

HENDRICK'S PLACE

He Held It Only Long Enough to Make Sure of a Better.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.
(Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Evelyn Post acknowledged the respectful greeting of the tall, straight young man in the doorway. Hendrick did not look the part of chauffeur—not exactly; he was altogether too handsome, too self-possessed, with an air of authority that did not rest well on a servant. But his skill in driving compensated for these other faults. He had remained in the employ of Evelyn's mother for three months and all during that time he had kept his "place."

But Evelyn did not like him—she was positive of that; because he looked disconcertingly like men of her own class. It was puzzling and not at all desirable in a menial. There even were times when she found herself addressing him on terms of equality. Of course, she always followed such a lapse by unusual haughtiness. Altogether the advice of Hendrick was rather disquieting to his young mistress.

Now he stood, quietly attentive, waiting for his morning orders.

"Get the morning mail, Hendrick," said Mrs. Post; "return and drive Miss Post over to Mill Hill."

"I beg your pardon, Mrs. Post, but the river is rising and the Mill Hill bridge is unsafe," said Hendrick.

"Then go around the other way—the long road," returned Mrs. Post.

Hendrick bowed and disappeared.

At eleven o'clock Hendrick returned with the car and announced that the long bridge was down in the flood and that the upper bridge, could not long hold up against the waters pouring from the swollen creeks which were tributary to the river.

Evelyn paused with one foot on the step of the car.

"I'm sure it cannot be so bad," she said carelessly. "You will drive over, Hendrick; Mrs. Beatty's please."

Hendrick hesitated, almost as if he were going to demur; then he shrugged his shapely shoulders, climbed to his seat and started the car.

Evelyn found herself studying her chauffeur's stern, clear-cut profile. How becoming was the neat tan livery—Hendrick was so dark—she bit her lip and stamped her foot on the rugs.

She would tell her mother to discharge Hendrick in the morning. He was presumptuous!

"Presumptuous? In what way?" asked her conscience.

Evelyn Post knew that the chauffeur's presumption lay in the fact that he stimulated her interest—nothing beyond that!

At the foot of the slope that led to the bridge, Hendrick stopped the car and turned to Evelyn.

"Do you still wish to cross the river, Miss Post?" he asked.

Evelyn glanced indifferently at the bridge in the distance. "Certainly—drive on Hendrick."

"The bridge isn't safe, Miss Post," objected Hendrick, with a note of sternness in his voice.

"So you said before," returned Evelyn coldly. "Please drive on. I promised Mrs. Beatty I would be there at twelve o'clock, and it is now half past the hour."

The car glided down the hill until the front tires touched the timbers of the bridge. Evelyn glanced at the river boiling between its narrow banks. She could see that it was rising rapidly, and the wooden planks of the bridge were wet where the waters had splashed up between them. The frail structure trembled at the first impact of the heavy car.

Hendrick got down and came to the tonneau, one gauntleted hand resting on the door.

"It is unsafe to take the car across the bridge, Miss Post," said the chauffeur patiently; "it is more than unsafe—it is foolhardy. If you will walk across, I will try and take the car over and then pick you up on the other side." He opened the door.

"If you are afraid, Hendrick, I will drive the car myself," said Evelyn, with wonderful self-control. Hendrick would be discharged the instant they reached home—she would see about that.

"If you are afraid, Hendrick—" Evelyn was repeating when the chauffeur leaned forward, deftly snatched her from the seat and ran across the bridge, holding her in his strong arms as if she had been a baby. She could feel his heart pounding beneath her hand. She hated him!

The bridge swayed a little under their united weight. They reached the other side and Hendrick dropped his burden and ran back to the car. He leaped to his seat and started the machine across the bridge.

Evelyn, hating him with all her heart, saw the bridge quiver under the weight of the big car. She longed to cry out and send him back, but pride stilled the words on her lips. The structure sagged when the car reached the middle. There was a rending crash of timbers, and then a horrible thud from the river beneath. She saw the water boiling up through the jagged remains of the old bridge. The car and its driver had disappeared.

Half mad with terror and remorse, the girl ran to the edge of the bank and looked for Hendrick. The car was visible, half balanced on the big stones beneath the bridge. But the broken timbers of the bridge were heaped over it so that she could see no sign of the plucky chauffeur who had dared death to carry out her foolish orders.

She tossed aside her veil and hat and, crawling out on the jutting end of a girder, she looked down at the fallen motor car.

"Hendrick!" she called, and her voice broke into sobs.

She fancied that some of the planks around the car moved; then a gloved hand was visible, then a shoulder, and at last Hendrick's pale face looking up at her from the heaped debris.

"Go back!" he ordered hoarsely.

For answer Evelyn leaned over the abyss of boiling foam and stretched out a hand. "Let me help you—what can I do?" she called.

"Go back!" he repeated. "I am all right."

"You can do nothing alone," she protested. "Keep perfectly quiet and I will go for help—please, please keep still and let me do something for you."

"Very well," he agreed shortly. "Only make haste and get off that broken girder—go back cautiously, fix your eyes on shore and don't lose your nerve."

With encouraging words he cheered her way back along the dangerous stringpiece—a way which she had bravely trod a short while before in the great fear that he was forever lost.

Gaining the river bank, she tossed her long cloak aside, sped up the road to the top of Mill Hill, and stumbled through the gate just as Mrs. Beatty came down the drive in her smart runabout.

There were hurried exclamations and questions, which Evelyn answered with what calmness she could muster. Then Alice Beatty issued a few orders and in ten minutes several men were racing down the long hill to the broken bridge. Mrs. Beatty and Evelyn followed in the runabout.

When they reached the bridge it was to find the flood tearing at the splintered boards which had imprisoned Hendrick in the fallen motor car. The Beatty servants were quick-witted and trained to meet emergencies. Two of them tossed down a noosed rope to the chauffeur, who slipped it under his arms. Then, by main force they pulled.

When Hendrick reached the river bank he promptly lost consciousness. Bigley, the gardener, made a hasty examination and spoke to his mistress.

"He's hurt his head, I think, ma'am. We better be taking him up to the house in the car."

Evelyn turned her head that she might not see Hendrick's still, white face, stern even in its unconsciousness. Mrs. Beatty leaned forward eagerly, pressed back the heavy locks of brown hair and screamed:

"Why it's Teddy! Evelyn, I thought you said it was your new chauffeur!"

"Why it is—Hendrick—he has only been with us a few months. If it isn't Hendrick—who is it, Alice?"

"My cousin, Teddy Hendrickson," sobbed Mrs. Beatty, holding Hendrick's strong hand in both of hers. "He speculated and lost every penny he had. Father offered to help him get back on his feet again, but he refused—said he'd find some way out all by himself—he's the pluckiest boy alive! Then Teddy disappeared and father has been looking for him high and low ever since."

Evelyn was crying bitterly as they walked back up the hill.

It was several hours afterward, when the late chauffeur was lying with bandaged head in the best bedroom of the Beatty home, that Evelyn was admitted to see him. Mrs. Beatty had personally borne her cousin's request to see Miss Post.

The room was bathed in the late afternoon sunlight. Teddy Hendrickson was lying with his dark eyes fixed on the door. A glad look came into his face when Evelyn entered.

For a long while they looked at each other. Then the girl's glance wavered and fell beneath his ardent glance.

"I'm sorry—I cannot tell you how sorry I am to have been the cause of your injuries. It was all my silly willfulness, and I hope you will forgive me."

"Forgive—you?" he breathed quickly. "You must have known it was a privilege to serve you."

"And I am sorry—sorry that I said—that I said you did not know your place—I didn't understand that it was your better judgment and your courage in rising above your situation that prompted your defiance of my orders."

She held out her hand timidly and Hendrickson covered it in a warm clasp. His dark eyes looked into her blue ones with a strange significance.

"I know the place I want to fill, Miss Post," he said quietly, "and some day I will gain it."

Italy and Civilization.

The history of Italy is, with the exception of Greece, the most illustrious in the world. In art, especially painting and sculpture, Italy stands pre-eminent. In literature her place is, to say the least, in the front rank. In science, she has borne a conspicuous position, and in music her place is easily second, if not first. In fine, Italia's story is more brilliant than that of any other country except Greece, and to Greece she is a very close second.

A Triumph Lacking.

The teacher had told the story of David and Goliath.

"There wasn't any baseball in those days," said the thoughtful boy.

"No."

"It's a pity—David ought to have made a great pitcher."

Food and Finance.

He's just a bit of a kid—but he's smart, mind you, he's smart.

His mother sent him downtown the other day to do some buying. She gave him an additional 15 cents with which to connect up with a one-arm lunch.

About ten minutes before high noon the boy edged into a one-armed, ordered a flock of food and devoured it. When he looked at his check it said 35 cents. And he had only 15 cents.

Boy strategy went to work immediately. He edged up to another part of the counter and ordered 15 cents worth of food. The waiter gave him a 15-cent check. He choked the proffered down, and then ambled over to the cashier and passed her 15 cents and his check.

That evening he told his mother about it and she upbraided him for his dishonesty.

"Don't roast me, mother," he said, soberly. "Eating that extra fifteen cents' worth was punishment enough."

Addition to World's Wealth.

Andrew Gordon of Glasgow announces the discovery of a new metal belonging to the platinum group and called by him canadium, says the Scientific American. He has obtained a few grams per ton in the pure state by treatment of certain rocks found in Nelson, British Columbia.

Fair Exchange.

"I think, Harry," said Mrs. Barton, "I'll ask those new people next door to take dinner with us tonight."

"What for?" asked her husband.

"Well, the butcher left their meat here by mistake; and I think it seems only fair."

Unspoiled.

The lady who likes children was gushing over Helen, age three.

"How old are you, darling?" she asked.

"I isn't old," said Helen. "I'm nearly new."

German Trifle.

Put one pint of berries in a glass dish. Sugar the fruit add a layer of macaroons and pour over all a boiled custard scalding hot. When cold cover the top with the whites of the eggs beaten with a little sugar. To make the custard put one quart of milk into double boiler. When hot add yolks of five eggs. Sweeten to taste and cook till as thick as thin cream. Flavor with orange or vanilla extract.

With the Other Porkers.

"Stop!" The brakes of the motor were suddenly applied, a pandemonium of whirling wheels ensued, and the motorist came face to face with Constable Coppem, who had been hiding in the hedge.

"Excuse me, sir," said the portly policeman, taking out his notebook and pencil, "but you exceeded the speed limit by two miles over a measured piece of road."

"I have done nothing of the kind," retorted the motorist; "and besides—"

"Well, if you don't believe me I'll call the sergeant, bein' as it was 'im as took the time. 'E's in the pigsty yonder."

"Don't trouble to do that," was the prompt reply; "I would sooner pay 50 fines than disturb the sergeant at his meals!"—London Tit-Bits.

POULTRY FACTS

ROUP REMEDY FOR CHICKENS

Good Plan to See That Curtains or Windows Are Down and Everything in Proper Shape.

The habit of visiting the poultry house after the birds have gone to roost during the winter months is a good one. After the water vessels have been emptied to keep them from freezing overnight, it is a good plan to see that the curtains or windows are down and everything is in shape.

If the grain feed for the following morning is scattered in the litter the birds will be busy and active as soon as they come off the roosts. This is far better for them than standing round an hour or so in the cold morning air waiting for their feed.

Before leaving the house listen carefully for wheezing or heavy breathing. This is the first indication of colds, roup, and similar diseases, and if detected in time a serious outbreak may be prevented.

OLD-FASHIONED HIGH ROOSTS

Sprained Legs, Splinters or Gravel in Feet and Other Troubles Are Sure to Follow.

Too many poultry keepers yet build old-fashioned high roosts. The rest-shelter instinct still induces every fowl to fight for a place on the highest of the roosts. Few you will notice, want the low. For the large heavy breeds, high roosts mean sprained legs, splinters or gravel in the feet, and much suffering because of jumping from high roosts.

Turkeys often show up with bumble-foot or other kinds of lameness because they roost so high. One can also make the roosts too small.

Chickens are often lamed by giving them roosts that allow the toes to go clear around, and sink the claws in the soft part of the sole. This is sure to cause sores, or at least tender feet.

CAUSE OF TURKEY FAILURES

Among Other Reasons Assigned Is That of Improper Feeding—Close Confinement Hurts.

Improper feeding, combined with close confinement, has been the cause of many failures in turkey raising. Given free range on the average farm the poults can easily pick up their own living, and one light feed a day for the purpose of inducing them to come in at night is sufficient. If the mother hen is confined to a coop and the poults allowed to run in and out, three times a day is often enough to feed and very little should be given at a time. The poults should always be ready to eat; if given all they will clean up several times a day, indigestion will be the result. If there is little or no feed outside the coop for the poults to pick up, then they should be fed about five times a day, feeding only a small quantity at a time. A good feed for the first few days is stale bread soaked in milk and squeezed dry. Cornbread crumbs and clabbered milk or cottage cheese is also quite often fed and with excellent results. Green feed and grit should be on hand at all times. As the poults grow older, the ration should gradually be changed to grain.

White Holland Turkeys.

KILLING GEESE FOR MARKET

Feathers Can Easily Be Removed by Dipping Fowl in Boiling Hot Water Three Times.

When killing geese for market, the feathers can be removed easily if, after killing, the body of the goose is dipped three times in water which is almost at the boiling point, dipping it slowly in and out each time, and then wrapping it in canvas or closely-woven cloth to keep in the steam. In a minute or two this will loosen the feathers so that they will come out easily.

Health About Gone

Many thousands of women suffering from womanly trouble, have been benefited by the use of Cardui, the woman's tonic, according to letters we receive, similar to this one from Mrs. Z. V. Spell, of Hayne, N. C. "I could not stand on my feet, and just suffered terribly," she says. "As my suffering was so great, and he had tried other remedies, Dr. — had us get Cardui. . . I began improving, and it cured me. I know, and my doctor knows, what Cardui did for me, for my nerves and health were about gone."

She writes further: "I am in splendid health . . . can do my work. I feel I owe it to Cardui, for I was in dreadful condition." If you are nervous, run-down and weak, or suffer from headache, backache, etc., every month, try Cardui. Thousands of women praise this medicine for the good it has done them, and many physicians who have used Cardui successfully with their women patients, for years, endorse this medicine. Think what it means to be in splendid health, like Mrs. Spell. Give Cardui a trial.

Let Us Show You What We Can Do

GIVE THE NEW ROAD LAW A FAIR CHANCE

All friction being removed the way is now open for a pull, altogether for good roads throughout the county.

SOME MISTAKES CORRECTED

Now that all differences between this association and the representatives of the "special or bonded road districts" have been settled it is to be hoped that the new road law will be given a fair trial. If it should be found to be defective in any particular it can be amended. It was not the purpose of the authors of this law to make it operate unjustly upon any class or section. It was meant, chiefly, to put a stop to waste and extravagance in the public expenditures. That end, we think, has been attained. Out of what we felt was but justice to the "advisory boards" of the special road districts and in recognition of the valuable services rendered by them, we consented to a change in the law so as to meet their objections. This, we hope, will bring about harmony in the enforcement of the new law, and that all classes, sections and interests will now join hands in the effort to establish a system of good roads that will do justice to the entire county and aid the remote sections which have been so badly neglected in the past. This can be done by hearty and active co-operation between all those who are charged with the duty of constructing and repairing the roads and bridges and by the aid and assistance of the people at large. All must be inspired with the good roads spirit and all must "pull together". With the special road districts being looked after by the "advisory boards" and co-operating with the road superintendent soon to be elected, and with the superintendent giving the most of his attention to the outlying sections where there are no special districts, sustained by the road overseers and the road hands, as well as the people generally, the outlook now seems propitious for the best road system the county ever had, with bright prospects for road improvement everywhere. This is the spirit and this the purpose that should animate and control us all in this very important work, there being none more so in so far as concerns the material development of the county. It is this co-ordination of all the good roads forces and their active and unceasing work for good roads in the county that is hoped for in the future.

Some criticism of the new law and of the work of this association has appeared in a portion of the county press but we do not think anything has been set down in malice. We attribute it to a misconception of the facts and a misinterpretation of what we have said. We are far from desiring antagonism between the "town and country people" and stand ready to go as far as anyone to bring about more harmony and co-operation between them. It is our candid opinion that the general welfare and prosperity of both demand this. What was said about the distribution of the late $110,000 "raid" on the county treasury was meant only to show how unequally the expenditure of it operated, and, therefore, its injustice. The Grapeland and Crockett road districts received no more than their just portion of the money, and they alone will be taxed under the contract to pay back the money they received. The point is, that so many sections of the county received no benefit from this money, but will still be taxed to pay the debt thus imposed; but this is not the fault of either or both the Crockett and Grapeland districts. It was a matter over which they had no control, and since the commissioners' court saw fit, unwisely, as we believe to make the contract anyway, these districts merely sought to get "what was coming to them" thereunder. Then, the charge that the new law has "killed" the commissioners court is without foundation in fact. Until the last ten or twelve years the commissioners had no connection with the construction and repair of the roads and bridges, and yet the county was well governed and good men held the office of county commissioner. It never went "begging". The truth is, that the commissioners can find plenty to do in the execution of their offices without having to "monkey" with the public roads. We do not believe good roads are a possibility when left to their exclusive management and control, for the one satisfactory reason that they have not the time to devote to that work. Our idea is to have a good county superintendent, who can give all his time to the duties of his office, and whose vision will take in the whole county and not merely parts of it. But we can not have this and leave it all in the hands of the commissioners. With them in control, we do not need a superintendent. It is easy to "imagine" what will befall the county under this new law, but we have no sympathy with these evil prophecies, and have no doubt that matters will adjust themselves as time goes on. Failure to do so is a serious offense and the penalty is a year in the federal prison.

Herbert C. Hoover says that if the United States government will undertake to control the transportation and distribution of foodstuffs, paying particular attention to the prevention of congestion in railroad yards, the problem of price will practically settle itself. This is as clear as daylight to anybody capable of taking an unbiased and comprehensive survey of the situation. Food is both scarce and high because it is not efficiently distributed. If the United States transportation system had prevailed in Belgium, during the last two and a half years, Mr. Hoover's relief work would have been handicapped at every point.—Farm & Ranch.

SAVING PERISHABLE FOODS

The people of the Southwest should congratulate themselves upon their frugality this year. They have planned wisely and well in meeting higher food prices, thus conserving the buy-ing value of the crops and ani-mals for the cash income.

The "truck patches" are now a factor in the cost of living. More peas, Irish potatoes, sweet potatoes, watermelons, cantaloupes, beans, cucumbers, cab-bage, onions and other food crops have been planted this season than usual. It is to our credit that we have made use of a favorable opportunity to plant more crops for home use than has been the custom. Let us save these products. Some of them will need preserving, pick-ling and special processes for safe keeping. But this will be the most important work on the farm because it will be the means of saving a surplus, much of which would have been wasted.

But the fundamental test of frugality and economy will be in the manner in which the food crops are saved. Many of these crops, especially those of the orchard and garden, will be per-ishable and must be gathered, canned, dried, preserved and stored. Preparations for saving these perishable foods must be made so that nothing edible will be wasted. In saving this way we will be aiding the nation and helping our Allies win the war for democracy and humanity.—Farm & Ranch.

In the article printed this week by the Tax Payers Pro-protective Association they refer to the issue of $110,000 in warrants by the commissioners as "a raid" upon the treasury. That means that the commissioners made a hostile or predatory incursion upon the funds of the county; they rapaciously plundered and pillaged $110,000 of the people's money which they had no busi-ness to touch. Do you believe that? It's a serious charge for the association to make against the commissioners who were elected by the people, especially so when representative men from all over the county were present when the warrants were issued and urged the court to take the action it did. It has been figured out that seventy-five per cent of the people of this county will be directly ben-efitted by the roads built with this money. Isn't that a good democratic principle? Anybody ought to know that it would be an impossibility to build a road by every man's house with so little money, therefore the only sensible thing to do is to build the main highways first and ev-erybody will receive the benefit. Intersecting roads can be built later.

A division of troops on the firing line in France will inject new life into the French and British troops, but what we would like to see is some spiz-zerinktum injected into the Rus-sians.

An erroneous impression has gone out over the country con-cerning the board that will be charged normal students, the amounts being $25 to $30 per month. A canvass of the town has been made by a special com-mittee and it has been found that board can be secured in our best homes at $16, $18, and $20 per month, which is very rea-sonable, considering the increas-ed cost of food stuffs.

The advantage of having your clothes "Dry Cleaned", is that dry cleaning, and nothing else, revives the colors, preserves the fabrics, thoroughly cleanses and removes all dirt and grease, kills all germs, and imparts a lustre and brightness to goods, unattainable by any other meth-od of cleaning. Before putting away your winter clothes, have them dry cleaned and pressed at Dickey's Tailor Shop.

ATTENTION!

Uncle Sam Wants Stenographers at Good Salaries

Be patriotic, serve your country; go into training immediately. The government is making an extraordinary effort to fill the great number of clerical and stenographic positions created by the war. Read the following letter and be convinced.

Washington, D. C.
April 18, 1917.

Tyler Commercial College,
Tyler, Texas.
Gentlemen:

The present emergency conditions are taxing the resources of this Commission to furnish stenographers and typewriters in sufficient number for the departments at Washington. For the present, examinations for both men and women are being held every Tuesday in 400 of the principal cities.

Enclosed are two poster announcements of stenographers' and typewriters' examinations. It is requested that they be displayed where they will come to the notice of your students and other stenographers, that you personally make announcement in the class room of the NEED of THE GOVERNMENT, and that, if practicable, you communicate the information to your graduates.

The civil as well as the military forces must be recruited to meet the unusual situation. Stenographers and Typewriters in large numbers are needed. It is the patriotic duty of the citizens who have this knowledge to use it where it will be of most value to the government.

The Commission will be grateful for your co-operation.

By direction of the commission:
Very respectfully,
John A. McIlhenny,
Pres. Civil Service Com.

Can you say that a young person fighting a typewriter or pushing a pen for Uncle Sam is not as patriotic as one who shoulders the rifle? You are not required to enlist and you may resign at any time and, too, you have received a training worth thousands of dollars to you after Peace is declared.

The entrance salary is from $900 to $1200 per year. Can you equal that in any other way during the war, which it is claimed by high officials, will last three years, considering the duty you owe your country? Young ladies, this is an excellent opportunity to show your patriotism, for you are as much in demand as men. These positions are permanent, for business never gets dull with "Uncle Sam".

The government has long since recognized the Tyler Commercial College as one of the greatest institutions of its kind for successfully preparing young people to pass these various examinations. Get busy. Do your part. Don't be conscripted into doing your duty. A stenographic course is only $60 for all tuition and stationery.

Write for free catalogue, Tyler Commercial College, Tyler, Texas.

PAYING FOR WASTE

The farmer is now in the privileged class and while not arrogant is determined to have his just share of the price paid by the consumer for his products.

The war is an incident but waste in marketing has slowly but surely brought about higher prices. In years past hundreds and even thousands of carloads of perishable food products have rotted in the fields for lack of transportation or because of expensive marketing. Is it any wonder that production has decreased?

The time has come when producers will have their rights. They will not, it is hoped, demand more than their share, but it would be surprising if they did not hold out for their just portion in marketing farm products.

The safety and security of the nation now demands that our wasteful system of marketing be changed so that the consumer will not be forced to pay for wasteful handling. Unless this is done there is little relief for the people who live in cities and towns, many of them drawing small salaries or wages hardly sufficient to pay for the necessities of life.—Farm & Ranch.

An English countess says the aristocracy of England must go. It is to be hoped that it will not take refuge in America.

We are not particular about where the remains of the men who compose Germany's military machine are laid, just so they are very dead.

There are plenty of fellows who can tell public officials how to perform their duties, but they never try to get elected when the campaign is on.

If the people of America were to manifest as much interest in furthering the cause of Christianity as they have in creating an army and navy, this would be almost a heavenly country.

Plant every vacant spot with everything you can get your hands on that man or beast can eat. If you don't there may come a time when "there will be no bones in the cupboard."

It is reported that the constitution committee of the German government will restrict the power of the Kaiser, which is like turning off a hose after all the water has run out.

And now a woman senator from Colorado announces that "she has learned when to keep her mouth shut." What pain she must have suffered while learning this lesson!

Billy Sunday has expressed his desire to go to Europe with Teddy Roosevelt. Probably his confidence in his evangelistic powers has reached the stage where he thinks he can convert the evil minded Kaiser.

Woman suffrage associations are taking collections to send to Russia to further the suffrage cause. This money would do more good if it were sent to the stricken countries to alleviate suffering humanity.

MEMORIAL PROGRAM

In accordance with previous announcement, Guiceland community responded wonderfully well to the call to work their graveyard. Of course they were not out as a whole, but there are always a few who shirk when there is a good work to be done. But after all, there was a very large crowd, and to say they did a nice job would be expressing it very mildly.

The following is the program for our memorial:

Master of Ceremonies—C. A. Campbell.

Opening Address—A. E. Davis.

Invocation—W. R. Campbell.

Home Training—Rev. Lam-bright.

A Christian's Duties—W. F. Murchison.

Kindness—Myriam Weisinger.

The Final Judgement—Rev. W. R. Durnell.

Christian Leadership—Led by W. F. Brooks, followed by Prof. Sam Ditch.

Singing will be interspersed all through the program. All good singers are expected to attend. W. R. Campbell will be in charge of the song service.

Services will begin promptly at 10 o'clock, May 30, and the public has a cordial invitation and where it is possible bring a well filled basket.

TO PRODUCE BABY BEEF

First Essential of Ticklish Business Is Quality.

Only Successful When Stock, Farm and Man Behind Both Are Adapted to Risky Undertaking—Feed Is Important.

The production of baby beef is a very ticklish business. It is successfully done only when stock, farm and the man behind both are all adapted to a very risky undertaking. The whole object is to turn twelve to sixteen month-old calves off as prime fat steers, weighing 1,000 to 1,400 pounds in much less time than required for general steer raising. The whole thing means quality animals to start with. It means offspring from strictly beef strains, like Shorthorn, Hereford, Angus or Galloway. Really no other breed need apply in the production of real baby beef, says a writer in Baltimore American. Both mothers and offspring must be abundantly fed so as to keep these young things steadily on the gain, eating to their full capacity, from birth to market.

The calves must nurse their dams and be given an abundance of nutritious grain from the very start, both while on pasture and when in winter quarters. Concentrated feeds in addition to clover and alfalfa are absolutely necessary during the winter months. Long nursing on the dams or an abundance of milk or skim milk with grain is necessary. This all means that splendid, well-bred stock is to be used only. It means also that you have got to have ideal farm conditions, an abundance of the very best pasture and legume hays, silage and grain feeds.

Can Be Done in East.

There is no reason why baby beef cannot be made in the East, except that labor is expensive or that farms have not been farmed to produce highest quality legumes and other grasses for pasture. Besides this, the production of grain is more expensive as a rule in the East, thus contributing to high costs in making beef. You see the regular average pasture, with the regular average method of feeding, will not produce topnotch baby beef. I do not mean to say that we cannot reach a point where raising baby beef may not be profitable in the East; not that, but we have got to get ready for that sort of farming first.

LABOR AND FERTILITY SAVED

Excellent Farm Practice to Haul Manure Direct to Field Where It Is to Be Utilized.

Farmers and scientists are pretty well agreed that under ordinary farm conditions the best place for manure after it leaves the barn is spread on the field where it is to be utilized.

More and more farmers are building their barns now with a view to driving through the barn, loading the manure directly on to the wagon or spreader, and taking it out to the field each day. This is excellent farm practice. It saves labor and soil fertility.

Wise and Otherwise.

Alas, for the lass who is afflicted with lassitude!

There are sermons in stones—also ice cream in bricks.

Everybody knows how everybody else ought to do things.

A man isn't necessarily two-faced because he has a double chin.

When a woman hasn't any more to say she is willing to let a man talk.

Don't follow in the footsteps of competitors; set the pace.

A woman's tongue is often responsible for her shortness of breath.

Some men get rich while others are waiting for bigger opportunities.

If a woman's homely she always knows it; but it's different with a man.

If there is any question, nine times out of a possible ten it's good policy not to.

The Woodmen of the World lodge met in their new hall last Saturday night for the first time. A large per cent of the members were present, and quite a number of visitors from other places. Messrs. Hopkins and Pickett of Palestine and B. F. Dent of Crockett were the speakers for the evening. There was some good music rendered, and the meeting was immensely enjoyed by all present.

Quite a number of business men left Wednesday morning in automobiles for different points in the county to advertise and stimulate interest in the Houston County Summer Normal, which opens June 4th.

A CHAUTAUQUA NUMBER

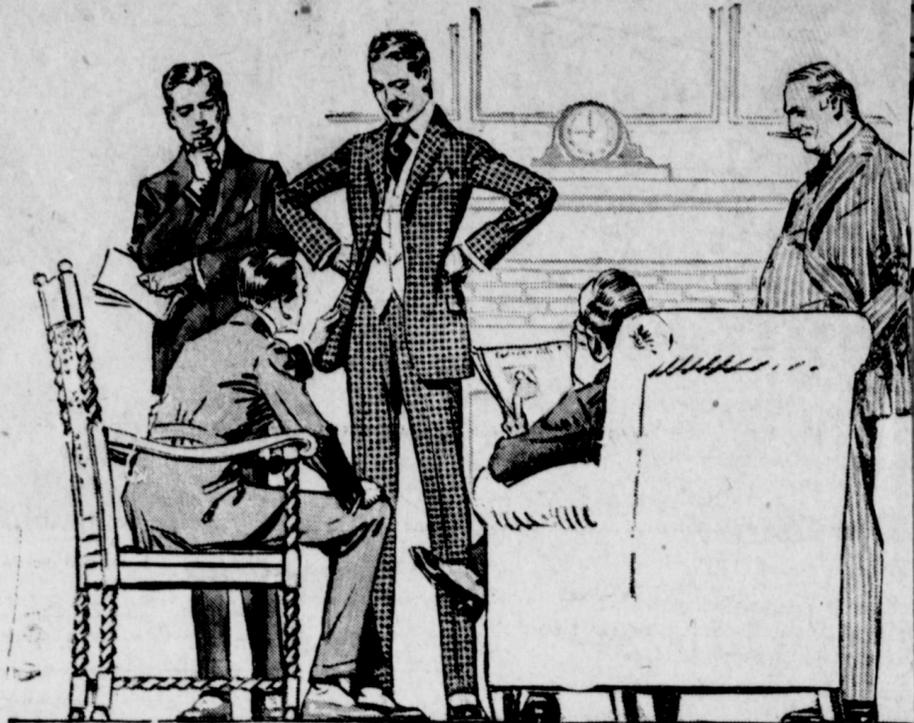

Colonel George A. Gearhart.—One of the most commanding figures on the Chautauqua platform. His lectures, "The Coming Man" and "Civic Righteousness," are classics.

GINGLES' JINGLES

BE LENIENT.

We should use lots of care in the judgments we pass, being careful expressing the thoughts we shall pass, and before we come down like a thousand of brick, on the coco of someone and think we are slick. We should stop and consider what it means to him, when his rep we assail, knock his course with a vim; when perhaps he is doing the best that he can, doing all in his power to be there like a man. And it may be a fact, he can't think as we do, many things we have learned to his mind may be new; his environment was not the same as your own, we will find that's the reason he different has grown. Then 'tis right to be lenient not criticize the poor fellow who's not to our stunts been put wise, it is better by far to advise on the trip than it is to condemn all the geezers that slip.
