U.S. PROSPEROUS-COOLIDGE

Coolidge declared today in transmitting to congress his message on the budget for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1929.

Any further cut is unwarranted, the president said, and might upset the financial stability of the federal government. The house ways and means committee, in drafting the new revenue bill, has adhered fairly closely to the president's warning. It exceeded his figures by only $10,000,000. A movement to increase the reduction when the bill gets to the floor of the house and senate.

The estimated surplus for 1929 is $252,549,285, which is about half of the estimated surplus for 1928, and one-third of the actual surplus for the 1927 fiscal year.

The estimated surplus as of next June is $454,285,000, or about twice the surplus indicated in the president's budget measure last year.

The ex-Mrs. W. F. Watson of the governor Sixth street are in town 957,000 acre Mr. Watson on Thursday of last week underwent an operation for appendicitis. A letter received by friends here states that the operation was entirely successful, and Mr. Watson's many friends will be glad to know that he is getting along nicely.

The expenditure estimate for 1929 covers not include money for flood control except the fifth year allotment of $10,000,000 in the six year program authorized by congress. The president said that adequate flood protection "meets the requirement of absolute and urgent necessity."

The budget, the president declared, has been "directly responsible for our present position of financial stability. To jeopardize our balanced budget, to do anything that in the most remote degree would threaten to interfere with the orderly processes of wise financing, to take steps in the interest of tax reduction."

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce C. Boney had as their guests Sunday Mrs. Clarence Hodier, Miss Elsie Shannon, Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Cooper and son, Billy, of Fort Worth.

LOBO QUEENS MEET DANIEL BAKER FRIDAY

The Cisco High Lobo Queens, girls' basketball team, will just about have their hands full Friday night at 7:15 when they meet the first team from Daniel Baker college of Brownwood. The game will be played at the high school gymnasium, and a large crowd is expected to be present because of the high caliber of competition the Cisco girls must face.

WORK IS NECESSARY

My son, remember you have to work. Whether you handle pick of wheelbarrow or a set of books, digging ditches or editing a newspaper, ringing an auction bell or writing funny things, you must work. Don't be afraid of killing yourself by overworking on the sunny side of thirty. Men die sometimes, but it is because they quit at 9 a. m. and don't go home until 2 a. m. It's the intervals that kill, my son. The work gives you appetite for your meals; it gives you a perfect appreciation of a holiday.

There are young men who do not work, but the country is not proud of them. It does not even know their names; it only speaks of them as old Sandus's boys. So find out what you want to be and do. Take off your coat and make dust in the world. The busier you are, the less harm you are apt to get into, the sweeter will be your sleep, the brighter your holidays, and the better satisfied the whole world will be with you.—BOB BURDETTE.

Rain Precedes Predicted Cold Wave

WEATHERMAN WARNS STATE OF BLIZZARD

The first rain to fall in many weeks in Cisco began falling at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon as the forerunner of what is predicted to be the coldest weather of the present winter. Farmers were pleased at the rainfall which was gentle and said to be needed by winter grain.

No lecture will be delivered Wednesday night when the program will be in charge of the young people, but on Thursday and Friday evenings Dr. John W. Tyndall, who is conducting a Bible institute at Randolph college, will speak. He will also occupy the pulpit Sunday morning and evening.

Dallas Man Slain On Street Today

DALLAS, Dec. 6.—As his former wife looked on, Street Car Conductor D. H. Hart, fired three shots from a repeating shotgun at J. N. Whaley, 51, in the downtown section at 7 o'clock today. Whaley died in an ambulance on the way to the hospital. While Whaley lay in a pool of blood on the sidewalk and the former Mrs. Hart screamed in terror, Hart ran to the county jail where he surrendered. The Harts had been divorced two months.

Watson of Colorado, Republican, and a former Denver lawyer; Carl Hayden of Arizona, Democrat, a war veteran and member of the House since 1919; Oscar Underwood, Democrat, who relieves Senator Barkley of Kentucky, Democrat, ardent prohibitionist and member of the House since 1912.

Commercial State Bank Depositors Meet Here Saturday to Discuss Plan To Regain Money From State Funds

Depositors of the old Commercial State Bank of Cisco will meet here Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the chamber of commerce to consider steps to be taken in attempting to recover their claims against the bank, it was announced Tuesday by the committee appointed by the stockholders at a previous meeting. Effort to hold such a meeting last Saturday resulted in only a few being present and it is hoped to have a larger attendance Friday.

CONE JOHNSON HITS COUNTY HIGHWAY AID

AUSTIN, Dec. 6.—The practice of requiring counties to aid in construction of cardinal highways must be abandoned if a connected system is to be materialized, Cone Johnson, state highway commissioner, declared in a statement today. In sponsoring repudiation of various designations already made because of local aid and importance, Johnson said this would allow classification of the highways into primary and secondary groups, and that the most important highways could be built complete at one time. He urged a state bond issue to be financed by an adequate gasoline tax as the logical method of completing the state highway system.

EIGHT BURN TO DEATH IN WEST VIRGINIA

WILLIAMSON, West Va., Dec. 6.—Eight persons, including two women and three children, died in a rooming house fire here today, Albert Ireson, 49; Robert Ireson, 40; John L. Mareum, 33; Mrs. Willie Hampton, 38; and her three children; and Mrs. Myrtle Brown, 20.

SIX TRAINMEN MAY DIE FROM BURNS

ATLANTA, Dec. 6.—Six trainmen were believed fatally burned when a gasoline tank car ignited when a freight train was derailed at Ben Hill today.

REMUS HAS VIOLENT TILT WITH JURIST

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 6.—George Remus, on trial here for murder of his wife, Imogene Remus, today engaged in a violent argument with Judge Chester R. Shook who threatened to cite him for contempt of court. The sheriff and bailiffs put Remus back into his chair by force. Meanwhile, Remus' beautiful daughter, Romola, sitting in the prisoner's dock with her father, urged him not to do "anything rash." Judge Shook lost his patience completely for the first time during the trial, and rebuked Remus severely. Later, after he had calmed down and conferred with attorneys for both sides, he expressed regret. Remus promptly jumped to his feet and apologized.

CISCO ASKS WACO GAME BE PLAYED HERE

A letter was sent by the Cisco chamber of commerce to Coach Paul Tyson of the Waco high school football team Monday night asking that in the event Waco should win its game with Sherman Saturday, it play the state championship game in Cisco. Waco and Abilene are deemed as favorites to win this week's game and should the dope be borne out, then it is believed Cisco has a chance of getting the Waco-Abilene game played here. Past games between these two teams have always been played on neutral grounds, one of them in Dallas and the other in Fort Worth, but neither place proved entirely satisfactory. Due to the fact that Cisco has direct rail connections with Waco and is but slightly farther distant than Fort Worth or Dallas, it is believed Waco might consent to play here. The many advantages Cisco has to offer for a state championship game were set forth in the letter.

LEGION NAMES COMMITTEE ON MEMBER DRIVE

The American Legion post held an enthusiastic meeting Monday evening when a membership committee composed of H. G. Bailey, H. A. Bible, and J. T. Maddux was appointed to formulate plans for a membership drive to be started immediately. For the period of the drive, membership for the next year will be $3.00, but this is only a special concession, and for the limited time only; thereafter the regular dues of $5.00 per year will be required of applicants for membership. The legion is urging ex-service men to get in now and take advantage of the lower rate. Tuesday evening from 7 till 8 was appointed for the meeting next week.

Two Men Die As Airplane Crashes

MEMPHIS, Mo., Dec. 6.—Believed to have lost their balance when their airplane went into a tailspin Lee A. Briggs, 50, president of an aircraft company, and Otis Oliver, one of his employees, were killed when they fell in an airplane 200 feet from the ground.

FEUD TAKES TWO MORE

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 6.—Awaiting until just after dawn today, gangster guns roared here in the removal of the Italian road that has taken 13 lives in a few months and dropped Peter Bonanno and Joseph Lapparuto, both of whom are expected to die.

PRESIDENT'S NOTE STIRS CRITICISM

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—President Coolidge's message today provoked diverse comment, administration leaders generally praising the message while democrats and progressives picked flaws in many of the president's recommendations. Senator Brookhart, Iowa insurgent, condemned the president's farm program in no uncertain terms. He said the president had supported a subsidy for American railroads, a direct subsidy for ship owners, and had put the government in the banking business through the federal reserve system. "After failing to oppose these measures for their use to aid the farmer," Brookhart asserted, "he has promised the farmers equality, but in office he repudiates the pledge. I predict that if the president carries out his program, the west and south will put the republican party out of business."

BEACH POINTED OUT AS MAN AT MURDER SCENE

MAYS LANDING, N. J., Dec. 6.—Shortly after the defense had rested its case in the Lilliendahl murder trial today, the prosecution created a furor of excitement in the court room which acted as a bombshell to the defense when Harry F. Sanderson was called to the stand and positively identified Willis Beach, co-defendant with Mrs. Margaret Lilliendahl, as the man he saw running away from the murder scene September 15. His testimony came within a few minutes after Mrs. Lilliendahl had left the stand, haggard and drawn, after rigid cross examination.

FROM SINAI TO MT. NEBO BONEY'S TALK

"From Sinai to Mt. Nebo," the sermon-lecture of Rev. R. C. Boney at the First Presbyterian church Sunday evening, dealt with the wilderness in which the children of Israel were portrayed as wanderers. With the assistance of stereopticon films, Mr. Boney contrasted this barren mountainous stretch of country with the fertile plains, and farming sections of Palestine. Sixty pictures were shown, as the preacher gave the history of the wanderings as these pictures were thrown upon the screen. The lands of the Edomites, Moabites, and Amoritcs presented such desolation that one attendant said, "No wonder the children of Israel murmured."

In contrast there was the rich land of Promise to which they might have gone had it not been for the murmuring. Biblical history took the leading role in the lecture. Another attendant said, "I have learned more biblical history since this picture series been shown than I ever thought I would know." In contrast to the general barrenness of the section covered, the Arnon river which flows into the Dead Sea on the western side, has along its course some wonderful scenery, and seems as an oasis to those who have been unaccustomed to so much unwatered country, the minister said.

President Urges Naval Program In Annual Address to Congress; Asks Mississippi River Relief

BY GEORGE R. HOLMES, U. S. Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—A satisfying picture of American conditions—peaceful and prosperous—was presented to the new congress today by President Coolidge in his annual message. He accompanied it with recommendations covering a variety of subjects, ranging from tax reduction to strengthening the navy. Today's message was the longest Mr. Coolidge has transmitted to congress during his five years in the presidency, but the politicians searched in vain for some hint as to his future political plans. "It is gratifying to report," said Mr. Coolidge, "that for the fourth consecutive year the state of the union in general is good. We are at peace. The country as a whole has had a prosperity never exceeded. Wages are at their highest range; employment is plentiful. Some parts of agriculture and industry have lagged; some localities have suffered from storm and flood. But such losses have been absorbed without serious detriment to our great economic structure."

Outstanding among the president's recommendations to the new congress was his request that the navy be immediately strengthened—a more which he opposed last session on the eve of the ill-fated Geneva Naval Conference. Reference to the failure at Geneva, the president said: "We need a very substantial sea amendment. It (the navy) needs submarines, airplane carriers and a material addition to its force of cruisers. We can plan for the future and begin a moderate building program." The president was quick to deny, however, that this meant any competitive arming. Even had Japan, Great Britain and the United States been able to agree upon naval limitation at Geneva, he said, it still would have been necessary to build additional ships to round out the American navy.

"The failure to agree," he said, "should not cause us to build either more or less than we think wise should."

This country has put away the old world policy of competitive armaments. We should enter on no competition. But we should refrain from any needful program. It should be known to all that our military power holds no threat of aggression."

Wherever our flag goes the rights of humanity increase." In many of his recommendations, the president found himself retracing the familiar paths of previous messages. He dwelt at considerable length on the continued need for government economy; he gave "complete support" to the treasury tax reduction program of not to exceed $225,000,000; he reiterated his opposition to the McNary-Hangen farm bill, which he vetoed last session; he again advised that the government get out of the shipping business; he warned against any tinkering with the tariff; restore the government's determination to enforce prohibition to the best of its ability; approved the Boulder Dam project; recommended the enactment of an anti-lynching bill; endorsed railroad consolidations; asked for congressional authority to intervene in coal strikes; favored operation of a federal department of education with a place in the cabinet; and urged congress to deal cautiously and carefully with the problem of flood control.

SPEECH IN BRIEF

The president's message took the form: National Defense—Congress should authorize moderate navy building program of submarines, airplane carriers and cruisers. Farm Relief—Agricultural conditions are improved. Will support "any sound proposal," but none involving price fixing. Flood Control—Congress should proceed cautiously, confining action this session to lower Mississippi valley. Tax Reduction—Taxes can be safely reduced not more than $225,000,000. Government Economy—Continue it vigorously. Merchant Marine—Public operation unsuccessful. Government should relinquish. Tariff—Don't tinker with it. Inland Navigation—Boulder dam should be authorized. Prohibition—All citizens should obey the law; government will enforce it to best of its ability. Coal—Congress should be empowered to intervene in strikes. Railroad Consolidation—For further efficiency railroads must consolidate. Education—Should have separate seat and department in cabinet. Foreign Relations—At peace with all nations and hope to remain so. The Negro—Should be protected by anti-lynching bill. Muscle Shoals—Should be disposed of. Aviation—Should be promoted commercially, and particularly air mail service between countries of Western hemisphere.

len, the lower Mississippi, considering tributaries only so far as they materially affect the main flood problem."

He added significantly that "the recognized needs of the Mississippi should not be made a vehicle for carrying other projects," a rather pointed reference to the danger of porkbarrel appropriations growing out of this problem.

BECKY JUDGE ANGERED BY ATTORNEYS

LAGRANGE, Dec. 6.—Morning session of court in the trial of Mrs. Rebecca Bradley Rogers, 22, University of Texas coed, was marked by severe criticism of tactics of attorneys on both sides in examining witnesses by Judge M. C. Jeffrey, presiding. Characterizing the attorneys' questions were "boiling," Judge Jeffrey declared not more than one witness in 100 could pass the test being set down. Today's session failed to produce a single juror. John H. Cofer, Mrs. Rogers' attorney, declared the charge "with firearms" in the indictment would be fought inasmuch as the gun with which she held up the bank contained no magazine and was not loaded.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE HOUSE OF THE LORD—I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord. Our feet shall stand within thy gates, O Jerusalem. Pray for the peace of Jerusalem: they shall prosper that love Thee. Because of the house of the Lord our God I will seek Thy good.—Ps. 122:1-2; 6:9.

SPORTSMANSHIP IN GOVERNMENT

Sir Esme Howard, British ambassador, put in a good stroke of "British propaganda" in his recent address to Mayflower descendants in Boston. He referred to "certain essentially English things" that the Pilgrim Fathers and other early American settlers had brought from England, "which will stick, willily, to this continent, and which all the censoring of books in the world cannot terminate."

- First: "No taxation without representation." Second: "No revolution against the declared will of the majority."

Each of these principles is incomplete without the other. Each implies the other. Representative government can succeed only when the majority is allowed to rule. Voters and parties must be good sports. Any minority that rebels against the rule of the majority, where that majority has freely and clearly expressed its verdict, is not championing liberty but rebelling against a fundamental condition of liberty—objecting to the only practical way in which political liberty can express itself in government.

TWINS

In one type of cases, at least, fingerprints fall down. It is not true that every human being has fingerprints unlike all others. Prof. Newman, biologist of the University of Chicago, finds that the fingerprints of "identical twins" are alike. In case, then, of a crime committed by one twin, his fingerprints might incriminate the other. Or the identity of one might be confused with the other's. "Identical twins," the professor explains, are those who are of the same sex and look alike. There has been confusion enough with such pairs, in drama, fiction and ordinary life, but few have realized how thorough-going the likeness may be. It is even found that their mental likeness seems to parallel their physical likeness, and the professor goes so far as to suggest that neither seems quite complete mentally without the other. In his tests, sometimes identical twins did not score so well mentally when separated as they did when together.

FOR WOMEN SMOKERS

Male Christmas shoppers are informed by a scandalized brother that they can buy a very nifty woman's cigarette lighter for $150, and a perfectly good cigarette case, if you get what we mean, finished in jade and rubies, may be had for $225. Such necessities of the holiday season lead one commentator to remark that their presence in shop windows alarms him more than the women's pictures on billboard cigarette ads alarm the National Grange. It will be quite obvious immediately to every man what a dreadful thing it is for women to smoke.

PROFIT AND PROSPERITY

Roger Babson, the statistician, looks for a good year in 1928, in spite of his disapproval of installment buying tendencies. And in his prophecy he calls attention to a remarkable condition existing in American business. It is a period of declining interest rates and declining commodity prices—two things, he says, that never before traveled together. He calls this an era of "profitless prosperity," which is a memorable phrase and probably describes the situation about as well as can be done in two words. Like most clever phrases, however, it leaves things to be explained. How can it be prosperity, if it is profitless? The terms are relative, of course. Business men in general are not making so much profit as they think they ought to make, from the volume of goods passing through their hands. Competition is keener, making profit margins smaller. The masses of people—the consumers—are the real beneficiaries of this prosperity. Never before have they got so much of the necessities and comforts of life for their labors.

HONORING STEUBEN

Here and there about the country, where historical anniversaries are matters of real interest, December 1 was observed with talks and studies honoring Baron von Steuben. That day was the 150th anniversary of his landing on our eastern shore to help the revolutionists in their war of independence. He was a German who had been following the American adventure with interest and sympathy. Benjamin Franklin negotiated with him in Paris, with the result that he came to America and proceeded to help whip an undisciplined and poorly equipped army into some degree of military efficiency. It was upon Washington's urging that congress made him a major general. George Washington described him as an indispensable adjunct to the service. School children studying American history are probably a little more familiar with Baron von Steuben's name than their elders who have forgotten much of the history they once learned. But the fact that there are many counties and towns named for the great German soldier shows his importance to the American cause was well recognized in an earlier day.

DO YOU REMEMBER?

American and Bonadon. December, 1914.

Two literary societies have been organized by the pupils of the Cisco public school, and they held their first joint meeting last Friday night when a debate was enjoyed by a crowd of spectators that almost filled the auditorium. Before the debate a program was rendered as follows:

Address—Supt. R. D. Green. Reading—Sarah Maud Busham. Vocal Duet—Mr. Gillispie and Miss Hittson.

Reading—Opal Dossert. Jokes—Wanda Green. Instrumental Duet—Ray Jahn and Julia Lee. Enthusiasm ran high among the members of the societies, and their yells and songs were inspiring. The speakers were: For the affirmative, Messrs. Myrick and Bonadon; for the negative, Messrs. Hart and Pinnell. The subject was: "Resolved that the next legislature should pass a compulsory educational law, compelling all children between the ages of seven and fourteen years to attend school at least six months during the year."

The subject was handled very ably by the speakers for both sides, and the judges stated that it was very difficult for them to make a decision. But finally the affirmative was given two votes and the negative one vote. The two societies are named the Steubs and the Wilsons. The Wilsons won the debate. The judges of the debate were: Rev. J. E. Crawford, Rev. E. Stubblefield and Prof. O. C. Britton. Dossell Lane arrived home yesterday from Tyler where he has been attending Tyler Commercial College. Sid McIntyre and Vinie Phillips, two of our best colored people, were married last Thursday. Miss Nellie Hines Eppler returned Saturday from Pecos City where she had spent the summer with her sister. Dr. J. A. Fensell returned Friday from Austin where he had been with his sister, Miss Glacie, who has been ill. Mrs. Marshall Cook of Straun returned home Saturday after spending the week-end with Mrs. R. Q. Lee. Miss Nova Shelton returned to Abilene Sunday after spending several days in the city with her parents.

FINE POINTS

A woman laden with Christmas bundles entered a bus terminal and climbed into a jitney. "Lady," said the driver, eyeing the bundles disapprovingly. "The car ahead of me goes out before I do." "I know," replied the woman, "but there isn't room in there for me." The driver shifted around uneasily in his seat and remarked that it would be fifteen minutes before he left. He continued to talk about how long it would be before realize that Christmas shoppers must have bundles and that they must be accommodated; and that he must drive to please the public or not drive at all.

A baker overlooks a fine point when he lets his clerks finger dirty greenbacks that have reposed in the shoes of tramps, and in the pockets of diseased, filthy persons, then use those same fingers, unwashed, to pick up rolls and cakes and other things that go into folks' mouths.

A tailor overlooks a fine point when he presses a suit permeated with the fumes of strong tobacco, and another suit, redolent with body odors, then uses that same pressing cloth, unwashed, to iron out the brand new suit of some fastidious fellow with a keen sense of smell who notices that every time he gets a little warm in that suit he smells like a wet dog under a hot stove.

Failure to observe fine points has caused many a man to go backward—or not to go ahead, or to go ahead but slowly, when he might have gone swiftly.

COOLIDGE WOULD LIMIT TAX CUT TO $225,000.00

BUDGET NOTE PLACES COST AT 4 BILLION

By KENNETH CLARK
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Tax reduction this session should be held to $225,000,000, President Coolidge declared today in transmitting to congress his message on the budget for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1929.

Any further cut is unwarranted, the president said, and might upset the financial stability of the federal government. The house ways and means committee, in drafting the new revenue bill, has adhered fairly closely to the president's warning. It exceeded his figures by only $10,000,000. A movement was under way, however, to increase the reduction when the bill gets to the floor of the house and senate.

The estimated surplus for 1929 is $252,540,283, which is about half of the estimated surplus for 1928, and one-third of the actual surplus for the 1927 fiscal year.

The estimated surplus as of next June is $454,283,903, or about twice the surplus projected in the president's budget measure last year.

The estimated cost of running the government in 1929 is $3,556,957,031, as against $3,021,314,285 for 1928, or a reduction of $535,642,746. Estimated receipts for 1929 are $3,809,497,314, as against $4,075,508,001 for 1928, or a slump of $266,010,687. These figures do not include postal revenues and expenditures which are paid from postal revenues.

The expenditure estimate for 1929 does not include money for flood control, except the fifth year allowance of $10,000,000 in the six year program authorized by congress. The president said that adequate flood protection "meets the requirement of absolute and urgent necessity."

The budget, the president declared, has been "directly responsible for our present position of financial stability. To jeopardize our balanced budget, to do anything that in the most remote degree would threaten to interfere with the orderly processes of wise financing, to take steps in the interest of tax reduction that would necessitate either revolutionary curtailment of important federal projects and activities or compel a later upward revision of the rates, or both, is unthinkable," he said.

Since the war the public debt has been reduced on June 30, 1927, by $8,084,794,716, at an annual saving in interest of approximately $320,000,000.

The president's views on other fiscal problems follow:

Refunding taxes—The budget contains an estimate of $135,000,000 for refunding of taxes for the full fiscal year 1929. "I believe the time has come when our estimates of appropriation for refunding taxes illegally collected should be reflected in the appropriation items requested in the budget."

Civilian employees—"Taking all things into consideration, I feel that the government is liberal in the treatment of its employees." He estimated the average salary of the government employe for 1929 at $1,897 annually.

National defense—An estimate of approximately $645,000,000 is carried for national defense. This represents $48,000,000 for the increase of the navy, and provides for naval construction authorized by congress with the exception of three submarines and twelve destroyers authorized in 1916, "for which no funds are desired at this time."

Navy craft under construction in 1929 will comprise two submarines and eight cruisers, of which two will be practically completed by 1929—the Pensacola and Salt Lake City. At the end of the year the navy will have 626 of the 1,000 planes authorized in the five-year program.

Estimates for the army contemplate a regular enlisted personnel of 118,750, with 12,000 officers. Money is provided for the second year increment in the five year program looking toward 1,800 airplanes for the army air corps.

Air service—"Our procurement of aircraft and accessories is from private industry. That is as it should be. We have gone further than this. Private industry is now operating by contract our entire postal air service. We now have 13 contract air mail routes in operation and seven others under contract with a view to early operation." This policy of cooperating with private industry is helping to bring America to the fore front in air navigation. More than 10,000

GOVERNMENT COST

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Here are the chief budget estimates of federal expenditures for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1929.

Senate—$2,823,280, decrease $14,670.

House—$7,516,193, decrease 14,723.

State Department—$14,015,188, increase $889,008.

Interest on Public Debt—$970,000,000, decrease $50,000,000.

Bureau of Prohibition estimates were decreased $591,265.

miles of lighted airways will be completed next year.

Federal aid to states—"To relieve the states of their just obligations by resort to the federal treasury in the final result is hurtful rather than helpful to the state, and unfair to the payers of national taxes. We should not only decidedly refuse to countenance additional federal participation in state-aid projects, but should make careful study of all our activities of that character with a view to curtailing them."

Second Liberty loan—Retirement of this loan will result in a total annual saving in interest of more than $45,000,000.

FORD ADOPTS TRIPLEX GLASS FOR NEW CARS

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—Most radically different of all the innovations in the new Ford car, and saved till the last to be announced, is the fact that Triplex glass will be used as standard equipment in the windshields of all Ford models. This is the clear-vision, non-shattering glass which in the past year has been gaining rapidly in general use, but Ford is the first American manufacturer to make it standard in his cars. Not to be distinguished by eye from ordinary plate glass, it does not shatter under impact and thereby eliminates two-thirds of the danger of motoring, according to the manufacturer. Sixty-five per cent of all injuries in auto accidents are caused by broken glass, according to insurance figures, Mr. Ford gives as his reason for making this innovation he believes that the safety of the motoring public is of primary consequence. Other features of his new car, hitherto unannounced, bear out his efforts in this direction. Triplex, originally a British product, made its appearance here last year. It is seen in sixteen cars in the current Commodore Salon. Amory L. Haskell, president of the Triplex Safety Glass company of North America, talked last night about this new and enormous order: "To meet Ford demands we have tripled our factory in Holbrook and increased our production 250 per cent in the past twelve days. We brought new grinding machinery from California by airplane. Within the month, our production will have increased 800 per cent more, and soon after New Year's we shall be equipping 1,000 cars a day." In construction, this glass consists of two outside layers of plate glass with a middle, binding layer of pyroxalin plastic. The three laminations are welded together under heat, pressure, and chemical treatment. The Underwriters' Laboratories passed on the glass recently.

"Quality Counts; Watch Us Grow"

Old San Francisco

BY ALLIE LOWE MILLS

Dolores Costello in "OLD SAN FRANCISCO" is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Buckwell, San Francisco boss, with lawyer, Brandon, attempts to gain possession of Vasquez ranch, occupied by Vasquez and his beautiful granddaughter Dolores. Terry, Brandon's nephew, who loves Dolores, discloses their plot. Terry and Dolores have misadventures. Dolores falls into Buckwell's clutches. Terry saves her. Angered, Buckwell uses force to get Vasquez, but is defeated. He tries again, but Vasquez, heading Terry's warning, escapes Buckwell. Vasquez dies from stroke caused by Buckwell's threats. Dolores discovers Buckwell's Chinese origin and tells Terry. They expose Buckwell, who learns their action and kidnaps them both in order to save himself.

"What are you doing with us?" Terry managed to get out before he was securely silenced again. "He, ha," chuckled Jimmie. "The Texas Kid joined in. 'That's a good 'un' but, as the dame 'ere would say, it's a secret' and again they laughed uproariously. For such an incident to take place on the streets without interference from the police did not speak well for San Francisco. But it was proven later that the police were under the jurisdiction of just such bosses as Buckwell. They knew better than to interfere with affairs that would probably bring the ill will of local politicians and mean the loss of their jobs. Taking out two large squares of silk, Jimmie and the Texas Kid proceeded to roll them into long hand-ages. "It's a shame to cover them pretty eyes," commented Jimmie, "but orders is orders, and we've most come to where we're going." Without further ado Dolores was blindfolded. Immediately she was conscious of a great disturbance in the carriage. Terry was strenuously objecting to the additional punishment. He lashed around with his body, twisting and thumping against the Texas Kid with his shoulders. "Cut it—out it!" said Jimmie, nursing a painful bruise that Terry had inflicted on his face with a blow from handcuffed fists. Terry's struggles only increased. "All right, then maybe I'll calm yer," and Jimmie tapped him on the head with a pocket billie. "Dat'll hold 'im fer awhile. De girl's de goods de boss wants, anyhow," observed the Texas Kid. Dolores heard, and her anxiety increased. She could not even reach Terry. She sobbed inwardly as she wondered what was going to become of them and if Terry was badly hurt. Presently she was conscious of the carriage stopping and thought it strange that not a word was spoken by either of the thugs or the driver. She sobbed anew when she could tell from the sounds that two of the men were carrying Terry. "He can't walk! Is he dead?" "What will they do with him?" she wondered. In absolute silence she was guided by the arm through a narrow doorway. She could tell it was narrow because she felt her long skirts swish against the sides as she was pushed through. She and her guide stopped for several minutes, and when they continued she could not hear any sounds of Terry and the men who were carrying him. Apparently they had gone by a different way. With her heart almost bursting from worry and fear Dolores stumbled along. She could neither see, speak nor use her hands, and it was terrifying to go up and down stairways, along narrow halls and stand in the mysterious blackness with handaged eyes to wait while doors were opened in response to her guide's weird tapping. Dolores did not know that she was in the underground passages leading to Chris Buckwell's home. After what seemed to her an eternity she found that they were walking on heavily carpeted floors and up a long flight of carpeted stairs. "Here ye are," commented the Texas Kid, untying her handages. Some diggings, ain't they?" he observed as Dolores looked about her in fear and surprise. It was an oriental bedchamber of elaborate and terrifying design. There were heavily embroidered silk window draperies. The walls were hand painted with dragons. The floor highly waxed with many handsome Chinese rugs scattered about. Lights on the side walls and ceiling gleamed from the mouths and eyes of great metal dragons. The furniture was black ebony and real lacquer. It was handsome but suitable only for exhibition purposes. Dolores felt more alone and frightened than ever. She knew that she was in the home of a Chinaman, and her blood turned cold with dread. "I'll take de bracelets wide me," observed the Kid, waiting action to be done; then he continued, "If ye want somethin' de boss says ye're to ring de bell," and without even a backward glance he went out and closed the door.

Dolores' heart sank when she heard the key turned and withdrawn. Rushing to a window, she pushed aside the draperies and found the blank wall. The curtains were hung merely for effect, there was not a window in the room! An elaborate prison room that was suffocating her with its oriental splendor. She was so tired and overwrought that her thoughts were beyond control. They were running rampant, and all she could do was pace the floor in mental torment. The chairs and bed were so typically Chinese and ornate that she refused to go near them. Finally in utter exhaustion she sat on the floor and, cradling her knees in her arms, as she often did at the rancho, dozed off into fitful sleep. She dreamed that Terry was dead and Buckwell, Lu Fong and the Sailor were chasing her through terrifying underground passages of Chinatown.

Dolores had no way of knowing the time when she was aroused from her cramped position on the floor by a noise in the room. Looking up, she saw a beautiful Chinese girl placing a tray on a nearby table and watching her all the while with a very curious and intent scrutiny.

San Toy wanted to compare her own beauty with that of the white girl in whom her master was so interested. The two girls looked at each other in silence until San Toy backed from the room and locked the door on the outside. In the dim light from the doorway, Dolores saw the girl's face. She was so beautiful that Dolores was forced to admit that Dolores was the most beautiful creature she had ever seen.

Dolores refreshed herself and surveyed the tray with hungry misgivings. It looked more like luncheon than breakfast, and her appetite told her that must be the case. But she was afraid to eat; the food might be poisoned or drugged. However, she could not resist some little cakes with blanched almonds which she had looked too delicious to be harmful.

It happened that just as Dolores decided she could not endure the suspense another moment her door opened and San Toy stood framed in the doorway. "You come with me," she said with a charming accent that surprised Dolores.

"Where?" "It not matter—you come, now!" Dolores followed down a handsome staircase and across a wide hall. No one was visible. She was amazed to note that a great wall clock was striking the hour of three and sunlight streamed through the window. It was afternoon.

In a little library at the end of the hall she was startled to meet Jimmy and the Texas Kid, apparently waiting for her. She drew back with a frightened "Oh!" Immediately Jimmy held her hands and the Kid tied the same silk handkerchief around her eyes that she had endured for so long the night before. But the Kid was careless. Dolores could see clearly beneath the bandage. Trembling with excitement, she stealthily watched where they were going. With no idea what was in store for her, Dolores suffered herself to be guided to a secret opening and down a winding flight of stairs. From beneath the bandage she watched Jimmy open another large door. They entered a room. That was all Dolores could see of the journey. Without warning the blindfold was slipped from her head. She looked up.

Chris Buckwell smiled at her calmly from his comfortable chair in the center of the room. "You had me brought here?" she questioned, the truth beginning to dawn. Her head went up defiantly. "Where is Senor O'Shaughnessy?" (To be continued.)

Enforcement of 18th Amendment Defended

By MRS. JOHN D. SHERMAN, President, General Federation of Women's Clubs

Nobody suggests that it is a hardship to maintain hundreds of customs officers all over the country, nor is it said that the tariff makes criminals because some very good and otherwise law-abiding citizens do not hesitate to smuggle in a few pairs of gloves, or yards of lace.

Consider the 18th Amendment. How many high minded persons are above a few mental reservations when they make out their income tax returns? Uncle Sam accepts their sworn statement unless it is obviously at variance with the facts.

The traffic problem is becoming daily more serious. Nobody has a solution and the list of dead and wounded mounts hourly. The spirit of lawlessness finds it exciting to disobey the traffic officer. The careful driver meets the careless pedestrian at every cross-roads.

Does anyone suggest that automobiles are making potential murderers? Does anyone advocate doing away with traffic regulations because they are making us a nation of law-breakers?

Yet these arguments are made against the 18th Amendment without, apparently, any realization of their absurdity. After all these thousands of years on way has been found by which to secure a 100 per cent enforcement of the Ten Commandments, yet they remain the foundation of the moral code of the world. The 18th Amendment was adopted while only a relatively small fraction of the women of the United States were enfranchised. We did what we could, but ours was not the deciding voice. We had then, as we have now, certain moral responsibilities. We regarded the liquor traffic as an enemy of the home, and the debaucher of youth. If had little, if any, regard for law before the passage of the amendment, and it has not changed; we did not expect that it would. It was an outlaw before it was outlawed.

We cannot portion out responsibility in moral questions, or considerations of loyalty to the Constitution. It was George Washington who pointed out that if we could trample on the laws with impunity and pick and choose which we would support, "nothing but anarchy and confusion is to be expected." He was talking about the Whiskey Rebellion at the time. Men and women alike owe the same debt of reverence for and obedience to the laws of the land.

Breckenridge Man Shot By Own Gun

BRECKENRIDGE, Dec. 6.—John L. Kelly, accountant, was reported at noon today to be doing nicely at a local hospital where he was taken after he had been found in his office in the postoffice building Monday morning suffering from a bullet wound in the chest. According to a statement he made to Chief of Police John Kelley, Kelly had picked up a 32 caliber to put it away when it slipped from his grasp and went off accidentally when he grabbed for the weapon.

He was found lying on the floor by Mrs. Kelly, who was in an adjoining room at the time, and by Mrs. O. R. Walton, of the Walton studios nearby. He was taken to the Eastside hospital for treatment where it is believed he will recover.

Rolling 'em with P.A. is a great racket

AS YOU open the package and get a whiff of that rich Prince Albert fragrance, you know you're in for some great cigarette-sessions. The first one you make and smoke confirms your prediction. Smooth and mellow and mild... just plumb-wonderful, Fellows! No matter what you're rolling 'em with now, try Prince Albert. This same tobacco makes a pipe perform, too. Try it both ways.

PRINCE ALBERT

—no other tobacco is like it!

It's worth while to pick your papers

Good cigarette-papers are next in importance to good tobacco. You want to give your tobacco its best chance—that's why you should buy OCB papers, famous product of the Bollore mills in France. Buy them at the store where you buy P.A.—book of 150 leaves, 5c. A little thing to make enjoyment complete.

Coolidge Paints U. S. Prosperity

board to assist in promoting co-operative marketing and protecting for a revolving fund for the necessary financing.

"The past year has seen a remarkable improvement in the general condition of agriculture," he said. "Any sound and workable proposal to help the farmer will have the support of the government but government price fixing is known to be unsound and bound to result in disaster.

It is impossible to provide by law for an assured success and prosperity for all those engaged in farming, he said.

The principal problem in the farm situation remains this crop surplus, he stated. The remedy for this condition he thought lies in reduced acreage and better marketing facilities rather than in specific legislative steps.

Mr. Coolidge dismissed prohibition in one paragraph by calling upon all citizens to obey the eighteenth Amendment and giving a brief description of how the government is endeavoring to enforce the law, concluding with: "The federal authorities propose to discharge their obligations for enforcement to the full extent of their ability."

Foreign relations were also dealt with briefly. He spoke of the differences with Mexico and of the dispatch of Marines to China and to Nicaragua. Concerning Mexico, he said: "A firm adherence to our rights and a scrupulous respect for the sovereignty of Mexico" * * * coupled with patience and forbearance, it is hoped, will restore all our differences without interfering with the friendly relationship between the two governments."

"In general our relations with other countries can be said to have improved within the year. "Our country has made much progress," he concluded. "But it has taken and will continue to take much effort. Competition will be keen, the temptation to selfishness and arrogance will be severe, the provocations to deal harshly with weaker peoples will be many. All of these are embraced in the opportunity for true greatness. They will be overbalanced by cooperation, by generosity, and by a spirit of neighborly kindness. The forces of the universe are taking humanity in that direction. In doing good in walking humbly, in sustaining its own people, in ministering to other nations, America will work out its own mighty destiny."

"BEN HUR" INSPIRED ME" DECLARES RAMON NOVARRO

By Ramon Novarro

Now playing in the film at Palace Theater

"Ben-Hur" had a curious effect on me. I had read—or had heard read—the novel when a boy, retaining only vaguely a memory of it; and when Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer offered me the role of Ben-Hur in the picture of the Lew Wallace novel, it just seemed an actor's job—very interesting and important, it is true; yet, essentially like other work. One of the studio staff suggested: "Read the book!" I accepted the suggestion and dipped into it.

I had gotten only into the Wise Men of the East scene when I realized that here was a setting that transcended any book or play or continuity I had ever been acquainted with. The Star of Bethlehem—the Nativity—the Abomination—the Edict of Herod—the Flight into Egypt—nearly a hundred pages filled with the mightiest events in history: The proud Suddiman family; and the holy Jesus!

How could I help being chilled by the contrast? How, indeed, fail to realize what the story meant!

Truly Ben-Hur is beautifully pictured by Lew Wallace, ingenuous, brave and boyish, devoted to his mother and sister, filled with youthful enthusiasm for his chum and equal for the world's high adventure, yet deeply pious and willing to dare and suffer all rather than to forego principle. What a charming lightness, an idyllic quality if I may say so, in his first meeting with Esther in the market place, where he restores the cripple dove to her and craves to know her better.

The more somber parts of the action brought to my attention again the marvels of the book in its painting of the Greek and Roman world at the opening of the Christian era and the sublime power of our Holy faith in combating those conditions and eventually overcoming them. It was my recreation of this period to visit the Castle of St. Angelo, the library of the Vatican, St. Peter's cathedral, and in particular the Sistine and other galleries where the concepts of our religion are pictured in visible form by Michael Angelo and Raphael.

was an outlay before it was outlived.

We cannot portion out responsibility in moral questions, or considerations of loyalty to the Constitution. It was George Washington who pointed out that if we could trample on the laws with impunity and pick and choose which we would support, "nothing but anarchy and confusion is to be expected." He was talking about the Whiskey Rebellion at the time. Men and women alike owe the same debt of reverence and obedience to the laws of the land.

ROUSSEAU PLEASES ALL AT RANDOLPH

Charles Rousseau, baritone, Monday night proved to a large audience at Randolph college that an artist can choose a program of popular entertainments without having to lower his standards of musical worth. He presented a program of classical and folk songs of elemental appeal which kept the gathering in enthusiastic applause throughout the evening. Many of the folk songs he himself had gathered in his world journeyings, writing them down as he heard them sung by the peasants in their native lands. Many of these he explained, telling the circumstances under which they were collected.

Gassed Veteran Slays Sweetheart's Parents

HANFORD, Calif., Dec. 6.—James Albedale, gassed war veteran, confessed today according to Sheriff Kimes that he beat to death Mrs. Mary Actist and probably fatally wounded her husband, Mary, parents of his sweetheart, Isabelle, 16, while they slept in a room adjoining the one he occupied Sunday night.

The program opened with a group of French songs, including selections from Mozart, Schubert and Weckerlin. Folk songs made up the second group, while Mendelssohn's "It is Enough" from the oratorio, Elijah, and "Largo al Factotum" from Rossini's opera, "Barber of Seville" concluded the program, affording ample opportunity for display of both the singer's ability to sing and his operatic interpretation.

Miss Velma Ruth Walters, instructor in piano at Randolph college, was accompanist for the artist and merited a large share of the applause which both received.
