CISCO STORE HAS BUSINESS FROM ALASKA

The mail order question, like the protective tariff, is largely a local issue, as Hancock stated when he was a candidate for president. We deary the mail order business when our people send off for merchandise, but it is a horse of another color when mail orders are sent; in Cisco merchants. But Cisco is gaining quite a reputation as a mail order town. Orders from neighboring cities are not rare, but Bob Herron, of the Herron-Owen Slipper Shop, boasts of having received an order from a most distant place of origin, one from Mrs. H. E. D. Wallace, of Anchorage, Alaska, for two pair of children's shoes and five pair of hose. Past orders from this store having proven satisfactory, she made this reorder, calling for a certain brand of shoes and hose. Herron stated the same day he filled three other mail orders, but none from such a distance. The others were from West Texas towns—Rule, Moran and Hamlin.

Cisco Is Using More Water Now Than Ever Before; Consumption Friday Close to 1,000,000 Gallons

"Cisco is using more water than ever in the history of the city," said R. E. Scott, water superintendent. "Friday, not quite one million gallons of water was used, but the consumption would have been that figure had we been able to pump that amount. All three pumps were running, still we could not keep the standpipes full. I was up till 3 o'clock Saturday morning having the pumps running, and still the pressure was not at the highest. Cisco is simply using more water at this time than the present facilities will handle. The weather has been excessively warm, and the consumption has reached the highest stage, but the matter is being remedied as fast as possible."

"The muddy water Friday was not caused from pumping water direct from the lakes. We are pumping no water from the lakes into the mains, but this muddy water was due to the fact that we have not been able to flush the mains since the lake water was pumped into the standpipes about ten days ago. When the water ran low the settlements in the mains were drained, causing the water to be muddy for a few hours."

F. L. KELLY'S FATHER BURIED IN OKLAHOMA

P. L. Kelly, commercial teacher in the Cisco high school, returned home Friday night from Davidson, Okla., where he was called last Monday by the death of his father, P. H. Kelly. The funeral was held in that city Tuesday last. Kelly stated that while his father had been ill about three weeks, his death came unexpectedly, when he apparently was on the road to recovery.

CISCOAN HURT AS AUTO GOES ACROSS GULLY

L. J. Preston is under the care of a physician from the effects of an injury to his spine, caused when the automobile in which he was riding threw him out of his seat as it crossed a gully in the highway. Preston was not thrown out of the car, but the jar was of such force that the rebound when he fell back on the seat, injured his spine. In company with his family he had started to Throckmorton in response to a message announcing the death of his brother-in-law, Dick Crowell, employe of the Cisco & Northeastern railroad, who died suddenly in that place Thursday. The accident occurred near Throckmorton, and his sufferings caused the family to return to Cisco, where Preston has since been confined to his bed. The attending physician stated that Preston's injury was not serious, and that he would likely be able to get out in a few days. Crowell was buried in Throckmorton Saturday morning at 10 o'clock.

BROTHER-IN-LAW OF CISCO MAN DIES IN ARKANSAS

B. G. Dowell, Cisco oil man, was notified Friday of the death of his brother-in-law, Will Alexander at Fayetteville, Ark., which occurred Friday morning, according to a message to Mrs. Dowell here. Dowell was in South Texas, he has oil holdings, and is there to attend the funerals.

SIX ARE KILLED IN TWO STATES BY BAD STORMS

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 30.—According to reports from middle Tennessee and Kentucky at least six persons were killed and millions of dollars' damage done by torrential rains and windstorms that swept the two states Friday. The breaking of the Cookeville municipal power dam on the Falling Water river sent a huge wall of water down the narrow valley toward the Cane Fork river already above flood stage but did not cause any deaths, as far as could be determined.

In the same general area, the small daughter and wife of a farmer were drowned when their house was washed away as they slept. In Buffalo valley the two young daughters of another farmer were drowned.

EOLIAN ROAD STEEL BRIDGE IS SALVAGED

The steel bridge on Eolian road, which was destroyed by a flood on Friday, was salvaged and is being moved to a new location.

NEW COMER SURPRISED BY LACK OF SCHOOL INTEREST

Editor Daily News: I have followed with interest the various proposals for community development. Though only a recent resident of Cisco I feel a vital interest in its progress. The hotel is already under way. The airport facilities are bound to materialize as air traffic increases. The institution of a cream route and like movements mean a great deal to the city as well as the rural districts.

But I am surprised that so little has been said about building a ward school since the condemnation of the west ward building last spring. The recent suggestion for voting bonds ought to meet the approval of every believer in Cisco. While I was in Denver last summer I was shown through the magnificent plant of the East Denver high school, one of several buildings by which community undertakes to fulfill its educational obligation to its boys and girls. Many other enterprises might well be let go if necessary to provide for the educational needs of our children. But there is no likelihood of a school building enterprise interfering with any other worthy enterprise.

I hope it will be possible for those directing the construction of a new ward building to visit the very best and most down to date plants so that in this respect we may have a model school building. As an instructor of young people in their higher education, and especially of those who themselves may enter the educational field, I hope to have so near at hand an example of the very best in educational equipment.

Yours for the community, and its boys and girls.

appeal to those "timate" stage. That is going to be relegated to the realm of mechanical reproduction. We have our speaking good actors? The present stars "in person" seems to announce. It isn't likely that any age will be so much interested in person as to lose its interest in person. We shall never outgrow the charm of human contact, with its satisfying sense of reality.

INDUSTRIAL FARMING.

Thomas D. Campbell, of Montana, reared on a North Dakota farm, is a graduate engineer and a farmer of the new school. He farms as head of a corporation, cultivating 95,000 acres. He plows 1,000 acres a day, seeds or harvests 2,000 acres a day, and threshes 30,000 bushels a day. Campbell is optimistic about American farming. Naturally his outlook is different from that of most farmers. Writing in the Magazine of Business, he says:

"The engineer and the industrial chemist will do for agriculture what they have done for other industries. The chief difficulty in this new development of farming is the problem of financing. The biggest obstacle that farming has to overcome is the universal belief that it cannot succeed.

"Farming should be considered as a business. We have too many people on the farms now."

All or most of this is unquestionable. Economically this scientific, industrial, financial attitude toward farming is right. For profitable farming, progress lies along this line. Yet there is another side—human and social and political. "A bold peasantry, their country's pride, when once destroyed can never be supplied." What will happen to American life when millions of independent farmers, long self-sustaining and thinking for themselves and carrying on the traditional American spirit, forsake their quarter sections and lose themselves in the cities or become mere wage-workers for agricultural corporations that produce crops as mills produce steel? That might make food cheaper; but are we sure we want it?

LIGHTS FOR FOURTH.

There is a movement, endorsed by the American Legion Auxiliary, to adopt "patriotic lighting" for Fourth of July celebrations. The big idea is to use lights on the Fourth very much as they are used at Christmas, making them substitutes for cannon crackers. The colored strings of Christmas bulbs seem to lend themselves nicely to such a scheme. Anything that will help to eliminate dangerous fireworks is commendable. There is a great deal to be said for this lighting plan. It was said long before the day of electric lights, by Daniel Webster, that throughout the ages to come, the anniversary of the Declaration of Independence would be celebrated "with bonfires and illuminations." The bonfire custom has about died out, and illuminations of harmless, quiet, old-fashioned sort have given place to noise. Modern electric facilities make possible lighting effects that Webster never dreamed of. Why not use them, even though the early darkness of Christmas time be lacking to heighten the effect?

A SINGER'S FORTUNE.

The estate of Enrico Caruso, the great tenor, of which an accounting is rendered seven years after his death, amounts to a little over a million dollars. That is not great as American fortunes are rated nowadays, but significant none the less. It shows that the time has come when art is profitable in this country. Any person of notable gifts, in music or any of the other fine arts, may accumulate a generous competence for his family even when he lives so generously as Caruso did. For a while in the development of every nation art starves. Then as wealth comes and education and taste grow, money is poured into fields of artistic endeavor. We have reached that stage now. Many singers today are making a million here easier than Caruso did. The arts hereafter may rival the industries in profitability.

THE CROCODILE LADY.

"Conditions in this city are certainly terrible," said the demure, middle-aged woman in the black coat as she entered a candy shop. "It isn't safe for life or property anywhere around here." She seemed all broken up about it. She fumbled in her purse and extracted—not a handkerchief to wipe her eyes, but a business-looking pistol. She pointed it at the startled shop-keeper, collected all the money in the cash register, sadly walked out and made her getaway before the victim could summon a policeman. Yes, this was in Chicago.

PEACE TREATY PROGRESS.

France is said to be coming around to the American viewpoint on the Washington proposal for a peace treaty of the big powers "renouncing war as an instrument of national policy." French statesmen, thinking it over, find that it will not necessarily conflict with France's obligations to the League of Nations. Also that France can afford to let her rivals benefit by it along with her. The pact first proposed by France was to safeguard France alone. This one would safeguard everybody. France therefore is said to be ready to withdraw reservations which threatened to emasculate the treaty. The French decision was probably influenced by the way Great Britain has been warming up to the treaty. All the powers are growing more friendly toward it, though there are still reservations proposed in Great Britain and some of the other countries that had better be omitted. The prevalent foreign feeling is that this treaty is not hostile to their League of Nations, as they suspected at first, but will help the league. While the other powers were in the league and America was outside, with nothing bridging the gap, they all had a certain amount of fear of this country. With America pledged to peace with all of them as this pact proposes, the league, they argue, will lose a possible competitor or opponent. So they tend to welcome such an arrangement. This need not scare off any Americans, on the score that the many-sided treaty is tying them up to the league. It is, of course, doing no such thing. In so far as it provides additional scope for American cooperation with the league in maintaining world peace, it deserves the united support of Americans. It is in line with American tradition of long standing, and with the present cooperative policy of our government.

CHAPTER XI
The afternoon sun of an early April day filtered through the bare, brown branches of the great trees, making slender shadows that danced for the sheer joy of approaching spring. It played upon the hard, dark earth, still chilled with the blankets of snow that had so recently covered it, warming it into ecstatic stirrings; causing it to send up slender pale green shoots to dress its drab unloveliness.

In a shallow hollow, its back against the hillside, nestled an old stone house. Fat, leafy boxwood trees bordered the path that led up to the deep-paneled door, with its brass knocker gleaming against the time-worn wood. Over the lawn that stretched out from the long porch, pale purple, yellow and white crocuses day-starred the ground, their long green spikes shooting upward like protective lances.

"Mebbe," Simpson responded laconically.

And as Simpson ruminated on the possible activities of the antique shop, the various members of that group were speculating on the activities of the detectives. They knew that Bobbie would lead the two sleuths on and finally wind up at her apartment. Once there, the dicks would watch her activities, keep a line on her until they discovered her identity, and by that time Chuck and Rose would be well on their way with no fear of detection.

"Say, Chuck, how long's your gonna be gone?" Sparrow asked as soon as Bobbie had got off safely.

"Oh, about a week, I guess. I'll get everything I want out of that baby by that time," Chuck asserted confidently. "Look here, Sparrow." He drew his companion aside and whispered hurriedly, slanting back over his shoulder towards the Professor's office. "If anything happens, you lemme know, see. I ain't expecting nothing, but you can't tell. What I mean's if I get stuck down there an' the Prof starts any dirty work, you tip me off."

"Sure, I will, Chuck. I gotcha." He raised his eyes and dropped them again quickly as the Professor came back into the room with Rose.

"Oh, there's one more thing I must show you before you go," the Professor insisted with the air of a collector whose greatest joy is the exhibition of his beloved objects. "This," he picked up an exquisitely bound book from a pile on the chair, "is an old, seventeenth century bible—English. The binding is most unusual."

"It is lovely," Rose took the book and examined it.

Chuck, his tongue in his cheek, winked across at Sparrow, who grinned appreciatively. Even Mag sent back a derisive smile from his post at the window.

"Then, my dear, you must take it with you. I want you to have it. You appreciate beautiful things." Heroinaway patted the girl's hand and bent over and kissed her on the forehead. "And now you two children must hurry. Goodness, it's twelve o'clock!"

"Yes, come on, honey," Chuck gathered up Rose's bag and started her towards the door.

"Thank you, Professor. And good-bye. You've been awful kind to me. I'll write you a letter just as soon as we get to the country." She shook hands with the man and put her arm through Chuck's. "Good-bye, Mr. Sparrow, and Dr. Mu—Mu—I can't say it," she laughed.

The two hurried to the door, followed by the Professor. They stepped out into the street, Chuck whistled for a passing taxi. The machine drew up, skidding to a stop. Chuck threw the bags into the car and helped Rose in. He followed her, calling out their destination to the driver. With a whirl they were off.

It's a tough break when girl has to earn her living the two-a-day while her ex-husband literally rolls it wealth. So Frances (Peaches) Heenan Browning, who used to be married to Edward West (Daddy) Browning, has announced she will sue to establish her dowry interest in property owned by "Daddy" at the time of his marriage to her.

The vogue for black afternoon frocks has brought with it lovely turquoise and coral necklaces. There are good old-fashioned branch coral necklaces which look extremely well with black silk or satin gowns, as well as round beads in various sizes. Numerous antique-shops have brought out their coral strings which are well-aged and have a lovely deep red tone.

CALLAHAN TO VOTE ON NEW COURTHOUSE

BAIRD, June 30.—The commissioners' court ordered an election to be held Monday, July 30, to vote on the issuance of bonds in the sum of $125,000 for the purpose of erecting a new courthouse for Callahan county.

The bonds will be for 40 years, issued serially and bearing interest at the rate of 5 per cent annually.

A year ago an election voting on $175,000 court house bonds failed, largely because the people felt that $175,000 was too much. This time the election will be for $125,000, a difference of $50,000.

The grand jury for the last term of court recommended a new court house in its report.

The parents of a Chinese boy who was ill, with feverish symptoms, took him to the London Medical Mission in Peking for treatment. The white physician was absent so the patient took him to a Chinese practitioner. The latter prescribed three scorpions, beaten to a pulp, taken internally. Despite the dose, the boy was well the next day.

Invocation—Rev. R. Neal Greer.
Welcome Address—Mrs. A. P. Conway.
Response—W. H. Kilgore.
Vocal Solo—Miss Grace Horton.
Reading—Mrs. W. H. Henderson.
Trio—Florence Cox, Beattie Joe Stekman, Marion Jacobs.
Special Numbers—Orchestra.
Reading—Mrs. Floyd Joyce.
Ladies' Quartet—Meadames Greer, Jones, Jacobs and Barton.
Original Poem—Mrs. J. F. Robertson.
Solo—Mrs. J. Hall Bowman.
Impromptu Talks—Citizens.
Benediction—Elder R. H. Montgomery.

(From the Ranger Times.)
W. R. (Indian Bob) Nixon is fighting his last fight.

For the man who was one of the last to see General George Custer alive and one of the first to see him dead, has been given but a few more days of life by attending physicians. The old man's heart is bothering him and he is dying.

In his little house, western borders the Ranger residential district, Indian Bob Nixon is about to leave a life that has been filled with adventure and crowded with thrills. He is 87 years old and is one of the last of Custer's men living.

It was Indian Bob Nixon that General George Custer sent with Buffalo Bill Cody for assistance just before the great American tragedy occurred. It was Nixon who buried Custer in a trench. It was Nixon who followed Sitting Bull across the Canadian border after the battle that wiped Custer and his men from the face of the earth.

"I've been a wild boy," Indian Bob said some time ago. "I guess a half-breed is the worst human in the world anyhow. I've smoked and chewed but I guess the worst habit I've had has been poker. I stopped that about five years ago."

Nixon was born on Leiber's reservation, four miles below Camp Cooper on the Clear Fork of the Brazos river, 20 miles south of the present town of Throckmorton. His father was an English doctor and his mother was a full blood Comanche Indian.

He was with General Custer about four months before the battle of Little Big Horn. He was guide for the United States army and was under McKemie at the Red Cloud agency, Utah. He spent three years as an interpreter at Fort McKavitt and guided General Shafter for over three years. He was one of a party who effected the escape of Jim Leslie, Fay Larkin and Jane Weatherbee, who were prisoners of the Mormons in a cave in Surprise valley in the Utah mountains for over 14 years.

But today the old scout is ready to "pass on." At the home of his daughters he is fighting his last battle. He is ready to join his comrades of another age. But even now, he animatedly talks of Custer and his last stand.

WARDEN AND 3 OTHERS RESIGN AT TEXAS PEN

HUNTSVILLE, June 30.—Col. W. A. McDaniel, warden of the Texas penitentiary, Clegg DeWalt, assistant warden, A. B. Carter, secretary to the warden, and Dog Sergeant Hudson all tendered their resignations today to W. H. Mead, general manager of the prison system. McDaniel said that he resigned because of the ill health of his wife at their home in San Antonio. It is generally thought here, however, that the men resigned because of the prohibitions regarding the use of the whip in punishing convicts.

General Manager Mead appointed Andrew Chenault, Paris, to succeed DeWalt as assistant warden. Tom Caughen, Huntsville, was named as Hudson's successor. No indication was given as to who might succeed McDaniel.

On the edge of Death Valley, where there is not a sign of anything green as far as the eye can see, the weather bureau has a station which they call Greenland Ranch.

Miss Helen Hunterman has returned from a week's visit with relatives in Moran.

Lawrence Wright of Berger, is the guest of his sister, Mrs. M. A. Wright and his mother, Mrs. Martin Matson.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Jackson and daughter, Miss Faye, have returned to their home at Denton, after visiting relatives here the past week. Miss Faye is a student in the teachers' college at Denton.

MIDLAND NEGRO FALLS 6 FLOORS; LEG, NOSE BROKEN

ABILENE, June 30.—John Belfry, 28, negro porter who fell six stories from the top of Hotel Scharbauer, at Midland, is in a sanitarium here receiving treatment for injuries sustained in the fall. He was brought here by a fellow porter. Belfry went to sleep in a window and just fell out. His right leg was fractured in several places and small bones of the left leg broken. His nose was also broken.

Rewards of Service

The conduct of the First National Bank has been marked by rigid adherence to sound principles of banking and its deserved reputation for strength and conservatism has won for it the confidence of the public.

Upon this foundation it has reared the structure of a useful life and enjoys in increasing measure the rewards that inevitably follow faithful and efficient service—the good will and patronage of people of the highest character and worth.

$5,000 PLEDGED BY EL PASO TO BIG BROADWAY

EL PASO, June 30.—The El Paso chamber of commerce has pledged $5,000 to the Broadway American highway association.

The association is on the work program for the present year and is like sum up the organization.

Plans are rapidly being formed for a concerted drive for memberships in the Broadway of America association throughout the entire length of the highway. It was stated at the headquarters here.

H. W. Stanley, manager of the association is making plans to go over the entire highway within the next few days and assist the local directors and chambers of commerce in securing the memberships in their cities.

The American brant goose, a black member of the family, is rapidly "going west." The great horned owl is said to be taking a greater toll of this bird than the guns. This owl grabs a 10-pound brant in midair and carries him off as if he were a pigeon.

An Englishman can leave his property away from his family; a Scotsman cannot.
