American Marines in New Battle With Rebels

OLD HOME TOWN

"I'll be there with my best glasses on," writes Col. R. L. Penick of Stamford, well known West Texan, in accepting an invitation to attend the big celebration at Lake Cisco Friday, including the bathing girl revue at night. Col. Penick will act as a judge of the beauties entered.

A new wrinkle in the way of "non-stop flights" was inaugurated here this week, according to the police blotter at the city hall. A notation entered by Officer Tub Wilson told of being called to quiet a disturbance in a negro servant house on West Seventh street. The report said the negro man in the case was being supported by his wife because he had "misery in his back" and couldn't work although he was able to "run around." "I gave him 25 minutes to start a non-stop flight to anywhere he wished, with the understanding he would make no return trip," the notation concluded.

Constable C. S. Looney has returned home from Plainview where he went to recover an automobile for the C. O. Pass Chevrolet Co. on foreclosure. While in Plainview, the constable saw three men in the Plainview jail who are condemned to die. One of them was George Hassell, convicted of murdering his family at Farwell, Texas, after he had slain others in California. Hassell was given a reprieve to await sanity hearing. "He's not crazy; he's just mean," Looney declared. One of the other's was a negro convicted of murder in Crosby county, and the other a white man known as "Blackie," convicted of murder in Swisher county. Looney said that a heavy rainstorm swept that section of the state recently, and that house tops showed the result with patches on the roofs. Much cotton had to be replanted because of the damage, he said.

"They're talking about the Lake Cisco celebration all the way from Lubbock and Plainview to the Texas & Pacific railroad, and all along this line," declared E. O. Elliott Tuesday, after his return from a two weeks' automobile tour. "At Hale Center many people were talking about the celebration and planning to come here for the day, while at Lorraine where I spent last night I was told many would come here. Roy Edwards, lumberman there, said he was going to drive to Cisco for the event. The celebration seems to have gotten plenty of publicity away from Cisco, and I believe we shall have a great crowd." Mr. Elliott was accompanied on the tour by Mrs. Elliott and her sister, Mrs. John Land of Fort Worth, and the party was joined by Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Inman of Lubbock. Mrs. Inman is another sister of Mrs. Elliott. The party drove into New Mexico, visiting tourist centers as far north as Taos where gasoline cost them 33 1/2 cents a gallon.

SMALL GROUP BESIEGED BY NICARAGUANS

MANAGUA, Nic., July 19.—Rebel Nicaraguan troops are said to have renewed their siege of the U. S. marines holding Ocotal and it may be that reinforcements may have arrived too late. Two score marines after having fought off an attack by Gen. Sandino's rebels last Saturday are now reported making an effort to hold out against new attacks. Airplane squadrons have been sent out to attempt to drive off the rebels with machine guns. One plane is said to have been brought down by the rebels, but the pilot and gunner escaped.

The fighting began last Friday when the rebel general Sandino attacked Ocotal with 400 well armed men supported with six machine guns. At that time the garrison consisted of 3 U. S. marines and 47 members of the Nicaraguan constabulary. The defenders had but two machine guns. Despite the overwhelming odds against them the Americans and companions stood their ground for 17 hours. Sandino sent a note to Captain Gilbert B. Hatfield, commanding the garrison, demanding surrender of the Americans. Hatfield sent back the reply that: "American Marines never surrender. Even if we had no food and no water, you would find us full of fight to the end. You will never take Ocotal until the last of us is dead."

The first news of the battle reached the outside world when two scout planes following out the routine of their schedule visited Ocotal. Perceiving that a battle was in progress they hastened back to Managua to report. American headquarters immediately sent out five bombing planes under command of Major R. E. Rowel. As soon as the planes reached the scene of action, machine gunners directed heavy fire on the rebels, and dropped bombs. Heavy casualties among the revolutionaries resulted. One marine, Michael B. Obleski, and Charles Sidney Garrison of Hingham, Mass., was severely wounded. American general headquarters were informed that about 200 rebels were killed, mostly by the heavy bombing.

COOLIDGE-KELLOGG POLICY UNDER FIRE

WASHINGTON, July 19.—The reported killing of 300 rebels by United States marines provoked renewed attack on the Coolidge-Kellogg policy in Central America. Solomon de la Selva, Nicaraguan delegate to the pan-American Labor conference, charged the marines were there without warrant and against the wishes of the Nicaraguan people outside of the ruling Diaz clique, placed in power by the state monopoly. Meanwhile, Secretary Kellogg, replying to a note of protest by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, denounced Sandino as a bandit and his followers common outlaws. Kellogg intimated Sandino's forces will be confined to treated as common outlaws.

Sapiro would not disclose the amount of the check, but one second set the figure at $140,000. "I will not state what Mr. Ford paid me," Sapiro said. "Of course, it was a substantial amount. I want it represented, however, that this check includes cost of the suit. I was satisfied with Mr. Ford's retraction, and neither asked nor received pecuniary damages."

KERENSKY ON BOLSHEVISM

Alexander Kerensky, leader of the Russian revolution which deposed the czars, has little reason to love the Bolsheviks who ousted him. And indeed he makes no pretense to Christian forbearance toward the Moscow Reds. Yet he does make a sort of plea for them, which amounts to asking the world to give Bolshevikism enough rope to hang itself. He said, on his departure from America recently: "I hope that, despite the many provocations of the Bolsheviks, Europe will not break economic relations with Russia. The extremely primitive pre-capitalistic economic system of Bolshevikism is inexorably and inevitably being compelled to capitulate before private initiative and sane economic enterprise. Not by military adventures—not by restoration of the 'sanitary cordon' around Russia can the world help the Russian people to rid themselves of Bolshevik political barbarism. Bolshevikism will be smashed by persistent organized economic penetration and by political pressure of the Russian people within." It looks as if things are moving that way now, and what is good advice for Europe may be good advice for America. Capitalism, left to deal with Russia without passion or politics, may show Russians the error of their system far more effectively than soldiers or diplomats could do. The way to fight darkness, economic or otherwise, is not to shoot the darkness full of holes but, quietly and naturally, to let in the light.

CITY AND COUNTRY

"People know that Manhattan isn't the healthiest place in the world," says a New Yorker, "but they are ready to take their punishment from a health standpoint. From that point of view they ought to live in the suburbs. In Manhattan they miss abundant light and air, but they get something to compensate them in business and social ways. Most of those who live in apartment hotels can afford to go to the country when they want to." All true enough. It isn't necessary any longer, though, to draw a hard and fast line between city and country. The two are merging so that it is difficult often to tell where one leaves off and the other begins. Rapid rail transport, automobiles, extension of public services like water, sewerage, lighting and telephone to wide metropolitan areas, multiplication of household conveniences—all these make country and city more and more alike in comforts and educational opportunities, and make it often impossible to say whether one is a city person living in the country or a country person working in the city. Perhaps in the near future "urban" and "rural" will have little of their old meaning. A city may be a whole county or state.

It begins to look as if the nations will disarm about the time the Sacco-Vanzetti case is settled.

MORE BUSINESS

Railroad men, talking over the American business situation, predict a decided improvement for the third quarter of this year. They expect, for the three months beginning with July, a demand for 5 to 30 per cent more freight car space than there was in the last quarter. Moreover, they announce that they are ready to meet that demand. If any group of men are qualified to size up business conditions and prospects, it is transportation men, for they handle the things that business deals with and are in continuous touch with every phase of the country's economic life. Business in general has not been bad at all so far this year. There has been no boom, but neither has there been a slump. Things have been somewhat better than the average. Any decided improvement, therefore, means unquestionable prosperity for the railroads and for those who produce, distribute and use the goods they carry.

Maybe the cruiser problem could be settled by permitting nothing but cruising yachts in which admirals could go around paying international calls on each other.

The most serious problem of a pioneer aviator nowadays is to carry his medals home.

AIRPLANES FOR RAILROADS

A representative of the United States department of commerce says that five big railroads are thinking of using airplanes to supplant their rail passenger service. The railroads were considered to have shown notable liberal-mindedness and progress when they began supplanting their regular service with motor busses, as feeders. That branch is still capable of great extension, and will doubtless have a big development in the next few years. It will be just as natural an extension to use airplanes for feeders of the railroad system, connecting with the main lines or the branch lines or the bus lines, and also providing more rapid service between important points than can be done with trains.

CEMETERY CENSORSHIP

Not content with censoring the living, Italian Fascism is censoring the dead. Or at least it is censoring what the living may say about the dead. Even on tombstones nothing must be said which does not suit the Mussolini government. A commission consisting of a Catholic priest, an evangelical pastor and a Jewish rabbi is in charge of the epitaph department of government. All quotations are checked up for accuracy, for literary taste and for their bearing on public sentiment or government policies. "She was my only daughter," a grieving father had carved on his child's tombstone. "She was young, beautiful and good. She was to have been married, perhaps within a month. Ah, cruel destiny!" That is deleted as not in good taste. All epitaphs expressing "rebellious or revolutionary sentiments," or derogatory to the world war, are forbidden. All that remains now is to extend the ban to heaven and hell. But St. Peter and Satan may have something to say about that.

"What Keeps the Stars Hot?" is a Literary Digest headline. Being threatened with salary cuts, is our guess.

They say it is a backward summer, and now that it has arrived so completely and unmistakably, we're glad it didn't come any sooner.

A GOOD MONKEY

A woman speaking of a servant observed, "She isn't even a good monkey, for she can't even imitate."

Being a good monkey is quite a valuable qualification. Next to being able to imitate comes the ability to imitate. Very few of us can imitate anything worth while. Most of us who get anywhere do so through imitation. Said a prosperous business man, "I always copy the successful fellow until I am able to improve on his methods."

Most theatrical acts are imitation.

DINNER STORIES.

"An undertaker was run over by an auto and died."

"He didn't make much on that funeral, did he?"

"No. In fact, he went in the hole."

A visitor at the country club, while eating lunch, called the steward to his table.

"Steward," he objected, "the spinach is undone."

"I'm sorry, sir," replied the waiter, helping himself to another radish with a twinkle in his eye, "but you'll have to take that up with the Greens committee."

Never Hear of Them!

The indusnons book agent was at the door. He was handsome but him, because he can at least follow a pattern that somebody else has demonstrated as being a good one. But we see him who can't be a good monkey, for what can he do? Show him how and then he can't do it. Explain and explain and he cannot catch the explanation, or he will not.

There is no excuse for a man's not being a good monkey, for everyone is surrounded by a multiplicity of experts eager to show how things should be done. The world is replete with working models demonstrating how to live decently, industriously and becomingly. On every hand are opportunities for learning how to be a first class washerwoman, an excellent cook, a competent banker, a successful business man, a satisfactory grocery clerk. Employers are eager to teach employees the business and pay them for learning. If there is one thing that the world is anxious to accomplish it is to teach everybody in it how to do all sorts of things correctly.

When a man employs a stenographer who has the quality of being a good monkey, he can have hopes even though she is no great shakes as a stenographer, because he can teach her what he wants done and eventually she will get to do things as they should be done. When a lawyer takes in an assistant who is a good monkey he can feel that the future holds some degree of brightness because the assistant will imitate and do exactly as his superior indicates.

What a joy is church congregation of good monkeys! They will follow the lead of the pastor, do team work, render services, and otherwise carry on the work of the Lord. Children who are good monkeys are a joy to their fathers and mothers, but they place a great strain on parenthood, for special care must be taken to set them the right sorts of examples.

Not everyone is born to blaze a trail, to point a way, to create, but everyone who is born at all, no matter how lowly, if he will but try, be a good monkey. And when the time comes to lay off his fleshly garb, he can face his Maker and declare with honest sincerity, "I have done the best I could those things that I have been shown how to do;" and his Maker will reply, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

Better Prices For Farm Crops Assure Prosperity

NEW YORK, July 19.—There has been no decided tendency toward wage reduction in the United States since January 1. State and federal employment bureaus reporting from different sections indicate that fact today. This, according to B. C. Seipel, manager of the state city employment bureau of the Cleveland Industrial Territory, assures a continuation of high consumption, active production, maintenance of purchasing power and consequent satisfactory retail sales.

Prices Advancing

Weather conditions in the farm districts have been more favorable lately. Prices have advanced in corn, wheat and cotton to levels above those recorded at this time last year. The indications are that despite the setbacks the agricultural communities which account for a goodly part of the volume of retail trade will be fully as prosperous as a year ago unless the weather again turns unfavorable. This, despite the somewhat pessimistic report of the department of agriculture.

General business activity supports the above conclusions since the volume of purchasing now is shown by bank debts and other indications to be about seven per cent higher than a year ago. Naturally there will continue some dullness during the heated summer period. But business men anticipate a fine expansion of buying with the advent of fall and a big holiday season.

Conditions Good

A 4,000 mile automobile trip just concluded by a trained observer through all the states east of the Mississippi and north of the Missouri and Dixie line, showed crop conditions favorable, but not more generally favorable than in Minnesota, Wisconsin and the Dakotas. In fact, the situation in Minnesota, the Dakotas, Montana and parts of Northern Michigan and Wisconsin is brighter than for the country as a whole. Corn is causing the greatest anxiety at present, but even this product is advancing fast.

NEW GORDON POOL GUSHER MAKING 1100

Flowing steadily nearly 50 barrels an hour or at the rate of slightly more than 1,100 barrels a day, the Watson No. 2 of C. M. Root and John Fehl, Eastland operators, is the newest gusher in the Gordon pool, eight miles northeast of Cisco.

The new well is the fourth producer in the gusher class to be completed in the pool, the other big wells being McLester Oil company's No. 1 Thorp, which came in for 1,500 barrels; G. A. Davission's No. 1

Good, 1,100 barrels; McLester's southwest of Root & Fehl's Watson No. 2 Thorp, 700 barrels; and the No. 1 which came in about four months ago with a big flow and Col. Robert D. Gordon, 520 barrels a day estimated at 2,000 barrels a month. The gusher is about 125 feet deep. However, the No. 1 bridged

C. M. Root and John Fehl, owners of the new gusher, are among the most active operators in the Eastland field. Mr. Root, a veteran of many wells, has been successful in Oklahoma, California, Kansas and Texas. His associates, Mr. Fehl, has drilled a number of wells in this territory and has been quite successful in shallow development wells.

Mr. Root and associates have drilled five wells in the Gordon sector and despite the fact that the first two failed to produce, they did. Young Drug Co.
