SPORT OF KINGS.

Patrons of expensive sport have been interested in the yacht race across the Atlantic for the cups of the King and Queen of Spain. With due deference to Sir Thomas Lipton and his eternal quest for the America's cup, this is the greatest of sailing races. The course from New York to Santander, Spain, is more than 3,000 miles in what landlubbers call a bee line and navigators call a great circle. How much farther those windiammers sailed in tacking to the shifting Had we only sense enough to winds is problematic—say 1,000 to 2,000 miles more, know an invader when we saw one. Golden rod has been generally considered the American flower, though it seems to have no constitutional or congressional authority. The partisans of phlox are zealously urging its claims. There are obvious merits in both. The one is undeniably magnificent when you get a golden eyeful of it from a distance. The other better repays close inspection. There may be symbolic virtues in both of them, too, as their champions maintain. The dispute, however, may resolve itself into a sneezing contest. Most of the hay fever victims are opposed to the golden rod. It remains now for the loyal friends of that flower to show that it has been slandered, and International Illustrated News Staff phlox pollen is responsible for hay fever.

UNDELIVERED LETTER.

The practical joker in Springfield, Mass., who addressed a letter to "William Shakespeare, Stratford-on-Avon, Eng., Personal," has his letter back. It was returned with notations on the envelope showing three conscientious attempts to deliver it, and the final memorandum proving the good faith of the British postal system, "Deceased 23 April, 1616." That is about what American tourists who have visit ed Stratford would expect there, though even the letter-carriers and postal clerks might be supposed by this time to have learned something of the poet's actual status. #### WOMEN AVIATORS.

There really are women aviators. The other day a 15-passenger airplane arrived at Croydon field in England with Lady Heath at the controls. She had brought the ship from Amsterdam. She is an employed pilot of the Royal Dutch air lines, and is the first woman to be so hired. Her regular job will be second pilot on a big Fokker plane which will carry mail between Amsterdam and Batavia, Dutch East

THE CISCO DAILY NEWS Indies. This service is to be opened in the fall. In the mean time, Lady Heath is adding daily to her experience and training by flying multi-engined planes. There is probably no reason why women cannot make good aviators. Only, they will have to pass physical tests and go through preliminary training and do Advertising Manager hours of hard, steady practice, just as the men do, Merely being good looking and nervy won't make aviators of them.
