, N. J., across the Hudson River from Manhattan, aboard the Dutch liner Ryndam. He intends to walk down Broadway with the wheelbarrow in the film to dramatize a Dutch proverb that says one must push one's own wheelbarrow in order to get anywhere.

"Finders keepers, losers weepers." Is this old rhyme true or false? Lawyers say it is not always strictly accurate under the law. It is sometimes rather difficult to define the rights of a finder in court.

There are some rather fine distinctions and exceptions to the "finders keepers" maxim that have plagued the courts — and finders — for generations. In the first place, the finder is not entitled to keep the property unless the original owner is not known and cannot be located. Neither may he keep it unless the object is truly "lost," and not merely "misplaced."

In general, property is legally "lost" when parted with involuntarily — through accident, neglect, forgetfulness or any other unintentional circumstance. Property is not lost in the legal sense when voluntarily left by the owner, intending to pick it up later — even though he fails to do so. Such property is "misplaced."

Thus if one loses a watch on the street by having the clasp break, not knowing where or when it was dropped, it is legally "lost." The same is true of a fountain pen falling through a hole in one's pocket unobserved. In such cases, the finder owns what he has found against all but the true owner.

On the other hand, a package left on the seat of a bus is "misplaced" rather than lost. In one southern state, a pocketbook left in a barbershop by a customer was held to have been "left," not "lost." The barber was arrested and convicted of larceny when he spent the money that was in it.

Under the law the finder of either lost or misplaced property should make a "reasonable effort" to find the real owner.

When articles are left on a train or bus, in a public hotel room, or even when dropped on a shop floor, under circumstances indicating that the true owner will later return to claim them, such items are not considered lost. The proper custodian to hold them for the owners return would be the proprietor or other person in charge.

Remaining unclaimed, the property sometimes goes to this custodian, sometimes to the finder. The distinction here appears to be whether the place it is found is private or semi-private, or a place used by the general public.

There Must be Something Wrong —

... with the man who falls down and refuses to get up or is perfectly content to allow society to look after his well being, or is there? What is wrong, if anything, with the seller who refuses buyer an abstract. Maybe nothing, but there is something wrong with the buyer who weakens at this point and buys hastily without complete title information before him. Think it over and in the meantime don't do it.

crashes — this work will be carried out using an actual aircraft fuselage from Bergstrom Air Force Base;

A four-room house for demonstration of house-fire control methods; different types of refinery fire problems, and a simulated break in a cross-country gas main.

Top-ranking instructors and specialists in different types of fire-fighting — 85 of them — will conduct classes in the various phases of the school.

Courses being offered include the general basic course, given firemen attending the school for the first time; an advanced course for those who have attended before; a fire marshal's course; a fire instructors' course; a pump maintenance course, and the new industrial fire protection course.

More than 21,000 gallons of liquid fuels and a large quantity of solid fuels will be consumed during the six-day school.

Registration will begin at noon Sunday, July 19 and will extend through the night until 8:15 a. m. Monday, July 20, when the first — and only — lecture begins. "This will be a speechless course," Brayton said. "It consists of demonstration, explanation and practice."

Participants will take a written examination on what they have studied on the last day of the course, Brayton added. "Those who pass the exams will carry home many thousands of dollars in insurance premium savings. Of even more importance will be the benefits of increased knowhow in handling fires in their hometowns.

"I feel this will be the best and most constructive training school session during the 24 years I have directed this work," he added.

Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Pierce have returned home from Lubbock where they visited in the home of their daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Steel, and Ronald Allen and other relatives. They were accompanied on the trip by their son, Norvell, who was returning to his home in California after a visit here.

Dr. and Mrs. N. A. Brown were business visitors in Moran Thursday night.

Crop Outlook In Central Area Is Reported Better

Cotton, late feed and hay crop prospects were temporarily revived in central and South eastern counties by fairly heavy rains a week ago. Amounts tapered off in north Texas. Only widely scattered showers were received over the western two-thirds of the state except for a strip in the low rolling plains extending from Wichita Falls to Abilene. Feed-crop and pasture prospects faded further as droughty conditions intensified over most of the western two-thirds of the State.

Sorghums deteriorated in the northwest except in the eastern favored low rolling plains counties and cross timber counties. Dry weather continued to prevent additional plantings in most of the northwest. Combining was about completed in the coastal bend. The growing crop was improved in central and eastern counties receiving late June rains. Most corn was too far advanced to be helped by these rains. Salvaging all available feed by cutting for silage or fodder continued in dry areas.

Peanuts were helped in scattered areas. Cutting and baling of alfalfa continued in the high plains. Rains interrupted hay harvest in southeast counties but improved meadows and pasture prospects. Harvest of vetch seed and sweetclover seed continued. The rice crop was in excellent condition.

Recent rains benefited cotton in central, north and east Texas, but more moisture is needed. In the northwest, cotton in scattered localities was benefited by rains the past week but prospects for the dryland acreage continue poor. High plains irrigated cotton is generally making good progress. In the blacklands, cotton is fruiting good but needs more moisture, especially late plantings. Conditions are generally good.

Market movement of livestock dropped off sharply from the high June rate as a program of drought disaster relief was announced for 152 drought stricken western counties and rains improved summer grass prospects in central and southcentral counties. Heavy rains in the eastern low rolling plains and western cross timbers may start new grass in these areas but much more timely moisture will be needed to maintain its development even in these favored counties.

Improvement in commercial vegetables was limited almost entirely to late plantings of cantaloups and watermelons in central and eastern counties and in scattered areas of north central counties. Tomatoes in the northeast (Avery Section) were given up as a failure and the improved moisture situation in East Texas was too late to benefit tomatoes in the latter area. Some moisture was received in the lower valley but planting of seed beds was still restricted to areas with water from private wells.
