DOGMATIC STATEMENTS.

It is a question if one has a right to make a dogmatic, arbitrary statement about a matter that is properly debatable, which has more than one side.

You could be perfectly right in asserting with finality that it is wrong to steal; but would you be right in saying with equal positiveness that Mr. Witherup intended to steal your hat when he wore it away from the banquet? You might be right, you might not be right. Perhaps Mr. Witherup meant to steal your hat; perhaps he didn't—perhaps he didn't realize that he hadn't his own hat on his head. Of course, you would be out a hat either way. But the matter of Mr. Witherup's intentions is open to debate. You would be more nearly within your rights if you should say: "I think Mr. Witherup intended to steal my hat." You might be doing Mr. Witherup an injustice; but you would be telling the truth should you say you believe Mr. Witherup was trying to steal your hat if you really think so.

There are many assertions which if made at all should be accompanied by "I think" or "I believe" or "I fear," etc. One is frequently entirely outside the bounds of good taste when one makes a declaration without some qualifying phrase.

"Bill Sykes will go to hell when he dies." You don't know that. You can't prove that. There is no data available with which you can back up your pronouncement. But you could tack "I think" onto the statement and be all right.

You hear pulp orators dogmatically declaring what the Almighty thinks; and what He is going to do. Sometimes they have authority for their remarks; sometimes they have not. In the latter instance it would be more fitting to say "I think."

Positive declarations that can't be proved have cost folks money, lots of money. They have caused heads to get cracked, lots of heads, lots of cracks. They have caused met to get shot, lots of men, lots of shots.

"I think Slue-foot Billings is a scoundrel." You have a right to your opinion of Slue-foot; it may not be nice to voice it. Still, if he has lost your respect that is due either to the way he has behaved or to your understanding of the way he has behaved. You may not be at all to blame for the impression that has been made on your consciousness; still that doesn't give you the right to sew an unconditional, uncompromising label on Slue-foot Billings without knowing absolutely what you are doing.

"I think there is soap in that case," observes a merchant, looking at an unmarked box. He says "I think" unless he is sure. He doesn't say "There is soap in that box;" and sell it for soap without being sure; for it might contain sweet chocolate.

Now, if you catch Slue-foot Billings up in your room going through your dresser drawers, and he should jump on you, step in your face, knock your grandmother down stairs, and escape in your car, you would be amply supported in saying unqualifiedly, "Slue-foot Billings is a scoundrel," but if you merely caught Slue-foot at the steering wheel of your car about to drive off, you might be wrong in making such a declaration. The writer was with a friend the other day when he climbed into another man's automobile by mistake and realized his error only as he was stepping on the gas.

When one is dealing with fixed quantities, such as the number of teeth in one's head, the distance between New York and San Francisco, or the kind of grease it takes to make soap, one is justified in dogmatism. But when expounding on debatable matters, such as the number of automobiles it will take to saturate the United States, the intelligence of the little boy next door, and where prohibition will have its ten years from today, are you entitled to do more than say "I think?" Of course, you have a right to your opinion, whatever it is, but if an opinion is all it is, shouldn't it be indicated as such?

FIGHTER ON DISARMAMENT.

Lloyd George, who was fighting man enough to furnish the driving power for the allied nations during the World War, being neither theorist nor a sentimental pacifist, has this to say to his fellow-countrymen about armament.

"I would save on armaments. I know something about armaments, and I never want to know it again, believe me. Before the war we spent in this country on armaments $385,000,000 a year. This year we are spending $570,000,000 when there is no peril to be seen.

"That is an iniquity. Nations are not going to war any more, I hope, but it is a fair business risk that they will not go to war for a generation. There is a memory of destruction and the knowledge that the victor pays almost as dearly as the vanquished. Then why spend millions more a year now, when there is no risk, than you did when there was a risk? That is lunacy.

"If the government would cut down armaments it would show an example to the world, and then you would have peace."

Several of the powers are now engaged in this "lunacy," which some statesmen believe to be wisdom, in spite of experience.

More and more statesmen, however, and a big majority of people in every civilized country, agree with Lloyd George.

There will be an opportunity to act on this principle next winter when the parties to the Washington disarmament pact meet to consider what they will do about armament when the present arrangement expires after 10 years' duration. If the delegates are wise, and do what the people want them to, they will vote for a further decrease of naval armament, and try to get something started in the way of systematic reduction of air and land forces.

HOW TO CATCH TIGERS.

Anybody who craves to catch a tiger, or to fend one off, will find it absurdly easy if he adopts the device of Francis Birtles, an Australian explorer who has been adventuring through Indian jungles. "Of all places," he remarked cheerfully on reaching Calcutta, "I find your jungles the pleasantest; they are so varied, beautiful and safe." "Safe!" cried the Calcutta correspondent. "How about the tigers?" Oh, he didn't mind them at all. "Coming through Burma," he explained, "I kept the tigers off with fly paper. Every night I spread sheets around my camp, and was never disturbed. The fly paper is an absolute protection against tigers. The reason is psychological. The tiger is an animal of great conscious dignity. He prowls about and challenges man until he comes to the fly paper. Then all his dignity goes, and he slinks away. No dignified tiger would face a human being after squatting down upon a sticky fly paper." It doesn't seem impossible, either, when you think it over. Any man who, in nocturnal prowling around the house, has stepped onto a sheet of fly paper with his bare feet, will know just how the tiger feels about it.

GLORIOUS BETSY

NOVELIZED BY
ARLINE DE HAAS

Copyright 1928, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
GLORIOUS BETSY, starring Dolores Costello, is a Warner Bros. production of this novel. Based on the play by Rida Johnson Young.

SYNOPSIS
The bewitching Betsy Patterson has staying with her father at the Springs Inn when they are home to Baltimore to entertains Jerome Bonaparte, brother of the king. While at the Inn she is attracted to her French tutor, whom she knows as La Vert, whom she addresses deferentially as Captain Bonaparte. When La Vert declines to accompany Betsy Baltimore she is piqued and, wearing some gold pieces on the and, discharges him. Elaborate arrangements are under way at the resort house in honor of the engaged visitor.

"Oh, now, Auntie," Mary demurred.
"At least with so much expression," Miss Massenbird's lips were drawn into a thin line.
As they listened the music swelled louder and louder; the song of longing, a desire of love and sorrow filled the room.
"Betty! Betty Patterson!" Miss Massenbird called, loud enough to draw out the sentimental words.
"Yes, Auntie," came the answer.
The music stopped abruptly.
"Am I the only person concerned in this reception?" Miss Massen-bird demanded acidly. "It's about time you took a hand, for not a thing have you done this blessed hour past but stum on that spin-net, and I know you are not dressed." But her words were lost in the sound of the spinnet and the voice that once more took up the song as she hurried into the kitchen.

As she disappeared Betsy thrust her head around the doorway and, seeing the coast clear, entered.
"Oh, Betty! Betty!" Mary ran to her cousin and kissed her excitedly. "Just think of it! It's come at last—the very day we've been looking forward to for so long—the day we're to see the brother of Napoleon. Aren't you so thrilled?"
"I don't know," Betsy returned languidly, pushing the ruffle of her peignoir back from her throat.
"I wonder if everyone's like I am I mean that I long for a thing with all my heart, and when I get it, I can't see why I cared. And I long for something else, much more—and I get that—and it's just the same—not a bit what I want ed. And so on, and so on. That's life, I suppose," she sighed, and patted her cousin's hand.

"Why, you're crying!" Mary exclaimed, and put her arms about her cousin's neck. "I do believe it's for the lost La Vert."
"Mary!" Betsy turned haughtily.
"Haven't I forbidden you to speak of him to me? Tears in my eyes for that man! First would become them better?"
"Why, Betty," Mary drew back and stared at her companion. "I never knew you to feel so bitter towards anyone."
"Never had I such cause," Betsy returned angrily. "Think of it, Mary! Betsy Patterson, with the best blood of America at my feet, to be scouted and scorned by a mere nothing of a French tutor!
It is unbearable! I cannot stop for thinking of it. Not because of him—but the insult. Oh, it's maddening to think that I should, Listen, Mary, I haven't told anyone this before, but I asked him, actually asked him, to sit in the coach with me instead of riding."
"Not your French tutor!" Mary gasped.

"Yes!" And you saw how he refused my invitation—unmoved.
Oh, a husband could not have declined with more unconcerned indifference."
"But you returned like a wife, Betty," Mary tried to comfort her. "Dismissed him from your service and asked him never to dare show his face in Baltimore."
"I know I told him that, but I didn't think the fool would obey me," Betsy wrinkled her nose in disdain.
"How do you know he has?"
Mary asked softly. "How do you know he isn't in Baltimore this very minute?"
"Mary! What do you mean?"
Betsy demanded, shaking her cousin by the shoulders.
"Oh, nothing, only—" she smiled,
"only Mr. Preston says he's with Captain Bonaparte."
"With Captain Bonaparte!" Betsy exclaimed. "In what capacity?
Will he be here? Is he in love?"
"Monsieur La Vert?"
"No, his master!" Betsy bit her lip thoughtfully. Then she laughed.
"That's what I'll do. I'll make Captain Bonaparte fall in love with me.
I'll do it with my pretty dress-with nonsense and flattery. That's how I'll capture the man, she answered the questioning look in Mary's eyes. "Why, you poor, little innocent, that's how I'll marry the master to get revenge on the man!
Then Monsieur La Vert will be at my command—to come here, and go there—to do this and take that!
Don't you see? It's all so simple.
O, I'll make him regret the day he flouted Betty Patterson!"

"Yes, but—" Mary stammered.
"Captain Bonaparte is engaged to marry the Princess of Wurtemberg. Won't that complicate matters a little?"
"A court affair," Betty sniffed contemptuously. "To please the great Napoleon I'd wager Captain Bonaparte has never so much as glance his eyes on her. Besides, a heart once affronted considers nothing, but flies to its revenge, and this is mine. When all the lamps are lighted it'll be quite a fairyland, and he,
the Fairy Prince, will come walking through the archway there."

Little Virginia Lu Ford Entertains on Birthdays

Virginia Lu Ford, daughter of Mrs. O. W. Ford, 704 West Ninth street, who was one year old Saturday, entertained a number of her little friends with a party at her home. The children enjoyed toys of various kinds. Each guest was served a Dixie cup and cake from a small table which was beautifully decorated in pink and white. In the center of the table was a small cake bearing a pink candle. At each place card a favor awaited the guest. Sandwiches and iced tea were served to the mothers by Mrs.
Ford and Mrs. Dillard Elliott. Atter the presents were presented to little Miss Ford the children were taken to the lawn where pictures were made. Those attending the party were: Billy Trent, Stuebgenfeld of Carbon, Carlotta Elliott of Nimrod, Cheryl Sue Hooker, Joe Ann Qualis, Dudley Bryant Longacre and Billy Jean Andrew of Cisco.

LIVED SIX DAYS WITH HEART STITCHED, DIES

SHREVEPORT, La., Aug. 14.— After living for six days with eight stitches in his heart, a negro who was stabbed last Monday died in a local hospital. It was thought he would recover but pneumonia set in and proved fatal. The operation, which was considered a delicate one, was performed by Dr. E. L. Sanderson, superintendent of the hospital where the negro was taken.
The wound was three-quarters of an inch long and penetrated the heart cavity.
Stains on window panes and mirrors can be removed with spirits of camphor sprinkled on a piece of flannel.

Oklahoma Lady Gives Interesting Account of Long Use of Black-Draught in Her Home.

Sageyah, Okla.—"I have taken Black-Draught ever since I was a child, and can recommend it as a splendid medicine for family use," says Mrs. Cora Maberry, of this place. "My mother used it, in bringing up her family, and after I had a home of my own, I continued to use it, as I thought it was especially good to give the children."
"My children did not mind taking Black-Draught, and so when they got upset with stomach spells, or were constipated, I gave them Black-Draught tea."
"If I found that they were taking cold, I was quick to start giving them Black-Draught, as it helped them to throw off the impurities which caused the trouble."
"My children are all grown now and have homes of their own, but I still keep Black-Draught in the house and use it myself when I wake up in the morning feeling dull and "headache", and have a bad taste in my mouth."
"Black-Draught is a simple remedy for constipation, and I prefer it to others because it is purely vegetable. I always feel better after I have taken a course of it."
In use over 87 years. NC-191

Douglas Fairbanks

America's Motion Picture Favorite, as he will appear in his forthcoming production "The Iron Mask" says—
"I get more kick from the Lucky Strike flavor than from any other cigarette. They are easier on my throat and wind. That's why I smoke nothing but Luckies. Toasting really means a lot to me. My own experience has proven that toasting not only takes out the bad things but doubles the flavor."

SOARING STEAK COST PLEASING TO STOCKMEN

EL PASO, Aug. 14.—Best steak prices in eastern cities are soaring, causing increased optimism among Texas cattlemen who have been rejecting over favorable conditions of the past year.

According to reports received here, per-pound steaks are expected to reach $1 a pound in Indianapolis. M. L. Bell, cattle inspector for the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers' association, said beefsteaks may again reach war prices in the east.

Cattlemen now receive from $15 to $45 for a cow and calf which brought only $50 to $60 a year ago. Steers are bringing from $45 to $55.

As a result of these substantially higher prices, cattlemen are recuperating from the financial losses they suffered in 1929 when the Texas cattle industry was demoralized by postwar depression and drought.

Although he does not expect beef prices to go much higher, J. C. Peyton, president of the Peyton Packing Co. here, spoke in defense of the higher prices.

"Cattlemen have gone through one of the hardest periods since the war, and if they can get good prices for their cattle now, they're entitled to them," he said.

Range cattle will be ready for market within a short time, and local stockmen expect this to reduce prices slightly.

After his experience with Dr. Cook, Copenhagen naturally was a bit careful about hanging wreaths on General Noble—Indianapolis Star.

HAROLD LLOYD STRESSES NEED OF EDITING OF FILMS

"The face on the cutting room floor" is an old few actors like to chant. But to Harold Lloyd, who came to the Palace for three days starting Thursday in his latest production, "Speedy," released by Paramount, it means better pictures. There is nothing more important in the producing of a motion picture than careful pruning," according to the famous comedian of the horned rim. One thing Lloyd's pictures have always been noted for within the industry is the meticulous manner in which they have been cut and edited. Lloyd bares out every foot of unnecessary film, everything without vital connection with his story or its connection ends on the cutting room floor.

In "Speedy," the bespectacled comedian's latest opus, there is a scene from start to finish. There is not a moment that lags. Even the portions of the story devoted to the building of his story, which are invariably slow scenes, maintain interest at comic heat.

Lloyd upset his usual preparation in the preliminary exhibition of "Speedy." Instead of holding five or six previews, he has been his custom for years, he found it necessary to stage only three before he was convinced that his picture was ready for public consumption and as nearly perfect as it was possible for him to make it.

"Speedy" is one of Lloyd's most enjoyable works, diverting, funny, hilarious and novel. And nothing more could be asked of any comedian.

DOG WILL SURVIVE BATTLE WITH DEN OF RATTLESNAKES

ASPERMONT, Aug. 14.—A wolf dog that displayed more courage than common sense in leading a family of rattlesnakes in their den, was administered anti-venom serum here Monday and will recover, attending physicians said. The dog, one of four belonging to Bill Whar-ton, invaded the snakes' den and fought the reptiles for more than an hour before aid arrived. The snakes had much the better of the argument. One dog was dead and another unconscious when the hunters arrived.

Women Weak, Tired, Run-down and Nervous.

or who suffer ovarian pains, pains in the lower part of the stomach, bearing down pains, female weakness, headaches, backache, melancholia, despondency, nervous derangements, flushes of heat, floating and indefinite pains, whites, painful or irregular periods, should write to Mrs. Ellen Lovell, 7701 Miss, Kansas City, Mo.

She will entirely FREE and without charge to the inquirer advice of a convenient home method whereby she and other women say they have successfully relieved similar troubles.

The most common expression of these thoughtful women is "I feel like a new woman." And others "I don't have any pains what-so-ever." "I can hardly believe myself that your Wonderful Method has done so much good for me in such a short time." Write today. This advice is entirely free to you. She has nothing to sell.
