ART AND LIFE.

"The true work of art," said a college commencement speaker, "not only offers the joy of its own impression and its own life-giving energy, but it so tempers the mind and heart of the recipient that he becomes better able to discover for himself in the world and within him, impressions similar to that which moved the artist."

RELIGIOUS PEACE IN MEXICO.

It is reassuring to hear that the last great problem of Mexico—the religious one—is nearing settlement. There are well supported rumors of an approaching agreement between the Mexican government and the Catholic church.

CORNER ON COCOA.

British producers of cocoa in West Africa, united with London interests, are said to be forming a combine to hold up the price of their product. That would have a direct effect on cocoa and chocolate prices in the United States.

"TENDERLOIN," starring Dolores Costello, is a Warner Bros. picture-ization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Lovely Rose Shannon, one of the dancing girls at Kelly's Ritzside Cafe in the Bowery, has attracted the attention of Chuck White. He escorts her home. Later he tries to make passionate love to her. In desperation she seizes a clock and strikes him with it. Chuck drops unconscious. Terrified that she has killed him, Rose hastily packs her things and rushes into the night. Running through the darkened streets she stumbles suddenly across a satchel marked "Meyer National Bank." On her way to return it she is met by a policeman on the trail of the bandits. At the police station she is accused of complicity.

Groups of old books with musty bindings, their edges frayed and torn, were piled about carelessly in corners, while behind the conglomerate mass a long tapestry hung, concealing the interior of the store.
Sway beams of light trickled into the shop from the barred door and were quickly lost in the contrasting brightness of electricity that brought out a soft glow of color from the faded Oriental rug on the floor. To the rear of the room was a long, carved teakwood desk, beside which stood a base burner stove. All about the walls hung a collection of prints—Chinese, Japanese, Persian, Indian—interspersed with brilliantly colored wall drapes. Huge carved chairs reared their high backs against ancient tapestries, figured with unusual designs.

"Can't you leave the dames alone?"

In the midst of this heterogeneous collection, a tall, gaunt man in a long frock coat moved restlessly about, striding up and down the room. A slight limp made one foot fall slightly heavier than the other, suggesting the sound of a wooden leg thump-thumping back and forth. His face was twisted into a cruel smile; his hands were clenched, and now and again he muttered to himself, taking no notice of the two other occupants of the place.
Finally, when he could no longer contain himself, he turned upon his companions, his clenched fist beating the air. "Fools, imbeciles! Two hundred grand thrown away! Oh, you white livered rats!" His whole body shook in the intensity of his anger.
"It was all Chuck's fault." The Mug turned a cowardly face on his accuser. "If he'd showed up, we'd a got away wif de haul K. O. He wuz wif dat dame of his."
"Passing the buck again, are you? Well, let me tell you this, if I had been there it wouldn't have happened. Throwing the satchel over the fence! Why, you big gorillas, you could have made a pe-waw so clean and easy, I hate to think of it." The Professor spoke his words vigorously, still slumping up and down, his wooden leg sounding a muffled beat on the carpet.
"Yea, wif de bulls creepin' up on us, an' I know wot dat means—a five year stretch," the Mug interrupted. "You didn't think I wuz join' to take no chance on 'at, Geez, you says it wuz gonna be easy pickin'."
"Easy? It was so simple a child could have pulled it. But you big bunch—"
"Aw, his'en, Professor, 'em Bulls was camping on our tails," the Sparrow put in apologetically.
"Dat wouldn't of made no difference," the Mug interrupted, "if dat dame—"
He stopped short as the door was flung open and in walked the house—he had been berating.
Chuck looked about as best he could with one eye, for the other was swollen and completely shut, while a nasty red scar still stained his forehead. He banged the door behind him and flung himself into a chair.
The Mug and Sparrow drew back as the Professor clumped down the room and stood in front of the new

OF A SOCIAL NATURE

STYLE HINTS

By ALICE LANGELIER
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

IRREGULAR LINES ARE AID TO STYLE
PARIS, June 20.—Irregularity continues to be the most characteristic of fashionable frocks and costumes this season. As if wanting to get away from prim mascul-line lines, the dressmakers are designing their most feminine clothes by most irregular patterns.

Coats and dresses are ensembles, and extremely smart ones at that, by a mere thread which binds them together. But this does not mean the reversion to the old idea of the separate coat and frock. Each piece may be utterly unlike the other in color and fabric, and yet give the appearance of being meant to go together. Material and color are chosen to set off each other, to harmonize and not to clash.
There are printed and plain ensembles with either coat or frock printed and its accompanying garment plain; then there are printed ensembles with plain blouses and vice versa. Patterned and plain woolsens are also used and others with two colors of plain material or two sizes of painted motifs.

The tie was the uniting link on a charming model in sapphire-blue recently seen at the races. The coat came in tussikasha which is half angoria and half silk with a linen finish, and the frock of blue tussor with small plaids in white. The tie was like the frock. Irregularity was further noticed in the snug jumper and skirt with a coat which flared from the shoulder.
Mary Nowitzky is showing a jumper-blouse of rust-red crepe de chine trimmed with an appliqued band ending in a bowknot worn under a printed jacket edged with the same shade. The skirt is also of the print and has the irregular hemline which continues to be very much worn. It is longer on one side.

Evening gowns continue to dip toward the back and afternoon gowns also show a decided droop.

primaries, and to prepare the ballot for the printer. This committee will meet at Eastland on call of the chairman, and was appointed at the meeting Monday of the executive committee.

Methodist Missionary Society Meets Tuesday Afternoon.
The Woman's Missionary society of the First Methodist church met Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. D. Barker on West Ninth street. The meeting was opened with a song, after which Mrs. J. S. Strickland offered a short prayer. Mrs. John Shertzer read the devotional lesson. Mrs. George Winston, president, had charge of the brief business session. Mrs. Wm. Reagan gave a paper on the hospitals in the foreign countries and their medical needs. Mrs. Philip Pettit offered a prayer for Mrs. Neal Turner of Fort Worth who underwent an operation Monday. Mrs. Turner was a former worker in the society. Mrs. W. E. Ricks was the leader for the afternoon's program. The hostess, assisted by Mrs. C. L. Orr and Mrs. Sherman Roberts, served dainty refreshments to 30 members and guests. Mrs. Gardner of Purdon was a guest and gave a short talk on the work she was doing with the church. Mrs. Gardner will be remembered as Miss Mamie Rodgers, who lived in Cisco for a number of years before moving to Purdon.

Theater Party Given Tuesday Afternoon
Mrs. J. E. Spencer entertained with a theater party Tuesday afternoon, honoring her guest, Miss Kathleen Johnson of Dallas. The guests assembled at the home of Mrs. Spencer on West Eighth street and went to the show, after which the hostess served refreshments to the following guests: Misses Lillian Shertzer, Pauline McClinton, Mary Elizabeth Clutz, Helen Crawford, Lena Mae White, Marjorie Spencer of Carbon, Harriett Angus, Geraldine Poe of Carbon, and the honoree.

ELECTRICITY IS USED TO KILL HARMFUL FISH

AUSTIN, June 20.—That destruction of predatory fish by electricity may prove a success is the belief expressed by officials of the game, fish and oyster department following an experiment at Del Rio, in which fish, stunned from an electric current discharged into the water, were brought to the surface.

The floating fish were gathered into a boat, suckers were dumped on the shore and the bass and perch returned to the water, where they soon swam away. Not a fish was killed by the current, which ranged in voltage from 330 to 440.

Another try out of the plan will be made in Devil's river, where large gars are working havoc with the fish population. That gars and snakes can be brought to the surface with a degree of voltage not injurious to game fish was the belief of the engineers, though turtles went to the bottom and recovered when the current was turned off.

The trap was laid by two wires. One was zigzagged across the bottom in an area of water 100 yards square just above a dam. The other was attached to floats and drawn slowly across the surface by men on each side of the reservoir. Fish were seen to slash the water and begin swimming on their backs when the wire got within ten feet. Bass yielded most readily, their mouths wide open and gills distended; next came perch, but suckers were more resistant. One bass that lay on the wire four minutes began to breathe five minutes after its removal and in ten minutes swam away.

HASKELL LANDMARK BURNS

HASKELL, June 20.—Fire Monday night destroyed the old C. D. Grissom home in the western part of town, for many years a landmark in Haskell, with a loss of four or five thousand dollars, partly covered by insurance.
Since Hardy Grissom moved to Abilene six years ago the house has been occupied by J. W. Looney. Mr. Looney and his family were away from home at the time the fire was discovered, and when trucks from the fire department arrived, the building was collapsing. Origin of the blaze is not known. When the Grissoms came to Haskell in 1900 the home was built, a 9-room frame house, and for years was one of the best residences in Haskell.

W. B. Chapman says he is filled with new plays and moves for his Lobos, but can't vouch for them until he puts them into execution this fall. He was accompanied home by W. L. GREAT DANE TO BE HER EYES

Miss Helen Keller, as she appeared on her arrival from Europe with her great Dane, the gift of a Stuttgart, Germany, publisher.

NEW YORK, June 20.—Blind, deaf and dumb from her earliest years, Helen Keller has just opened another avenue of communication with the world. It consists of the Great Dane pictured above, a gift to her from Robert Luis, publisher, of Stuttgart, Germany.

"All my life I have been interested in animals," said Miss Keller on her arrival from abroad. "Since early childhood, life has fascinated me; I have visited nearly all of the important zoological parks and menageries, making the acquaintance of African buffaloes, hippopotami, sea lions and even prairie wolves and coyotes. "All these contacts have helped to make the world I live in vivid and vastly interesting."

America's most famous blind woman author, teacher—and inspiration to all unfortunate—explained that the Great Dane beside her is a breed noted for its loyalty and intelligence. She will train him to be her eyes, and through his canine observation she will visualize what goes on around her in nature.

For life—the simple human, personal, everyday things which we don't talk about—is very wonderful to Helen Keller!

FARM RELIEF HAS ATTENTION OF DEMOCRATS

HOUSTON, June 20.—Farm relief and prohibition Tuesday drew the attention of party leaders who had arrived in Houston a week before the opening of the Democratic national convention.

W. A. Julian, national committeeman from Ohio and a recognized leader in Democratic ranks, in his first statement on the grounds of the convention, said that the Democrats "must affirm the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill in principle. "The country faces disaster unless some relief is found for this large wealth producing portion of our population."

Clem Shaver, chairman of the national Democratic executive committee, and Jesse H. Jones, Texas' "favorite son," again reiterated former statements that the farmers "who were denied admittance at Kansas City" will be welcomed at Houston and given an "opportunity to present their case."

Meanwhile, Louis A. Colvillier, chairman and general counsel of the National Constitutional Liberty League of America, indicated that his forces would attempt to make prohibition an issue. He said he would seek a plank in the party platform favoring a referendum in each state on the liquor question. Aside from these statements, Houston virtually was in a political lethargy, although the Texas city went ahead with the preparations for the thousands of visitors who already have begun to arrive. By the first of next week the streets will have been decorated with flags of the states, territories and the nation.

Buy the only fine car that has been proved by Two Million Owners...

YOU will search in vain for a longer or more brilliant record of service than Buick's. Two million Buicks have proved Buick value on the road. More than a million and a half, still in service, attest Buick stamina. Every Buick has—as "regular equipment,"—power in excess of any need, beauty and luxury beyond compare—and a degree of dependability which has long been traditional. You're sure of real value when you buy the car that two million owners have proved.

All Buick models have Lovejoy Hydraulic Shock Absorbers, front and rear, as standard equipment
