Only Four Survivors Found in Chilean Storm; Captain Takes Own Life with Disaster Sure

SANTIAGO, Chile, July 9.—Only four survivors were left today of the passenger list of the Chilean transport Angamos, which went on the reefs near the Bay of Arauco after losing its rudder in a tremendous storm. A total of 291 lives was lost, according to the most authentic figures.

Captain Suarez ordered the life boats lowered when it appeared impossible to keep off the rocks. All the boats were overturned in the raging sea. Suarez committed suicide on the ship's bridge when he realized that the disaster could not be averted.

The transport left Punta Arenas, southernmost city in the world in the Straits of Magellan, with 291 persons on board. Of these 215 were crew and seventy-six passengers. The latter included a number of women and children.

The storm was encountered late in the day. For several hours the Angamos struggled to make headway against wind and wave, but she was badly battered. Then her rudder was smashed and she started to drift toward the breakers. At 10 p. m. she struck.

With no rescue in sight attempts were made to launch lifeboats, but they capsized in the tremendous seas almost as rapidly as they struck the water and their human freight was tossed on the rocks by the breakers or drawn back into the angry sea.

The vessel filled rapidly and three hours after she struck was virtually buried under the waves. Then she broke in two and the few who remained aboard were thrown into the sea.

The Angamos was built in Scotland in 1890 for the Italian Navy and originally was named Citta di Venezia. During the Chilean revolution of 1891 she was acquired by the revolutionists.

It is reported that a large number of bodies have been picked up along the coast by Carabineros (national police). The naval authorities have ordered the steamers Lebu and Toms to proceed to resuscitate or otherwise aid survivors if any are found. Naval and judicial authorities will go aboard these vessels.

It is not known what disposition will be made of the hole, which is down to 2350 feet, but it is thought that the Qualls No. 1 may make a well yet if cleaned out.

STRONG FIGHT IN SOUTH PLAN OF DEMOCRATS

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., July 9.—Following a conference with Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Democratic vice presidential nominee, Jesse H. Jones of Houston, treasurer of the Democratic national committee, issued a brief statement in which he declared it was his opinion that one and possibly more campaign headquarters should be established in the South and that the strongest kind of a campaign should be waged in the Southern states. His statement follows:

"The purpose of my visit here was to discuss with Senator Robinson the phase of the campaign as it will apply especially to the South and personally to offer him my services in that campaign.

"We are agreed that there should be at least one Southern headquarters, possibly more, and the campaign should be prosecuted throughout the South.

"Undoubtedly the Smith-Robinson ticket will be a popular one, being all American and truly representative of people in all walks of life.

"The South is especially pleased to have a Southerner on the ticket, and the choice of the leader of the senate made the selection in every respect ideal."

Lenderloin

Copyright 1928, Warner Bros. Pictures Inc. "Lenderloin," starring Dolores Costello, is a Warner Bros. picture adaptation of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
A watch containing $200,000 has been stolen from the Mercer National Bank. The police suspect the "boss" leader of a gang of robbers, an antique shop, is closely watched. The Professor believes that lovely Rose Shannon, a girl dancer, knows where the watch is hidden. He assigns Chuck, one of his gangsters, to take her to the country to visit her supposed "aunt." He hopes she will give herself away during the trip. Chuck, more and more attracted to Rose and learning that Professor is on his way down, asks her outright whether she stole the money.

She looked up at the man before her, staring wide-eyed, unheeding. For a moment she felt as if the entire world were swarming about her. Then she laughed short, strained laughs. Surely, she must be joking—he couldn't be! How could she have anything to do with that robbery? And yet his eyes were so intense, his expression so earnest, she refused to meet hers.

"Oh, Chuck! Don't—don't joke with me. Why?" her voice trailed into a miserable silence. She was dropped from her trembling. She caught at her throat, enough to choke back that pain was rising from her heart. Her hand came quick and fast. "Now listen, honey," Chuck finally looked at the girl. "I ain't blaming you, even if you did. You see, he couldn't finish. That damned, haunted look on her face, that innocent expression, suddenly made him realize, if he never before realized it, that Rose was telling the truth. The walling moaned her lips. "There's sweetheart! Listen!" she was catching at her arm, trying to plead his case. "He tried to take the watch from your hand, but her sobbing only made her more wildly. "—don't—don't! Go away!" she wailed, gasping between the sharp intakes of breath that she stifled her. "Rose, honey! Please listen to me. I didn't mean it. I know you didn't do anything to do with all that. Rose, please don't cry like that. Rose only sobbed the harder, her body shaking and trembling in the wind. "Rose, listen!" Chuck caught by the shoulders, forcing her to look at him. "Look here, honey, sorry—damn sorry. Honest! Please believe me. I just been thinking that's all." The sobs were dying away now; whimpering moans caught in her throat. At last she raised her head and looked at Chuck. And only there was a gladness in her heart. For his eyes were misty; his expression was one of penitence, pity, and for the first time it was unassumed.

Chuck, dear, why did you say those terrible things to me? Rose's face was shaky, but she put her arm about his neck and kissed him. "Aw, I don't know, Rose," Chuck murmured, his arms closing tightly about the girl. "I'm just nuts. I don't know nothing. I'm a sap. Aw, Rose, tell me you love me. I'm so crazy about you I can't see straight." "That's all right, Chuck—it's all right," she said. They stood there together, clinging to each other, until the sound of a ringing bell came to their ears. They called them to supper. They turned, and started in the path. Over, Chuck thought. Not there was still the evening of them. But no matter what happened now, he knew that there was one thing he was going to do, and that was to keep any impending danger from Rose. They could do anything to him they liked, but he loved this girl as he had never loved anyone else in his life, and no one was going to harm her. He'd get them both out of this whole mess, somehow, and they'd start all over again. And this time it wouldn't be an easy pickin'.

CHAPTER XIV
Supper at the old stone house was a somewhat strained affair. Rose was inclined to silence, still feeling the effects of the, to her, terrible event of the afternoon. Molly kept glancing from the girl to Chuck, sensing that something had happened, but not being able to fathom the cause. She made every effort, every opportunity, to get Chuck away so that she could question him. But he had refused to be left alone with her. Chuck, for his part, knew that Molly was looking at him questioningly, suspiciously, even, but he intended to do no talking to her. There would be time enough for that when the Professor arrived. His mind was active with half-formed plans, none of which seemed especially useful. Supper over, Chuck drew Rose into the living room and closed the door behind them. "Listen, sweet heart," he began, his voice low and earnest. "Whatever happens, I love you. Remember that. See, don't let no one tell you different." "Why, Chuck! What do you mean? You look so—so sort of funny. Rose stared at him, a puzzled frown between her eyes. "Aw, nothing. Forget it, kid," Chuck tried to smile, but it was an unsuccessful attempt. "Nothing's gonna happen. Only just remember that."

His words were interrupted by Molly who came on into the room drawing off her gingham apron. "Well, why don't you play some thing, dearie," she turned to Rose attempting to assume her usual kindly manner. "If you don't mind, Aunt Molly," Rose responded, "I'd rather not. I feel so tired." She sat down in a rocking chair in front of the fire and swayed back and forth quietly. Chuck paced about the room restlessly, now watching Rose, now Molly. His air of perturbation seemed to spread; a tense silence hung over the room. Molly pretended to read, but her book was upside down, and from beneath her narrowed lids she watched closely for any sign that she thought might pass between the boy and the girl.

Then from below came the clatter of rumbling wheels on the roadway. A patter of horse's hoofs beat on the hard dirt bed. Molly jumped to her feet; this book fell to the floor with a resounding bang. She hurried to the door with a muffled exclamation and threw it open. "There's someone comin'," she flung back over her shoulder. But Chuck was already beside her, scanning the drive, Rose with him. Unconsciously, he threw his arm about her, as though to draw her out of harm's way. His grip tightened as the thump and rattle of horse and wagon came nearer and nearer. Molly seized a lamp from the table and held it up anxiously to glimpse the callers. And then around the bend in the road came a four-seated buggy, a lean horse straining at its load. In the glow of the lamp the three standing in the doorway could make out the tall figure of the Professor, sitting in front with Mug, who was holding the reins. In the rear sat Sparrow and Lefty, bouncing up and down as the rig jolted over the ruts. "Oh, it's your Uncle, Chuck!" Rose began to laugh, patting the boy's arm happily. "Oh, I'm so glad." For to Rose, the coming of this man meant that all was well. "Well, well, this is indeed a treat. How are you, Molly, dear?" The Professor kissed his "sisters'" cheeks. "And Rose! I'm glad to see you again, my dear." He bent his head and kissed the girl gently on the forehead. "And Chuck!" He shook hands with the boy. "Come on in." He beckoned for his companions, who were lingering in the background. The three men came forward, somewhat hesitatingly, and then amid a general shower of greetings and salutations, Molly led them into the big living room. Rose clinging to the Professor's arm. "I'm so glad to see you again, Professor," Rose was smiling up at the tall man beside her. "Thank you, my dear, thank you." The Professor patted Rose's hand. "But you haven't met my very dear friend, Dr. Cowper—Randolph Cowper—have you? Doctor, this is Miss Shannon, a very dear little friend of mine—and of my nephew." He introduced Lefty. MUST REPENT TO BE SAVED, SAYS BATDORF

"The Second Coming of Christ" will be the subject for discussion tonight at the revival now in progress at the Church of God, F. Avenue at Eleventh street. The pastor, Rev. John W. Batdorf, is conducting the services. Several important questions relating to the second coming of Christ will be discussed. A large crowd heard the message last night on "Repentance." The pastor said that the preaching of repentance as it is taught in the Bible is very scarce in this age. "There is a common idea that a moral man can get to heaven without it, but Jesus said, 'I tell you nay, but except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish.' Repentance was the first message of the new testament. John came in the wilderness preaching 'Repent,'" he said. "He refused to baptise some because they did not bring forth fruits of repentance. We would have a cleaner church and a better Christianity if more ministers would follow John's example in this respect. Jesus' first message was 'Repent.' After the Holy Spirit was given and the Jews cried out 'What shall we do?' Peter's first word of instruction was 'repent!' Throughout the Bible repentance is taught as the only means of a sinful people finding God. Repentance is not tears, remorse, fear, prayer, etc. A person might have all these and not repent. Repentance is turning with sorrow from a past sinful course or action. To repent means to quit sin. Let him that stole, steal no more. If a man tells lies he must stop it. If he is used to making short weights and short change, he must quit that. It means to actually get out of the sin business and get the sin business out of you. Nothing short of this is repentance and nothing short of this will save a soul." The meetings will continue throughout this week with services

SAN ANGELO IS PREPARING FOR SHEEP RAISERS

SAN ANGELO, July 9.—More than half a dozen San Angelo committees are engaged in developing plans for making the annual convention of the Sheep and Goat Raisers' association of Texas, July 24, 25 and 26, one of the big events in West Texas for the year. Plans already announced for entertaining the delegates to the convention include street dances, picnic parties, luncheons, banquets, athletics and out-of-door sports including golf and polo and swimming and boating in the Comcho rivers. The official sale will be conducted at the warehouses of the Wool Growers' Central Storage company here, and already many breeders and growers have entered animals for sale, according to D. T. Jones, secretary and treasurer of the sales organization. The San Angelo Country club will be turned over to the ladies attending the convention, arrangements for their entertainment being made by a special committee composed of wives of members of the executive board of the association residing here. EXTRA POINTS FOR SUBSCRIPTIONS EXTENDED FOR 1 WEEK

Double Value on Filling of Quota Also Continued to Saturday Night; Race Is Close as End Approaches

Two more weeks and the big drive for subscriptions for the Daily News and The Weekly American will come to a close. The two Chevrolets and all of the thirty prizes are ready for delivery to the workers who have the highest points.

The offer for 600,000 extra points for a one year's subscription to the Daily News or one year to the Weekly American and Roundup is extended for this week up to and including Saturday, July 14. The workers who secure their quota of new subscriptions given them for last week by next Saturday night will be given double points for all subscriptions secured for the two weeks. Those who secure more than their quota will be given the double points on all subscriptions they secure. One year to the Daily News with the Weekly American will count for two years for the extra double points.

Four three months or two six months subscriptions will count for the extra points for the two years. Subscriptions that are secured for a second payment, the subscriber to make another payment in order to move up his date will repeat all the points that the first payment secured, plus 600,000 extra points for the workers securing the second payment. Second paid subscriptions will count on the quota for new subscriptions if the payment was made as a new subscription. Subscriptions that are paid for the second time should be marked "Second Paid" on top of the subscription ticket by the workers so that the same can be given the extra points.

The workers who secure their quota of new subscriptions will be given 600,000 double points doubled for all new subscriptions that have been turned in during the previous weeks of the drive. Subscriptions secured Monday or last week should be brought or sent to The Daily News office as soon as convenient.

so that the subscribers can have the papers and the amounts will be counted on the quota.

The last free sample copies will go out with the Weekly American this week. The last free coupons will be published in the Weekly American this week. All coupons will be good for points until Thursday night, July 19. The drive will close Saturday, July 21.

The race for the most points remains a very close one and the opportunity that is given every worker to double her points for all subscriptions for this and last week as new subscriptions turned in during the previous weeks of the drive is the last big opportunity to make up high points. The last week the points will be for less.

LEE HAS MORE INVITATIONS TO SPEAK THAN HE CAN FILL

Frank Killough, Eastland, Who Offered Services, Has Just Completed Trip Through Eight Counties for Cisco Man

Q. Lee, candidate for the representative nomination for congress in the Seventeenth district, enters the flying colors the last lap of a five-cornered race for the high office within the gift of the people of the 14 West Texas counties comprising the district.

Lee, who announced for office, Lee waged an intensive campaign through the six months that have elapsed since he announced. He visited every county in the district, some of them two or three times, and is now making the circuit, seeking out Lewis and counties he was forced to miss on his first visits. Everywhere he goes with enthusiastic reception, and has undoubtedly had the best crowds of any of the congressional candidates. This despite the fact that the present spring, in its late rains and busy times, has mitigated against the best of political campaigns. The ease and enthusiasm with which Lee has won his speeches and the popular appeal which he makes to farmers and business men accounts for his good reception everywhere. There has been little of the "hip-hip-hurrah" attached to Lee's campaign. Neither has there been the usual mingling and vituperation which sometimes creeps into campaigns for high office. Lee goes about his campaign with the same zeal and earnestness with which he put over his agricultural campaign when president of the Texas chamber of commerce, and has followed the same business plan which enabled him to successfully guide the C. & N. E. through the panicky days during the war when practically no short line railroad in the country with the exception of the C. & N. E. fell upon evil days and into the hands of receivers.

Invitations for Mr. Lee to fill his appointments at different points throughout the district have been numerous. In fact he has had many calls that he could not possibly have accepted them all. In

AGITATION FOR NEW COUNTY IS AGAIN HEARD

CROSS PLAINS, July 9.—Some agitation is being brought to bear in this locality, seeking to have created a new county at the next session of the legislature, having the town of Cross Plains as near the center of the new county as possible.

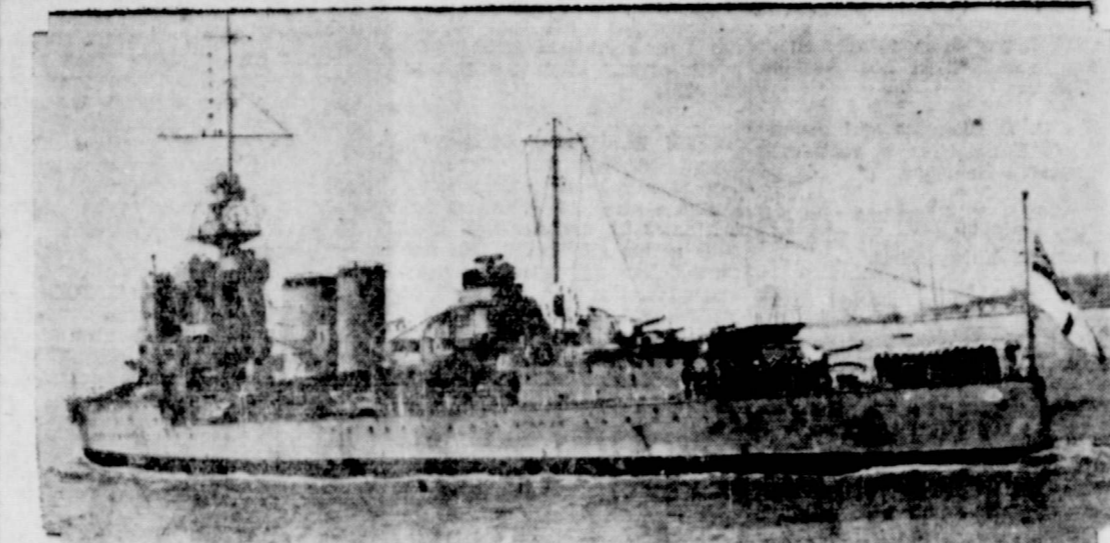

This could easily be done by taking a part of Callahan and adjoining counties, as was proposed by the citizenship of southwest Eastland county some years ago. The southwestern part of Eastland county is approximately forty miles from the county seat; the southeast corner of Callahan is approximately thirty miles from the county seat; the northwest corner of Brown county is approximately thirty-five miles from the county seat and the northeast corner of Coleman is approximately twenty-five miles from the county seat.

While the southwest part of Eastland and northeast part of Coleman have hard surface roads over which the citizenship can go to their county seats, northwest Brown and southeast Callahan have very poor roads under best of weather conditions, but such that it is almost impossible for the citizenship to get to their respective county seats during rainy weather.

It is considered that the new county would have more than sufficient substantial products and physical assets to maintain same, and considering that the Burgess, Cross Plains, Blake, Pioneer, Hillburn and Cross Cut oil pools are all situated in the proposed area, naturally, with the continued development of these pools, in a period of a very few years the new proposal would be one of the wealthiest counties in the state from a tax valuation standpoint.

The life of the candidate is not an easy one. If he is not busy repairing his fences he is occupied with trying to prevent some of the boys from jumping them. — Pocatello Tribune.

The "Dauntless" is the cruiser which brought the bodies of the U. S. Naval officers who lost their lives in the R-34 disaster back to this country.

would be a credit to any city in the country. The enterprise shows what women can accomplish when they unite and try. The building will be used by all the clubs for their meetings, will be a reading room and study hall, and will be available for those who desire to use it for receptions and entertainments of any kind to which it is adapted.

CITY PLANNING JOB.—Speaking at Lubbock, the secretary of the Kessler Plan Association of Dallas, said "City planning that originates at the city hall usually ends at the city hall." He meant that before city planning can be made effective a desire must exist on the part of the citizens for city beautification and improvement. No city is going to be more attractive than its people want it to be. An indifferent population results in an indifferent looking city. For this reason the press and all the other available agencies must work together constantly if our cities and especially our small places are to be made and kept attractive.

TOMATO PRICES.—Tomatoes were recently quoted at Texas shipping points at 1 1-2 to 2 cents a pound. The same day they were being sold by Austin retailers at three pounds for 25 cents and advertised as bargains at that price. There is something wrong with our marketing system when the consumer must pay four or five times what the producer receives. There are entirely too many middle-men taking a profit. Economists, if as able as they claim to be, should devise some way to avoid this great waste.

PEARSALL'S NEW SCHOOL.—In spending $100,000 for a modern high school building and $10,000 for remodeling its old school building, Pearsall is making a bid for that class of citizens who place a high valuation on educational facilities when they seek a new location. And Pearsall is among the growing cities of South Texas whose growth is attributed to its interest in making the living conditions of its people as inviting as possible.

RAIL SPUR IS BEING SOUGHT FOR CHEANEY. RANGER, July 9.—Residents of the Cheaney community have requested the W. F. & P. W. railroad to build an extension switch into that territory, according to Ben Whitehouse, vocational agriculturist. Whitehouse has drawn up a petition for those living in Cheaney, requesting the railroad to give the extension in order to save the money and labor of having to haul products here for transportation to outside sources. According to Whitehouse the peanut crop in that vicinity this year will be 60,000 bushels and the farmers believe the railroad should construct the switch in order to enable them to load their products instead of having to make the land haul.
