TEXAS SECOND IN IMPORTS.

—With its exports increasing in the last quarter of 1927 over those of the previous quarter from $113,160,770 to $125,776,518, Texas maintains its place as the second export state of the country. New York being first and Michigan third. Cotton topped the list, with wheat coming second, and then in order came gasoline, illuminating oil, sulphur, gas and fuel oil, lubricating oil, cotton seed cake and meal. Other exports that went to increase the volume were lard, eggs, leather, goods, rice, tobacco, metallic cartridges, chemicals and vegetable products. When it is considered that much of the exporting of a number of the Central Southwestern States must be handled through Texas ports, and that the foreign trade of these states is rapidly increasing, it is easily seen that there is need for all the port facilities being placed at the various seaports on the Gulf of Mexico in Texas. There is no surprise either that all the Southwestern railroads are anxious to get ample terminal facilities at every Texas port.

RIO GRANDE VALLEY IRRIGATION.

—That there should be no feeling of jealousy, but a spirit of closest co-operation between the United States and Mexico in the fullest development of irrigation along the Rio Grande river and its tributaries was the keynote of the recent International Waters Commission meeting at McAllen. Both countries are alive to the importance of agreements which will bring about the irrigation of thousands of acres more of lands on both sides of the Rio Grande, and will doubtless continue to work together to that end. While the first thought of many may be that the irrigation of a large acreage in Northern Mexico will endanger markets for Texas products, this will not be so if there is shown that spirit of united effort that is characterizing the early efforts of both countries.

MARSHALL'S LUMBER INDUSTRY.

—A Dallas News correspondent says that a million feet of lumber shipped out of Harrison county every month, and that this does not include about 4,000,000 feet annually used by local manufacturing concerns and the amount used for railway ties, telegraph and telephone poles. The largest local consumption is by a wood products company that manufactures the native lumber into porch furniture, chairs, vegetable and fruit crates and baskets. An observation trip through East Texas convinces any one that there is an era of development under way, and just ahead of it a wood products company that manufactures the native lumber into porch furniture, chairs, vegetable and fruit crates and baskets. An observation trip through East Texas convinces any one that there is an era of development under way, and just ahead of it a wood products company that manufactures the native lumber into porch furniture, chairs, vegetable and fruit crates and baskets.

TEXARKANA PRESS MEETING.

—With its characteristic journalistic boldness and independence, Texarkana has announced that all preparations are completed for the joint meeting of the Texas and Arkansas press associations to be held there May 24-25. While there is to be a jaunt to look at some Arkansas mountains and to see Little Rock, Memphis and a few other points of interest, both associations expect to take the time to attend to business. The meeting is so timed that delegates to the National Editorial association may go on to that meeting at Memphis. These press meetings, as now conducted, are not pleasure outings but gatherings for the earnest study of problems helpful alike to the press and to the readers of newspapers.

TELEPHONE IMPROVEMENTS.

—Figures that show that Texas progress is in keeping with the size of the state should always interest newspaper readers. At a meeting of the independent telephone companies of Texas — of which there are 725 — it was stated that more than $10,000,000 will be spent in Texas in 1928 in telephone additions and improvements. The largest of these improvements will be that of the Southwestern Bell at Dallas to cost $5,000,000. The Amarillo plant just completed cost $2,000,000. At Abilene $150,000 is to be spent; at Stephenville $40,000. The San Angelo and Pampa plants are to cost approximately $200,000. The improvement program under way covers almost all the state. For instance, McAllen recently installed $50,000 worth of equipment. Greenville has a new exchange. San Marcos a new building. Garrettsville and Henderson exchanges have had numerous improvements. Telephone companies are trying all over the state to keep abreast of the general progress and the effort is taxing their resources to the limit.

Hard Senate Fight on Mellon

MILLIONS LOST IN TAXES AND FAVORS SHOWN

WASHINGTON, March 22.—The government has lost hundreds of millions of dollars through illegal tax settlements favoring corporations and big business men under the administration of Andrew W. Mellon. Senator James Couzens, of Michigan, charged in the senate this afternoon, in launching a debate on his resolution demanding the secretary's resignation. Couzens declared "we even found memoranda on some settlements stating this is a Mellon company." He also charged that Mellon held office illegally, because he owned stock in forty different corporations in violation of law.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Spectacular attempt to oust Andrew Mellon from his post as secretary of the treasury is scheduled to break in the senate today. Under senate rules the Couzens resolution is subject to debate shortly after noon, but the vote should be blocked if the discussion lasts until 2 o'clock. A simple filibuster would temporarily prevent action on it.

MELLON WILL NOT RESIGN, IS REPORTED

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon "has no intention of resigning," it was stated in his behalf at the treasury today.

ALL IS READY FOR BIG HUNT NEAR PUTNAM

When I could give his speech in full. He said to those women who pride themselves on the fact that their forefathers helped to found our republic, that the very safety of our institutions depended upon every woman, as well as every man, using the ballot intelligently and being ready to protect, by an interest in our American politics, the institution which their forefathers had helped to found by sacrifice. In building a republic, the women of America have been made citizens before the law they have no alternative. The responsibility has been given to them.

The Texas Fox and Wolf Hunt association holds two meets annually, the spring meet is devoted to the wolf chase, while the fall meet is always a fox chase. Last fall the fox chase was staged in Angelina county. The hunt will continue three days, Mr. Bumpers says, and 5000 visitors are expected to be in attendance, with approximately 500 of the best wolf hounds in the South. Saddle horses will be provided for all who wish to participate in the chase, but hunters are expected to furnish their own saddles, bridles, provisions and camp outfits. At 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon of April 4 the bench show will be held and each day there will be something of interest to the visitors. The camp site has been cleared off, the routes marked from each direction so that visitors will have no trouble in finding the place. It is proposed to make all three days a joyous outing, and lovers of the chase are assured of a big time.

The Cunningham ranch is 11 miles south of Moran, four miles northwest of Putnam, seven miles east of Baird, and all within easy reach of Cisco.

PRIORITY OF LIENS RULED BY ATTORNEY GENERAL

AUSTIN, March 22.—The lien of state and county for taxes is not superior, but equal, to lien of city for taxes, the attorney general's department ruled today, to David E. Mulchany, county attorney, of El Paso. The lien of state and county, however, is superior to city's lien for paving, sidewalks or other assessments.

RUIN, DEATH AND HEROINES IN DAM DISASTER

DEEP TEST ON QUALLS LAND DOWN 3205 FT.

Lorenza and associates, who are drilling the deep test on the lands of the R. H. Qualls estate, 10 miles northwest of Cisco, were reported to have set the casing at 3,205 feet Wednesday night. The well has been drilled 70 feet into the Caddo lime, it is reported, and it was said that the drillers are expecting to strike a good showing when the bit has passed through this lime formation. The G. W. Pence well, drilled by the Phillips Petroleum Co., near the same location, was reported to have 2,500 feet of oil in the hole Wednesday, with no water, but it was stated the completion of the well is being retarded on account of casing trouble. The Pence has every indication of making a good producer, according to those who have visited the well.

DIRK AND GUN USED ON DEAD GIRL'S KILLER

COLUMBIA, Ala., March 22.—As the jury rendered a "not guilty" verdict in the case of Police Chief H. F. Blake for the murder of Miss Louise Montebardo, Miss Cecil Tubbs, the dead girl's aunt, plunged a six-inch dirk into the defendant's neck, and her mother fired a bullet that buried itself above the jury box. Blake fell seriously wounded.

TWO KILLED, 6 ARE INJURED IN EXPLOSION

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Two enlisted men were burned to death and six others were seriously injured in a gasoline explosion aboard the destroyer tender Whitney, in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, the navy department announced today. The explosion occurred yesterday.

Elder W. A. Bentley, of Abilene, will preach at the Church of Christ this evening at 7:30 o'clock. All are cordially invited.

SEVERE SHOCK FELT AS VERA CRUZ QUAKED

WASHINGTON, March 22.—An unusually violent earthquake was recorded at Georgetown University last night, and continued for about four hours. Regis College, at Denver, also recorded a severe earthquake at the same time. Both were coincident with Mexico City reports that severe shocks shook the state of Vera Cruz.

CHECK MEN STILL HELD IN LOCKUP

Glenn Hill and K. B. Kelly, the two arrested yesterday for passing bad checks, were still in the city jail at noon today, and local officers said the third of the trio would likely be apprehended before night. No disposition has yet been made of the cases against the two held, but it was said they would be disposed of just as soon as the third man is arrested. Hill and Kelly, in company with a third man, are alleged to have forged the name of J. L. Cooper, of that city, on aggregating $32, which were cashed at suburban stores Wednesday when they purchased small bills of groceries. A brother of the missing man was here Wednesday afternoon conferring with the police regarding his brother's case. Hill told the officers that he was from Fort Worth, while Kelly stated that he had lived in Breckenridge and McCamey. The home of the missing man is also known to the officers.

Committees Named To Collect Data Relative to "Broadway of America" Official Designation

Responding to the call of Secretary Peters, of the Cisco chamber of commerce, about 25 representative citizens from Cisco and other towns situated on the Bankhead highway between Strawn and Abilene, met at the chamber of commerce in Cisco Wednesday afternoon for the purpose of taking some definite action regarding the representation at the Memphis meeting of the Broadway of America. The meeting was called to order by J. M. Williamson, who stated the purpose of the gathering, which was to stimulate interest in the motorcade, which will start from Cisco next Monday morning at 9 o'clock, go from here to Abilene, thence over the north loop, returning by the main line back to Cisco. Cisco, J. M. Williamson, chairman; Ranger, W. C. Hickey; Eastland, Mr. Madden; Clyde, John W. Robbins; Baird, B. L. Russell; Strawn, Mr. Harris; Putnam, Y. A. Orr. The data will include population, towns, telegraph, telephone, hotel, tourist camp and other facilities that will be of interest to tourists traversing the highway. A photographer will also accompany the logging committee, and views along both routes will likely be made. Those present and participating in the meeting Wednesday were John W. Robbins, John Berry, R. M. Pyeatt, C. C. Peek, M. H. Perkins, C. A. Bowman, John E. Robertson, G. L. Walker, Clyde, H. H. Shaw, James Asbury, H. O. Tatum, Baird, Earl Bender, T. L. Overby, George W. Briggs, Eastland; W. C. Hickey, Ranger, and several Cisco people.

FALL IS READY TO TELL ABOUT OIL SCANDALS

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Albert B. Fall's implied willingness to break his silence of years, and tell all about the oil scandals apparently didn't impress members of the senate investigating committee today. Senators Walsh and Nye indicated their disappointment that Fall preferred to tell his story before the court rather than the committee. Both indicated that they would not go to El Paso to question Fall.

Reform School Head Testifies Regarding Bandit's Conduct In Reformatory; Other Witnesses

GID ROBERTS THINKS CISCO BEST IN TEXAS

Gid A. Roberts, who has been absent from Cisco for several months past, has returned home, this time, he says, to stay. "I have been in many towns while absent from Cisco, including many of the border cities, and spent three months in San Angelo, but I am now thoroughly convinced that Cisco is the best town in Texas, according to population. Among other towns I visited San Antonio, Del Rio, and other cities in that part of Texas, but when one considers the population in their comparison none have anything on Cisco. I wish some of the local people who howl about hard times in Cisco would take a trip around to these parts of the state. They would come home perfectly satisfied with conditions in Cisco," Roberts stated. Gid said he expected to go back into the oil game, and for the present will handle leases.

Increased Flow in New Ramsower Well

The McLester-States Oil Corporation well, drilling in the Gordon pool of the Ramsower field, with an initial production of 100 barrels, after being given a shot Wednesday, increased its flow to 150 barrels according to information received here this morning. Although a paying producer, the well is not as large as other producers drilled in the rich field discovered by Col. Robert D. Gordon, where all previous producers have ranged from 300 to 800 barrels, and some have exceeded 1,000 barrels per day. This well is the Thorp No. 2, and is located about nine miles northeast of Cisco.

NEGRO CONVICT GRANTED MORE TIME TO LIVE

AUSTIN, March 22.—Governor Moody today granted a respite to April 12 to Willie Fisher, Houston negro, condemned to die in the electric chair tomorrow. The respite was given in order to allow the governor to more carefully consider the board of pardon's report on the case.

PETERS SPECIAL GUEST OF ODESSA

J. E. T. Peters, secretary of the Cisco chamber of commerce, left today for Odessa in response to a special invitation from the officers of the chamber of commerce of that city, who requested his good offices in assisting them in the reorganization scheme to be launched. Mr. Peters will talk at a banquet to be given there this evening. He is thoroughly familiar with the chamber of commerce work, and will give those people information that will be worth while.

COTTON BELT MAY KILL ONE TRAIN; NO BUS

AUSTIN, March 22.—The railroad commission today partially granted the application of the Cotton Belt for authority to discontinue two passenger trains from Tyler to Lufkin via Alto. The commission granted the road permission to discontinue the operation of one train, but refused the request for substitution of motor bus service. It was hotly contested by Alto citizens and others.

SOLEMN AND SILLY

"The law is an ass," says Mr. Bumble. Often you have seen the law make an ass of itself. Because the law is administered by fallible human beings it probably will make an ass of itself—more or less; but there are degrees of asinity to which it does not seem necessary for the law to go.

For instance, some time ago a man was arrested and fined $100 for assaulting a girl. Evidently he thought that reasonable; for in a short time he assaulted another girl. There are thousands of men in the United States who would willingly pay $100 apiece for the privilege of forcefully appropriating women who appeal to them. The law is unnecessarily an ass when it fixes a punishment that does not punish but rather encourages.

A bootlegger who had made $200,000 rum running was apprehended and fined $1,000. Probably he thought that reasonable; if he didn't he was unreasonable. There are thousands of men, probably hundreds of thousands, in the United States, who would jump at the chance to make $200,000 illegally and pay the law a penalty of one-half of one per cent, which, by a coincidence, happens to be the percentage of alcohol allowed in non-alcoholic beverages. The law is an ass when it fines a man a sum of money for making money unlawfully which amounts to considerably less than would his income tax had he made the money lawfully.

The law makes an ass of itself when it gives two years in the penitentiary to a man who deliberately shoots down and kills the unarmed father of a 17-year-old girl simply because the father expostulates with the man for trying to seduce the girl.

The law is an ass when it imposes a sentence so insignificant that when placed beside the crime it would be funny were it not tragic. When a high official, betrayer of public trust and looter of public treasure, has a heavy fine remitted, and stays only a year and a half in jail, hasn't the law made an ass of itself?

The Texas Bankers' association recently issued this statement regarding bank robbers: "They are rarely identified, more rarely convicted, and most rarely kept in the penitentiary when sent there." Evidently the Bankers' association thinks the law somewhat of an ass.

In one of Gilbert and Sullivan's operas, a character sings that he shall achieve in time, to crime, the punishment fit to objective, not only for a crime, but a sure enough court of law to make the law absurd; they are majestic—but when the law makes an ass of the people, can the people be expected to have reverence?

COST OF GOVERNMENT

Governor Christianson's heartening figures on the government in this country. Federal public expenses, federal, $875,000,000 a year to $8,000,000,000 in 1926. The mere number of the proportion of income of the country. In those modest days of 1926 he was paying 12.5 per cent now. We work 40 days a year just to pay our various kinds of taxes. No wonder—we support 2,700,000 officials and 700,000 pensioners. State expenses have trebled since 1913 and doubled since 1919. Possibly we're getting full value for all of this outlay. But sometimes doubts come into the taxpayer's mind. Or is this putting it too mildly? Public salaries are usually not large, and most of the money goes for salaries. But haven't we far too many public employees? And aren't we engaging in an unnecessary amount of governmental activities? Some of this is doubtless mere luxury and laziness. Shouldn't we economize politically, hiring less public work done and doing more for ourselves, through private effort? It might cost us just as much that way; but at least we'd have lower tax bills, and couldn't blame it all on "the government" or "the politicians."

WHERE'S MY PAPA?

There always will be freaks—the woman with the red beard, the man with the elastic skin, the girl with two heads, and Bosco who eats snakes alive. But don't worry about the freaks, for they are in the very tiny minority, and always will be.

Just because a childless widow got the notion into her head that she was going to be a practical eugenist, whether or no, and selected a suitable father for her child without the formality of marriage, don't be apprehensive that the practice will become contagious and popular.

True, the idea would appeal to the imagination of some folks, and offer a dandy alibi for the girl who had loved not wisely but too well. Generally, however, the arrangement would be unattractive to almost any female parent—and certainly to all progeny. Who would want to be bred like a Manx cat or a bull pup? Who cares to go through life being asked, "By whom were you sired, sir?"

Practically the scheme is great. Sentimentally it is a flop. If we should set about breeding human beings as unsentimentally as we breed horses, undoubtedly we should develop splendid animals; but what kind of characters would they have? What sort of souls would they possess? What type of civilization would be developed? Would it have an eye as impersonal as a billy goat's, a heart as cold as a boarding house potato, and a mind focused only on the main chance?

Take sentiment out of society and there could not be much left, nothing but mechanism, organization, efficiency. The bees have produced a social order based solely on these principles. The queen meets her husband but once, then she lays eggs furiously the rest of her life. The sturdiest male is chosen as the queen's consort. And after one fond embrace he perishes miserably. The surplus males are unemotionally stung to death by the unimagined permanent virgins of the colony. All the hopelessly sick, the weak, the disabled, are killed and thrown out of the hive.

Sentiment, thank God, rules the human realm, and it always will. Most men and women who mate, mate because they love; and have children because they love, and the loved child is the best kind of child; he has the best kind of soul. And the best kind of soul is what we are after in this world. Mere body and mere brain make chaps like Hickman and Leopold and Loeb. Souls make men like Washington and Lincoln.

We can never breed souls as we would sows, for soulful souls won't breed that way.

A SONG AT EASTER

If this bright lily Can live once more, And its white promise Be as before, Why cannot the great stone Be moved from his door?

If the green grass Ascend and shake Year after year, And blossoms break Again and again For April's sake,

Why cannot he, From the dark and mold, Show us again His manifold And gleaming glory, A stream of gold?

Faint heart, be sure These things must be, See the new bud, On the old tree! If flowers can wake, Oh, why not He?

—Charles Hanson Towne.

Improvement Made At Coleman Course

COLEMAN, March 21.—Development at Coleman's modern golf plant continues and with the West Texas Utilities company constructing a power line to the building site, electricity is assured for the $11,000 club house to be constructed this summer.

The main high power line from Brownwood to Ballinger is being tapped and a $1,500 transformer installed to step the current down. Later it is thought possible electrical power may be used in oil field development in the southern parts of the country.

Bryan's Daughter Says Women Helpful to Government

Ruth Bryan Owen Declares That Women's Place is in Home, But Home in an Entirely New Sense

(Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, daughter of the late William Jennings Bryan, who is a candidate for congress, in the following statement written for clients of the International News Service, tells why she is following in the footsteps of her famous father by entering politics.)

By RUTH BRYAN OWEN
(Written for the International News Service.)

MIAMI, Fla., March 22.—We have often heard that woman's place is in the home and I believe that that is just as true today as it has always been in the years past. I believe that a woman's place is in the home but that the modern mother has begun to set a different limit on the home from the limit which the mothers of a few generations ago recognized.

There was a time when, if a woman kept inside of her house clean and sanitary, she had done her duty by her family, but I believe that my home is the place where my family and my children live, and I find that my children can move about in a space as big as an automobile can travel in every direction from the house that I live in, and I believe that it is useless for me to try to keep the inside of one house safe and sanitary, if the town that I live in is not a safe place for my boy or girl.

First Experience
I remember the first time that I had a glimpse of this wider home. It was when I was 20 years old and had two children of my own, and a neighbor came and asked me to go with her to the city jail.

"There is a little boy 12 years old in the jail and the crime for which he was jailed is stealing a watermelon," she said.

"It surely is not possible to lock a 12-year-old boy in jail for having stolen a watermelon?" I exclaimed.

"He is not only in jail but he is locked up amongst criminals who have a long record of crime," she replied, "and there he must stay tomorrow and the next day unless we do something about it."

"I cannot see why the mothers in this town tolerate such a law as that," I said.

"The mothers pay no attention to the law, sometimes, until it touches their own boy, and then they find out what it is," she said, and added, "sometimes I think God gave me no children so that I can help those in this community who need me the most."

I said that "I do not think that I was given children in order to keep me from helping the others, and I am going with you down to the city jail."

"That was the beginning of our work for a juvenile court in the town I lived in, for I knew that if it was possible to treat one boy unjustly under the law, that my own boy was not safe while I allowed that law to remain."

City Playgrounds
Not long ago, in Kansas City, the women noticed how many children were being injured and killed by automobiles in traffic and set out to study this problem as "modern mothers." They took a map of Kansas City—and every time a child was injured or killed by an accident in traffic, they marked a cross on the map at the spot where the accident had occurred. After a time a very significant fact appeared. They noticed that almost all of the accidents had occurred in parts of playgrounds for the children, and the children had been playing in the streets, and that the parts of Kansas City which had supervised playgrounds were almost free from accidents—so these modern mothers set to work with their city commission to try to obtain more playgrounds for their children. As they worked in the politics of their city to this end, I think they were better mothers than if they had stayed inside four walls and paid no attention to existing conditions.

I went as a delegate from our state to the National Child Welfare council in New York, and with the delegates from every state in the union, worked to try to bring about a uniform mother's pension law so that no matter what state she may live in, if a mother is left a widow with little children to support, the state will go to her aid and give her an allowance so that she can keep her family together, instead of compelling her to break up her home and send her children in state more than in their own mother's home. As I worked on this problem, I believe that I was a better mother in helping to keep the little families intact all over our country, and helping countless children to remain in the care of their mothers, than if I had remained inside my own home, giving no thought to the conditions around me.

International Questions
I believe the experience of the war has taught us that even though a mother may protect the body of her child by attention to all the conditions which surround it, although she may protect its mind from every evil influence, and successfully lead that child to years of maturity, a time may come when government can put its hand into the home and take that child out on to a battlefield and it is international law and international relations which govern this action.

I believe that deep down in the hearts of women the world over is the desire to find a decent and orderly method of settling our international disputes, for that reason if for no other, I believe that women have a place in the halls of legislation, when the questions of treaty and arbitration are to be decided between the nations.

But I realize that it needs no words of mine to justify an interest on the part of modern women in the political policies of their state and nation, for President Coolidge, speaking before the Daughters of the American Revolution in Washington, made such a stirring appeal that I wish I could give his speech in full. He said to those women who pride themselves on the fact that their forefathers helped to found our republic, that the very safety of our institutions depended upon every woman, as well as every man, using the ballot intelligently and he begged them to protect, by an interest in our American politics, the institution which their forefathers had helped to found by sacrifice. In building a republic, our forefathers saw a vision of a government resting equally in the hands of every citizen. Now that the women of America have been made citizens before the law they have no alternative. The responsibility has been given to them. We will have a 100 per cent American government when 100 per cent of our citizens, men and women, are bearing their responsibility loyally.

County Agent's Work Showing Results in Increased Interest In Dairying Over the County

Development of the dairy industry in Eastland county indicates that a new era is about to dawn, and Eastland county farmers are going into the dairy business in earnest. Whether they need it or not, farmers as a class, generally receive more gratis advice and instruction, perhaps, than any other class of industrialists. Some of this advice is helpful, but a certain per cent is given by men who know little of what they are saying. Probably none of this gratuitous advice is wasted, for it is said that "wise men learn, even from fools."

Much of the agricultural instruction is now given by county agents, who are men trained in agriculture, and these agents are now deemed necessary to any progressive county, and most counties have employed these farming experts to direct the agricultural pursuits of the counties, and to help the farmers to better methods. That these agencies are worth while is evidenced by the fact that more counties every year are employing farm experts, and it is from just such as these that the importance of the dairy industry is being recognized.

It is gratifying to know that the work of J. C. Patterson, county agent, who has been ably assisted by E. H. Varnell, vocational agriculturist of Cisco, has been highly successful in the Cisco county in selling the farmers the dairy industry. That the farmers in this part of the county mean to go in more extensively for dairying is evidenced by the formation of eight bull circles, each equipped with blooded bulls from cows with high record, for butter fat production, and the dairy herds are being augmented by registered Jersey cows from well known milk and butter fat strains.

Now the county agent is doing some valuable missionary work among the farmers in other parts of the county, so it seems that Eastland is destined to rank as a dairy county ere long.

The county agent, accompanied by a number of Ranger citizens, held an enthusiastic dairy meeting in the Cheaney community recently, where the establishment of a cream route was the principle matter before the meeting. C. E. Shields, manager of the Banner Ice Cream company, was one of the party. A route from Ranger via Crossroads, Cheney, Alameda and Staff was discussed. Mr. Shields promised to put a truck from the Banner company on the route to take the cream, provided the cooperation of the farmers could be secured. He told those present that the consumption of milk was increasing all the time, that his company had six ice cream plants in operation in West Texas and two additional plants under construction, and the Banner people would take all the cream the farmers could produce. He told of the company having installed a butter plant at one time but was compelled to dismantle it and ship to another point for the reason that the dairy products could not be obtained, but if they warranted it the butter plant would be reinstalled. He told the farmers if they could sell the company more milk products than they could use that they would freeze the surplus and ship to other plants.

Varnell and Patterson's next work is the completion of the cream routes in the Cisco country that have already been tentatively canvassed. The Nimrod, Dotheran, German settlement, Pleasant Hill, and other communities in this section have practically been included in the cream routes already outlined.

It operates directly from the lighting socket by means of the new "AC" Radiotrons. That is one of the reasons why Radiola 17 is the year's outstanding achievement in radio. Simplicity of operation, sturdy construction and excellent tone quality are outstanding features of this new receiver. Tuning is accomplished entirely by one knob. In addition there is only a volume control to regulate the output and a switch to turn the current on and off.

In Radiola 17, the owner finds all of the refinements that recent developments have contributed to the radio art. Its compact cabinet, beautifully finished in mahogany, contains all the mechanism necessary for operation. Over the tuning control, there is a small electric light which not only illuminates the station selector but also serves as an indicator that the current is on or off.

Vocational Boys Outline Projects

Each of the more than 8,000 boys who are taking the course in Vocational Agriculture in approximately 250 schools in Texas has an agricultural project of some kind. "Learn to do by doing" is an old motto that is being well carried out by these boys. Each boy expects to make some money out of his project, and to study it from every angle in his class work. One of the smaller projects owned by a boy in the Cisco class consists of four pigs, which are being fed a balanced ration and otherwise well cared for. Another boy has eight acres of cotton. Others have peaches, melons, corn, grain sorghums, etc.

The stories given below were written by the boys and tell something of their projects for this year:

MY AGRICULTURAL PROJECT.

By Hale McCanlies.

For my agricultural project in Cisco High school, I have taken the cultivating and care of an orchard containing one hundred peach trees, seven apricots and five plum trees—all of these trees of bearing age—and in addition, ten young cherry, and twelve young peach trees.

One reason for my taking this orchard as my project is that these trees need attention and care—pruning, spraying and cultivating—something they have not had, heretofore. Also, this orchard offers a way to earn money by sparetime work. On Saturdays after school hours during the week, I can do all that needs to be done, except gathering the fruit. By the time school is out in May, I can be almost ready for another job. If I had taken for my project something that would require continued attention through the summer, it would have prevented my doing any other summer work.

My pruning of the trees is already done. This required nearly forty-five hours of time which probably would have been wasted, otherwise. Some operations which remain for me to do are painting the stubs of the limbs and spraying the trees. All of this work I can finish before the beginning of the summer vacation.

On our farm there is a thicket of seedling plums upon which I intend to graft some good varieties of plums, peaches, and apricots. Shall try grafting some cherries, also, upon the plums but am uncertain as to whether they will cross or not. My purpose in doing this is to increase the size of my project. The cost of this increase will require only hard work—no cash outlay.

By thus increasing the size of the orchard, and also by spraying, fertilizing, proper cultivation and

WOMAN ENTERS FIGHT AGAINST UNUSUAL WILL

BUFFALO, Wyo., March 22.—Mrs. Helen Metcalf and her three children have filed suit in district court here to break the unusual will of her late husband, E. D. Metcalf, wealthy Wyoming pioneer.

When the will was filed for probate recently, it was revealed that Metcalf had left half of his $300,000 fortune to the American Genetics association, providing for an income of only $2,500 annually for his widow. The will also named sums ranging from $5,000 to $10,000 to be paid each of his three children at intervals until they reach the age of 40 years.

Metcalf declared in the will that he did not want the money which he had accumulated during a lifetime of economy "spent in luxurious living."

For many years prior to his death, Metcalf had taken a keen interest in children, genetics and eugenics. Because of fear for his own reproductive powers, he underwent an operation at the age of 59, which for a time threatened his life.

In the brief filed in district court, Mrs. Metcalf contends that her husband was brought under "undue influence" by the American Genetics association, resulting in his unusual interest in children and in his making a will leaving the large sum to the association.

Under the Wyoming law, Mrs. Metcalf would automatically obtain half the estate. She is attempting to break it, however, to protect her children's interest.

RABBIT DRIVE AND DINNER AT KINARD'S TANK

Seventy-two citizens of the Pleasant Hill community engaged in an all-day rabbit hunt last Thursday in which 321 rabbits "bit the dust." It was a great day, according to R. L. Poe, who was one of the number. Pleasant Hill is Mr. Poe's old home community, and although he now lives in Cisco, he never fails to take an interest in the doings of the community.

The men were divided into two armies, commanded by R. L. Tucker and Parks Poe, each leader having 36 men. They drove the rabbits and dispatched them with shot-guns whenever the opportunity afforded, and their efforts show that it was a good day's work. Mr. Poe states that the most enjoyable hour of the day was spent at N. S. Kinard's tank, where the women of the community met and spread dinner for the rabbit hunters. It was a great feast and the association and good fellowship was in every way worth while.

These present from Cisco were

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Poe, Mrs. Charles Clifton, C. O. Pass and Jim Collins.

Coleman Candidate For Firemen's Meet

COLEMAN, March 22.—Making further advances in the campaign to bring the 1929 state firemen's convention to Coleman, G. E. Dalton, chief of this department, has appointed a committee composed of Walter C. Woodward, W. D. Allen, S. O'Neal, W. T. Moore and H. Stanley Norman to promote interest in the city's invitation. It is planned to send circular letters to all departments in the state seeking support to bring the convention here when the fire boys meet in Denton this year. Already a pledge of full support to Coleman's invitation has been received from San Angelo and other cities are expected to be pulling for this section of the state when the convention opens in June. Extensive plans are to be made for assuring the firemen of Coleman's desire of entertaining them in 1928 and they will be welcomed in the new city hall and fire station for which the contract was let last week in case they decide to accept the invitation.

INDIANA GENIUS DISCOVERS NEW KIND OF POWER

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 22.—A new power source discovery is claimed by a farmer from the celebrated hills of Brown county. He is Gilson W. Roth, 60, a native of Lawrence county, Pennsylvania, who asserts he has invented a magnetic motor which uses the magnetic force of the earth to generate power. Roth's new experimental "fuel-less motor" will be demonstrated before a group of Indianapolis capitalists sometime this month. "I have had a model operating for five years," Roth claimed. My machine works on the principle of a compass. I have devised a means of changing the polarity of the compass needle alternatively from north to south in such a way that the needle whirls in complete circles."

Operates Like Compass
Roth explained that his motor operates just like the compass only that when it reached a speed of 1,400 revolutions a minute, the battery power was turned off and the machine itself created the electric current to cause the polarity change in the points.

In his contract with financial backers of his invention Roth thus described his magnetic motor: "The inventor has discovered that the magnetic forces of the earth may be utilized in creating and transmitting horsepower and he devised, invented and constructed a mechanical device that will operate by magnetic force and generate horsepower sufficient for all practical purposes where steam, electricity or water power is not used."

Under All Conditions
The machine will operate under all conditions of heat or cold according to the inventor.

Roth has lived in Brown county for 59 years. His farm is about one and a quarter miles south of the Morgantown-Helmsburg highway, five miles south of Morgantown. Roth works at "inventing" when not busy with his farm affairs. He milks six cows every night and saws wood every day.

CHAPTER VII Fires of Fury

As the half drawn forms of Rosalind and Fitz James swept past them, the Phantom turned to Cherub. Tears were in his eyes. "They've been swept out to sea. We'll have to wait and search the coast line when the storm subsides."

Higher up the hill under the shelter of a grotto, Gilbert and his men saw the torrent burst from the cave; saw too, the human forms that were lost to the swirling waters. But as tears came to Gilbert's eyes as he said, "They're dead! That means that I inherit the island and the treasure—if only I can find it!"

Both the Phantom and Gilbert had spoken too soon. Had they waited a bit longer they would have seen the bodies of Rosalind and Fitz James, as they floated round and round until they reached the edge, where, finding himself in "calmer, though still swift, water, Fitz had clutched at Rosalind, and by a mighty effort reached the edge of the channel. Spent and exhausted by their terrible experiences of the last few hours, both were content to lie, inert, caring little that they were wet, exhausted, and saved only by a miracle. But as night fell, the air grew chill, which did much to bring them back to a normal condition. Rosalind wanted to go home, but Fitz felt sure that Gilbert, believing them dead, would have taken up his search for them.

They walked to a fisherman's hut. The fisherman knew Rosalind well, and did everything he could to make them comfortable. They stayed there two days resting, happy in each other's company.

"Why go back?" argued Rosalind. "After all, we have everything—life and love."

"Yes, dear," answered Fitz, "that is all that really matters, but somehow I can't bear the thought of Gilbert holding—even for a moment—things that belong to you."

Gilbert was beside himself with joy at the outcome. "This all belongs to me," he gloated to Mrs. Strange, "now if we can find the secret treasure—ah-h-h-h!" He and his men were combing the house.

The maid refused to believe the mad news regarding her beloved mistress until the arrival of the Phantom and Cherub killed her last hope. She told the Phantom of Gilbert's exhaustive search for a clue to the treasure.

"We must drive him away," he said, "and I think I know a way to do it."

The Phantom led Cherub to the tunnel under the house through the entrance in the Pirate's Den.

"Do as I tell you," he said, "and we'll soon have those covards on the run."

Gilbert's henchmen soon tired of his search. He was tireless. He was with Mrs. Strange in the library when they started to quarrel, so taut were their nerves. Suddenly came the clank, clank, clank, of chains. Mrs. Strange shrank back against the wall in an attitude of fear. Gilbert stood, tense, listening.

CHAPTER VIII The Treasure Trap

When the blazing tree fell across his path as he stumbled along with Rosalind in his arms, Fitz thought that their end had come. In reality, it saved their lives. As Fitz dropped to dodge the tree his foot caught on a root, and he fell sideways. With Rosalind's weight in his arms he could not recover himself, and to his amazement, he rolled over and over. Blinded by smoke and flame he had not realized that they were on a sloping hillside. Striking a level spot they were brought to a jolting stop. Manfully picking up the now unconscious girl, by sudden dashes, he got beyond the fire.

Off to the north Gilbert and his gang who had managed to flee before Fitz and Rosalind, congratulating themselves on their narrow escape. They returned to the house to continue their search for a clue to the treasure. There, Cherub was yielding to the solicitous maid. His exhaustive efforts in clanking the chains, rattling the tin and pulling the string of the "squawker," the unearthly sounds of which had so paralyzed with fear Mrs. Strange and the gang, made doubly welcome the huge platter of bacon and eggs, and steaming cups of deliciously fragrant coffee she set before him. Mrs. Strange was at the door in her favorite occupation of listening. But she did not hear how the Phantom by a trick of mirrors had impersonated the ghost of Mark Joy.

The success of the trick was nothing to the Phantom now as he heeded the hills on the outskirts of the fire, looking vainly for some trace of the missing pair. Giving them up for lost, he at last returned to the house. At least he might be able to fool some of Gilbert's nefarious plans.

That it was, that when Fitz and Rosalind entered the Pirate's Den to reach the house by means of the tunnel shown them by the Phantom himself, they were seen by two people, the Phantom and the ever-watchful Mrs. Strange who had stepped onto the verandah to look on them. So silently the housekeeper glided to the window and saw Fitz and Rosalind enter the tunnel door. Swiftly she sped to the house where three men of Gilbert's were still on guard.

Scarcely had the fugitives reached the library before the guards jumped on them. The joy of battle no longer animated Fitz. He had fought against big odds so many times during the past week that he was fed up. But, always there was the thought that he was fighting for Rosalind, and this time Cherub was in this instance, for after ten minutes lustrous scrapping Fitz was calming Rosalind while Cherub was trussing up the men with his long long belt strap.

Fitz sank into an easy chair Rosalind was beside him, her pretty face puckered in a thoughtful frown.

"Fitz, dear, do you see the pane at the right of the fireplace—the lowest one? It looks different to me." She ran to it. She pressed on various knobs of the carving and emitted a little cry of delight. Fitz joined her. The pane had opened. The space behind was full of musty papers. Eagerly they pored over them. Mrs. Strange had returned to her sliding panel, all ears.

"See," cried Rosalind, as she held up a sheet of paper. "It's some kind of a key to the sand caves—locating the treasure."

Mrs. Strange waited not an instant. She hurried to the verandah looking for Gilbert who at the moment was just entering the grounds. She hastened to meet him before Fitz and Rosalind were in the house. They've found the treasure map," she whispered to him.

"If they have it—I'll get it," answered with a grim smile. Mrs. Strange continued to whisper. He nodded and telling his men to be on hand, he went to the Pirate's Den. As he did so the Phantom appeared before Fitz and Rosalind, congratulating them on their escape and on the finding of the treasure clue. Cherub, having eaten his fill, joined them. All were elated. Nothing could happen now. They had beaten Gilbert at his own game. They laughed and joked, even yet not realizing the deadliness of Gilbert's purpose. The Phantom stepped out of the room. As he returned he held out his hand for the map. Fitz handed it to him, when another Phantom appeared in the room. Before Fitz could think, he was knocked down by a powerful blow on the jaw. Rising he saw the two Phantoms and Rosalind struggling. Goggles were torn from the one with the map—revealing Gilbert. He broke away and escaped. They saw him from the window dash past on horseback. Quickly they followed.

They reached the treasure cave and entered. Past the skeleton, and the Ape that had frightened Cherub, they went on. Fitz came to the light, Rosalind following timidly. Fitz had not seen the sinister form of old Pegleg, musket in hand, nor had Rosalind, cowering in the background. Neither gave a thought to Gilbert. The truth was that in his greedy haste he had gone to the wrong cave, and even now was cursing when he found himself at the one that so recently had served as a prison for Fitz and Rosalind. The Phantom was rapidly drawing nearer.

Fitz beckoned to Rosalind to join him. Cautiously she advanced a few steps. Fitz stepped within the circle of light and looked curiously about him at Pegleg's "home." He was scanning the walls for evidence of the treasure, occasionally beckoning to Rosalind to come on.

He took another step forward and before Rosalind's anguished eyes, with a wailing cry, Fitz James—vanishing through the floor of the cave. (Continued tomorrow)

SLATON FARMERS READY FOR SPRING PLANTING

SLATON, March 22.—While it is difficult to determine definitely the extent of damage, fruit growers believe the freeze of last Thursday and Friday did not affect the majority of the fruit crop of this section. Only the earliest peach crops are believed seriously damaged, and this may prove less than half killed. A fair crop is anticipated unless a later cold spell strikes. Such fruits as cherries, pears and grapes were unaffected, growers say. The temperature was low enough to cause damage to unprotected early vegetables. Slaton farmers have practically finished their spring plowing. An increased cotton acreage is not looked for, but feed crops

DEAR FRIENDS:

This is the week I am supposed to write an "ad" for the Locke Jewelry Store.

I borrowed the boss's dictionary and learned a lot of big words but I can't seem to make them fit together.

Finally I ask Mr. Locke for a suggestion and he said, "Tell 'em about beautiful Gruen Watches."

That ought to be easy. They're the most serviceable American made watches on the market today. Carried by Col. Chas. A. Lindbergh, Gen. Pershing, President "Cal" Coolidge and other outstanding characters of today. And besides, he's got them in the window so you can see for yourself and check up on my "ad" writing the first time you are down town.

A Master Stroke of Engineering

-the Cross-flow Radiator introduced on the New Series Pontiac Six

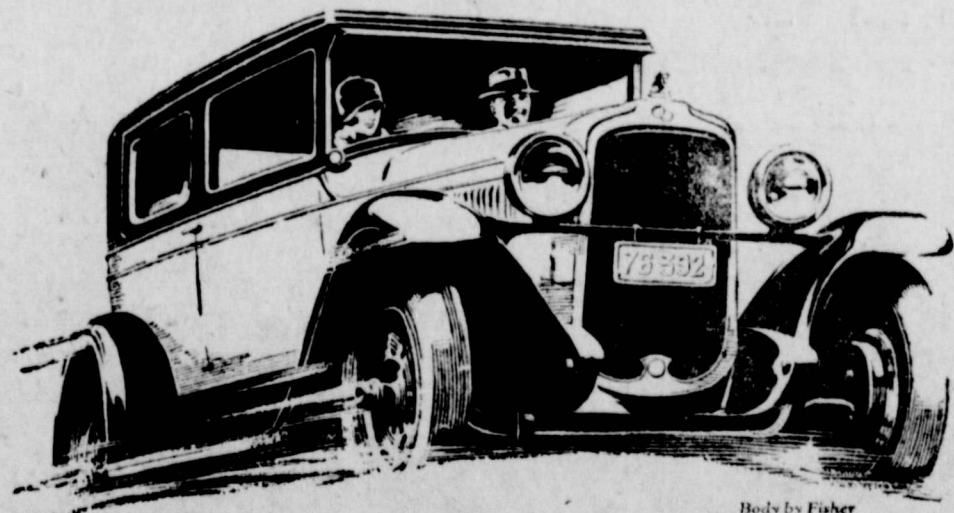

The "cross-flow" radiator consists of two side tanks, at top tank and a core made up of horizontal passages. Water from the engine enters the inlet tank at one side, flows horizontally through the core and is pumped from the outlet tank back into the water jacket. It cannot come in contact with the water in the top tank until after it has been cooled, and, as a result, even though the cooling liquid is boiling when it enters the radiator, it is practically impossible to lose any appreciable amount of water or alcohol due to high operating temperature.

Not only does the New Series Pontiac Six offer new bodies whose vividness of style challenges the world's finest cars. Not only does it offer scores of advanced engineering features never before combined in a car of such low price. But in addition, it introduces an advancement available on no other low-priced car in the world—that master stroke of engineering genius—the "cross-flow" radiator.

With the "cross-flow" radiator, losses of water in summer and alcohol in winter are reduced to a minimum with a resultant decrease in radiator attention—correct temperature of cooling water is assured—and a sturdier front-end construction is obtained.

Engineers and owners unite in acclaiming the "cross-flow" radiator one of the greatest automotive developments of recent years. Yet this is only one of scores of engineering advancements included in the New Series Pontiac Six—only one of a dozen reasons why you should inspect and drive this marvelous new General Motors car!

THE LAZY MAN'S LETTUCE

It requires skill and labor to produce a first-class head lettuce and the market offers them so reasonably that the majority of gardeners who have failed to get the crisp solid heads they set out to grow have given up. The cos lettuce, or romaine, gives a fair imitation of a head lettuce of the finest quality and anybody can grow it. It is the lazy man's lettuce for, given half a chance, it will succeed and the better the culture the more outstanding the success in growing a lettuce of quality.

COS LETTUCE IS A REAL DELICACY

It is a different style of growth from the head and common leaf lettuce, producing long, rather narrow erect leaves that tend to fold over each other and enclose and blanch the heart. This tendency is readily increased by loosely tying up the heads with raffia or string. Many epicures believe the cos lettuce to be the finest flavored and highest quality of all the types.

They stand heat better than other lettuces and are always crisp and delicate when freshly gathered. The inner leaves bleach white and the outer leaves are a light green and are tender and not soaring as the outer leaves of some head lettuces are. Give the cos lettuce a rich soil and plenty of moisture if it happens to be a dry season and it will make its long slender heads with great regularity.

Like all the lettuces, it is best during the cooler days of spring, but it does not show as much speed in rushing up to seed when the hot days set in as its relatives. Give the plants six inches apart in the rows and plant as soon as the ground can be worked.

There are three well-known types. Express Cos is a dwarf and early sort. Paris White is a larger whiter sort of pronounced self-closing habit and Trianon is an earlier larger-growing type that makes the whitest centers of the three.

STYLE HINTS

By ALICE LANGELEIER International News Service Staff Correspondent

PARIS, March 22.—Street frocks for spring wear are strikingly simple but hint in no manner to masculinity. In their chic lines there is the feminine note which will dominate this year.

They come in navy blue reps, beige kashas and crepe de chine of all shades. There is one in woolen voile in a checked design of old blue which is buttoned straight down the side and has a belt of blue suede and pointed neck outlined with a narrow band of white.

Navy blue crepe de chene make an extremely popular street frock. It has a bloused back with a skirt which is pleated on the front and sides with a fan pleating at one side of the front with a strip of French blue and another of white seersucker.

Rasmus, who, by the way, is a "big Dane" and one of the smartest tailors in the French fashion world, uses a mixed beige wool to make a 3-piece ensemble in jumper fashion. There is a cut-out pattern on the bodice which shows the same beige leather which makes the narrow belt. The long coat is extremely simple.

Two street frocks from Lemie's come in navy blue taffeta with scalloped bands, flat collar and flaring cuffs of white organdie which is delectably feminine touch to return to favor. An especially spring like ensemble consists of a three-quarter length cape of fine reps in light beige with five sawtooth bands around the bottom, and worn with a gown of the same material having the same pointed bands around the hips and on the lower sleeve.

Post-Dispatch In Favor Dry Plank

HOUSTON, March 22.—The Post-Dispatch says editorially this morning that it favors a dry plank in the Democratic platform, in-spiration of the state's delegation to the national convention on the dry question and a delegation un-instructed as to candidates. This open stand on the national wet or dry issue is the first editorial utterance of any Texas newspaper on the subject.

"The Post-Dispatch believes," an editorial says, "after long study of the situation and all factors it involves, the desirable course is to instruct Texas delegates to the Houston convention to work not only for a plank favoring rigid enforcement of the eighteenth

Terry Opens Drive Upon Prairie Dogs

BROWNFIELD, March 22.—Terry county has engaged in an effort to kill all the prairie dogs. After the purchase of several hundred ounces of poison it arranged for the services of a government agent and up to this time about 6,000 pounds of grain has been mixed which is being rapidly distributed among farmers and ranchmen.

A large portion of the county was cleared of these animals several years ago, but on account of their ability to reproduce rapidly it has been necessary to make new drive upon them.

Warning of Dam Break Was Seen

Engineer Who Built St. Francis Dam Says He Knew Conditions Were Very Bad 11 Hours Before

LOS ANGELES, March 22.—A member's jury Wednesday heard the quivering lips of the man who built the St. Francis Dam as a silent warning came from the reservoir itself that all was well 11 hours before the great concrete thing collapsed and dealt death in a mighty deluge over little Santa Clara river valley.

The warning was the muddy water that trickled from the 185-foot retaining wall, indicating, according to the engineer, that conditions were "bad, very bad," that there was a leak through the arch about the structure.

It was William Mulholland, veteran chief engineer of Los Angeles city's department of water and power, who gave the testimony. In his face and figure was reflected the great tragedy of the dam valley. In the tears that he had down his cheeks and in the creases that shook his aged body, could be seen the reaction to the knowledge that probably more than 400 persons had died when the dam—his dam—gave way before its load of 12,000,000,000 gallons of water.

Mulholland's testimony was given in a dramatic hush. At one point he gave away almost completely to his emotions. "I envy only those who are dead," he said. "We must have overlooked something."

Conditions—'Very Bad'

He had visited the St. Francis Dam in San Francisco Canyon 11 hours before its collapse. Leak conditions were "bad, very bad." He had gone to visit the structure at the call of the keeper, Tony Harshefeger. The keeper saw new leaks through the earth and had sent for his chief. The keeper was one of those who died when the St. Francis Dam broke.

The dam always had been the driest of the 19 built by Mulholland, or any that he had seen throughout the country, he said. He had kept close watch during the construction of the dam. "It was built," he said, "for conservation. We take water as the good Lord gives it to us. Los Angeles, you know, is unique. Our people here take it for granted that there will be water in the faucets in the morning. It is our job to see that they have the water. Without reservoirs in this country, we could not exist."

The dam itself was reared chiefly from materials taken from the winding little valley that slashes the rolling hills above Saugus. The westerly extension of the dam, 600 feet long at its top and 250 feet at its bottom, was on a natural dyke. It was based on bed rock, 20 feet below the natural surface of the ground.

Spot Is 'Hoodoo'

Sixteen months labor had been necessary to complete the project and the water began to fill in a lake which grew later to five miles in extent in May, 1925.

He was not away from it during construction more than three or four days at a time. The usual tests, such as core drilling, were resorted to before the dam was put in use.

The veteran engineer declared solemnly that he believed the dam to be safe. Answering a question he said:

"I would never have put a drop of water in it if I had not been absolutely certain that it was safe."

He would not build it again, however. "I must be frank and say that I would not. It failed; what's why; there's a hoodoo on it. It was in an invulnerable spot; the spot has all the appearances of hoodoo."

Mulholland, replying to questions, said if there was any dirt mixed in the concrete he did not see it. He said there was no decomposed granite in it either for there is no granite in that section to give way.

Denies Hint of Disaster

The east wing had gone out when a tremendous pressure of water, created by a swirling throw-back of current caromed against the eastward bulwark of the arch. When a hint of a challenge came that he might have known something to cause him apprehension, Mulholland's voice rose strong and vibrant:

"There never had been a hint of such a catastrophe pending," he said. He branded as false all rumors that persons in the valley below, persons employed in taking care of the dam, threatened to move away because of danger. "Absolutely no such rumors ever were spread through the valley," he said. "Why, man alive, had I thought such a thing might happen, I would have been the first, the very first, sir, to spread the alarm. I would have sent a regular Paul Revere alarm ringing through every foot of that valley."

The witness declared it would have taken two months to have emptied the reservoir in safety.

The engineer's testimony was preceded by that of Ray Rising, sole survivor of a family of five which lived in the Santa Clara Valley, and John Richards, president of the Los Angeles Board of Water and Operator Commission.

Fifty witnesses have been summoned and the inquest is expected to continue for several days.

RANGER PAVING BONDS ARE GIVEN APPROVAL

RANGER, March 22.—Word was received in Ranger Wednesday that the Texas attorney general has approved the $25,000 paving bonds for the city of Ranger. The warrants approved by the attorney general are the ones of the second issue. The first issue amounting to $25,000 also, was approved by the attorney general sometime ago. The money is to be used in paying the city's portion of the paving now under construction.

Contracts in most states are equally valid whether made orally or in writing.

CORN AND BARLEY GRAIN INCREASE IS PREDICTED

AUSTIN, March 22.—If Texas farmers' intentions are carried out this year, there will be a 6 per cent increase in corn and more barley, white and sweet potatoes, grain sorghums, peanuts and hay, says a report by H. H. Shultz, federal department of agriculture statistician at Austin, based on a state-wide survey. A corn acreage of 5,500,000, compared with 5,189,000 for 1927, is indicated, he said. Cotton acreage last year was decreased 11 per cent or 2,000,000 acres in Texas, while in other states it was cut about 15 per cent, and if the same reduction is kept in effect this year in Texas and elsewhere a 13,000,000 bale crop could be expected.

ASKING THE PATENT HELD TO BE INVALID

NEW YORK, March 22.—A patent under which manufacturers of the frozen confection known as "Eskimo Pie" have made a fortune estimated in millions of dollars was held invalid today by Federal Judge Marcus B. Campbell in Brooklyn. The ruling came after weeks of judicial research into the field of frozen desserts, during which the judge said he discovered a recipe, published in 1901 for a spherical version of "Eskimo Pie"—ice cream contained in a chocolate casing. The decision held invalid a patent for "Eskimo Pie" issued to Christian K. Nelson Jan. 24, 1922. The suit was brought by the Eskimo Pie corporation against the Honeycomb Pie corporation and associated concerns.
