NOVELIZED BY ARLINE DE HAAS

Copyright 1928, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc. 'GLORIOUS BETSY,' starring Dolores Costello, is a Warner Bros. picture of this novel. Based on the play by Rida Johnson Young.

CHAPTER I

The sweet coolness of early dawn lay languorously over the blue shadowed valleys, spreading its fragrance through the fields of ripening corn, making gentle, little rustling sounds among the towering, wide-spreading leaves of sweet potato patches outlined like the squares of a crazy quilt on the ascending hills. The dry foliage drank the light dew thirstily and bent over to drop some of the glittering, scintillating drops on the daisy anemones, field flowers, their chalice closed in sleepy abandon, stirred lazily and then drooped back into stillness.

A red ripple of light ran through the gray-green of a streaked sky, presaging the heat of another early summer's day. A cock stretched his fat neck and gave forth his maternal announcement to an otherwise silent world. Unfrightened rabbits began to scurry through the awakening woods. Barnyard fowl clattered and pecked industriously. The clear, melodious notes of a robin were taken up by a chorus of bird voices. A hurrying stream re-back and the creaking of the blinds as the negro laboriously rolled up the green elats and pushed open the long windows. Gray light accepted into the room, vying with the yellow of the candle decorations on the wall. The deer and elk heads grinned more drolly than ever. Even the duelling pistols seemed to have lost some of their bravado, and the highly polished swords some of their sharpness.

"Wine—all around, Sam," one of the gentlemen at the table turned to the negro.

"Yes, suh! Right away, suh!" The aged servant hobbled back to the bar with alacrity. Without speaking, the man at the end of the table picked up a pack of cards and began to shuffle them. His lean, handsome face appeared haggard in the cruel morning light, and his eyelids dropped heavily. But he continued to arrange the cards and deal them out with a practiced hand. Two of his companions carefully examined the pile of gold before them, and then picked up their cards. Silently they all regarded the paste-

PRINTED PATTERNS FOR SUMMER GOWNS

PARIS, July 25.—"Print it" is the summer slogan for summer frocks judging from what one sees on chic promenades and boulevards. There are prints for morning, noon and night. Small discreet ones for the beginning of the day, pin-point dots and pin checks as well as hair-line stripes and microscopic flowers. Every possible fabric comes in printed patterns. There are printed woolsens, jerseys, linens and cotton for practical morning wear. Chiffons are also supremely chic, printed in the patterns which are fashionable in the saucy evenings, tiny lines and dots and the smallest of rosebuds and forget-me-not sprigged motifs. Pale salmon pink checked with brown makes a charming morning frock in one piece with a surplice closing and narrow sash at the waistline. The sleeves are straight and trimmed with two pleated ruffles as well as the hem.

Legions of summer silks and crepes come in prints for afternoon wear, with the figures somewhat larger and brighter with warm colors and varied patterns. One in flowered crepe de chine comes in brown, orange, black and white and

BLANTON SEES 275,000 VOTES FOR HIMSELF

TEMPLE July 25.—Predicting that he would receive not less than 275,000 votes in his race for United States senator, Congressman Thomas L. Blanton addressed a good-sized and attentive crowd Monday night. Considering the extreme heat and a series of counter attractions, the proposition of the audience excited favorable comment.

Blanton delivered, in substance, the speech he has been making elsewhere over the state, no important variations resulting. The congressman wound up a hard day in campaigning with his Temple speech which was his first for the day, all made in the eleventh district, home of Tom Connally, also a senatorial candidate. Blanton spoke Monday morning at 9 o'clock at Jonesboro and was greeted by a good crowd that evinced deep interest in his remarks. At Gateville he spoke before another large crowd in the district court room. At Killeen, in Bell county, a crowd assembled that comfortably filled the Texas theater and heard Blanton plead his cause. At 2 o'clock the candidate was addressing an audience in Bolton at the court house. It was late when he arrived in Temple but he appeared to show no fatigue from his campaigning. Analyzing his prospects, Blanton said that his own district would give him 50,000 votes, while the districts of Congressman Hudspeth, Jones and Williams would each give another 25,000. He argued that if he received but an average of 10,000 votes in each of the remaining districts his total will reach the expected 275,000 and place him leading the field. What is the best thing to take when one is run down? It is asked. The number of the car. — Regina Leader.

boards before them, and just as silently began to play. Once more the negro appeared in the doorway of the bar, this time his tray of glasses balanced steadily in one hand. He halted in front of the sideboard and set down his burden. Removing the stopper from one of the bottles, he poured out a deep red portion into each glass. The wine settled lethargically. Then he picked up his tray and moved towards the man at the table. At last the man at the end of the table pushed the last remnants of his gold towards the center and leaned back in his chair. "Get away from here, you black ape," George Preston growled warily to the servant. "My lack's had enough as it is!" He drained his glass and set it down again, his long fingers trailing lethargically over the wine-stained board. "Yes, suh! Massa Preston's yasn, suh!" the negro hunched away, grinning, his toothless gums in full display. Preston yawned sleepily and started at the board in front of him, bare, save for his scattered cards and his empty glasses. He leaned his head on his hand, resting his elbow on the table, and looked out over the garden. The sky was becoming more and more streaked with red. He looked up again and saw Sam still standing behind him. "I told you to get out of here!" He stared at the negro with steely eyes. "Quick!" He turned suddenly, seized his glass and flung it at the servant. Sam ducked with alacrity and went shuffling off, still grinning and mumbling to himself. The other man looked up at the sound of the shattered glass, but otherwise took no notice of the action. The crash, however, brought one person to attention—an early morning stroller, passing along the porch. The man stopped by the open window and peered in. His plain knee breeches of black stuff, his black coat, severely cut and rising to a black velvet collar high about his neck, his heavy black silk stock—all made him seem a part of the shadows that had not yet cleared away from the porch. His dark hair, unpowdered and severely dressed, only added a pallor to his olive tined face, and made him seem like a walking phantom lately emerged from the night. He leaned against the casement, watching the scene within. "Wait a minute," Preston was now turning once more to his companions, who were already beginning to take stock of their winnings and arrange the gold in neat piles. "I'm not through yet. Got one more stake to play," he mumbled. (To be continued.)

PONTIAC SIXES TO BE MADE IN REGINA, SASK.

PONTIAC, Mich., July 25.—Concrete evidence of the growing importance of the American automobile outside the domestic market was seen here by officials of the Oakland Motor Car company upon receipt of advice that construction is now under way for a new Canadian factory in which Pontiac Sixes will be assembled.

Located at Regina, Saskatchewan, where 38 acres of city property have been taken over by General Motors of Canada for the project, the new unit will meet the increasing demand for Pontiac cars in the western part of the dominion. Construction is being pushed so that production may get under way by December 1.

Thoroughly modern equipment and mass production methods comparable to the arrangement in the new Oakland and Pontiac factories will be incorporated in the new unit, it is stated. Daily production will reach 120 cars and employment is estimated at 200 workers, according to information received here.

The Regina factory will be more comprehensive than the average assembly plant. In addition to assembling cars it also will be used for body building, trimming and painting.

Construction of the plant at Regina is in accordance with the policy of General Motors to locate factories in the center of distribution areas and to employ practically all local labor so that payrolls and local purchases may be shared by the territories that provide volume of sales.

The new unit will be Regina's largest industrial development in point of output, floor space and number of workers employed. Architect's plans allow for expansion in the event still larger sales make further increase in volume necessary.

That the growing favor of the Pontiac Six should necessitate building the new unit was interpreted here as a tribute to the stability of the car in view of the severe driving conditions obtaining in Western Canada.

CONVENTION OF SHEEP RAISERS UNDER WAY AT SAN ANGELO

Development of Industry During Past Year Sketched; Annual Sale of Blooded Animals Being Held

SAN ANGELO, July 25.—Development of the sheep and goat industry during the last year were sketched in an opening address here Tuesday morning when A. Kincaid of Odessa opened the thirteenth session of the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers' association here.

He attributed the success of the industry to the loyalty of the sheepherders.

W. D. Holcomb of San Angelo welcomed the delegates, deploring that he was in an awkward position that it was difficult to accommodate them.

He said he hoped to build the city in the future. We can only be our best servants to you in the year stay at home a hard one," the mayor said.

H. W. Rieck of Roosevelt, Okla., said the ranchmen always enjoyed their visits to Austin, which he described as the last greatest cities of the southwest.

He said the record of the city and outward growth during the year, and praise our good preservation of your mayor's office," he said.

Other speakers for the session were Judge C. C. Bekker of El Paso and Roger Gillis of Del Rio. Gillis of Mesquite, member of the association, who was in for an address during the session, was delayed because of the muddy condition of roads. His place on the program was taken by Coke Stevenson, state representative and ranchman of Junction.

Stevenson complimented the association members upon the results that had been gained through their efforts, which have been admirably directed by President Kincaid, to whom he was personally indebted.

Delegates began to arrive in San Angelo as early as Sunday at 3 o'clock Monday, when a committee called at the courthouse. The number had arrived. Traffic on highways was stopped up about an amount of recent but delegates kept the region headquarters at the Navarro hotel busy throughout Tuesday.

The seventh annual sale of blooded animals have been held from throughout the state, opened at 1 p. m.

1,800 FEET OIL IS IN COLEMAN'S WILDCAT WELL

COLEMAN, July 25.—With a reported 1,800 feet of oil standing in the hole, the George Henshaw Oil Corporation's No. 1 W. Henshaw, 2,780 feet from the south line and 200 feet from the east line of section 25, G. H. & H. survey, block 1, less than one mile south of Valera in Western Coleman county, had apparently opened a new, dry and productive territory tapping the horizon at 2,612-30 feet.

The well is more than three miles from the nearest production belonging to both the Patton on the east and south, north of Valera, and probably four miles west of the Cunningham, Oil Company-M. G. Cheney et al Overall oil and gas wells.

No estimates on the production of the Henshaw discovery have been ventured, but production tests are being made before the operators will decide to drill deeper or complete the well at its present depth.

SHALLOW OIL WELL BROUGHT IN AT SIBLEY

RANGER, July 25.—Another shallow well has been brought in south of Ranger, in the Sibley pool, noted for big wells completed in the deeper levels. Goodwin and associates have a 20-barrel well at 1,500 feet on the Parker. This is their second shallow well in that area.

Two hundred feet of fluid is in the hole of the Shamberger No. 1 at 1,941 feet. This well is owned by Jordan et al.

Flowing 60 barrels a day although fishing for tools is in progress the Texas Pacific Coal and Oil Company's No. 2 Higginbotham in the Gordon pool, is producing at a depth of 1,380 feet from the deepest pay level in the country—in fact from what many consider is the Pickensberg line.

Mock-Texas has two new wells, both in the Sibley pool. The No. 4-B on the Casey is making 40 barrels at 2,175 feet and the No. 2 Williamson is making 40 barrels at 2,182 feet.

Still another well in the Sibley pool—the Operator's Oil and Gas Company's No. 2 Williamson—has 1,500 feet of fluid in the hole at a depth of 2,510 feet.

In the Rising Star shallow pool, in northern Brown county, the Knox Production company, has brought in three wells and the Hickman Oil company has a new one—all on the Hickman ranch. The depth is around 1,200 feet and the production ranges from 30 to 50 barrels a day for each well.

Spindrift progress is being made by the Prairie Oil & Gas company on the Earnest lease where a well is being drilled. The depth today is 1,780 feet. This well is south of Ranger in the famous Merriam district which produced millions of dollars worth of oil during the great boom but which has witnessed little new development for several years.

However, Merriam seems destined to a revival of activities, as in addition to the Prairie well on the Earnest, a well will be drilled on the Henson by Col. Robert D. Gordon. When the rig is completed spudding in should be started immediately. This well is 1,200 feet south of the Prairie well and the Henson farm, near the famous Brewer lease on the coast. The Henson lease consists of 300 acres and a producer was drilled on the farm during the boom oil men stage.
